HAVE FAITH AND TRUST.

BY FRANCIS S. SMITH

Have faith and trust, ye wavering,
God's ways we may not see,
What may seem chaos in our eyes,
To Him is harmony;
And when deep anguish fills our hearts,
And tears well from our eyes,
The ill that causes them may be
A blessing in disguise.

The noisome, poisonous weed which grows
Without a single charm,
May hold in its obnoxious stem
A medicinal balm;
And tempests that o'erwhelm us
And fill us with dismay,
May render pure the fetid air
And drive disease away.

Then faint not when reverses come,
Have faith and hope, and trust
That all is order'd for the best—
That God is kind and just.
Dwell not on evils when they come,
Nor mourn o'er evils past,
But nurse the precious hope that God
Will comfort you at last. —[N. Y. Weekly.

REMINISCENCES OF TITIENS.

Though Titiens came to London in 1858 and was successful, she did not attain her full popularity until some years after. Without any personal charms, but a noble, imposing physique, more majestic than charming, she was successfully given all the tragic roles of the lyric repertoire, and in every one proved herself the only successor of Grisi. Even the phenomenal success of Patti at the rival opera house could never combat the prestige of Titiens. Titiens speedily became a favorite in English society. Her startling good qualities made her so. The queen took her under her special protection, and one night, at a concert, when Victoria was present, she rose, and, walking to the platform, presented Titiens with a single flower from her bosom. Such a mark of favor and esteem is not understandable here, but in England it was a passport to the highest society favor. This, backed by her own artistic genius, her simplicity of life, and her unscathed reputation, gave her immense prestige. It was in that famous season of 1863 that I first made her artistic acquaintance. It was in the amphitheatre of Her Majesty's Opera House where I would go whenever I could succeed in getting half a crown to do it with. Many weary hours have I spent at the theatre, crushed up against the door by the pressing crowd behind, so as to rush up at the appointed time and secure a seat on the first row. When there, it was almost like seeing Titiens in a dream, for the people on the stage seemed like pigmies at that dizzy height. But the glorious tones swelled up through the vast auditorium as they never struck me when in after-years I was enabled to go down in the stalls. Titiens and Giulini! What a couple! I never expect to hear opera interpreted again as I then heard it. "Lucretia Borgia," "Leonora," in both "Trovatore" and "Favorita," "Norma," indeed the then familiar repertoire of tragic parts was given by her with tremendous effect, while the ensemble of every opera was stupendous.

I shall never forget one particular night of "Don Giovanni," with "Titiens as "Donna Anna," Giuglini as "Octavio," Ruri Formes as the "Leporello," and Madame Rudersdorff (now teaching music here) as the "Elvira." Singularly enough I cannot recall who the titular part was sung by. I imagine it was Graziier. It was a magnificent night.

In the casual contact I came in with Titiens, I found her as modest as she was truly great. She differed with artists in general in this, that she spoke very seldom of herself.

During her visit to America she had pleasant rooms in the Everett House, facing on the Square, and there she entertained a few people. She liked quiet, and would pass hours of an evening by the fireside, knitting and talking pleasantly of art and artists. Her English was most perfect and musical. Her heart was as soft to all misery as that of a child.

I recollect one afternoon a woman coming in, who had bored Titiens day after day to listen to her singing. The great artist received the amateur almost affectionately, made her drink a glass of wine, and then sat down to her piano herself and accompanied her. The result was most painful, as the visitor had one of the most unmusical voices I have ever heard.

When over, Titiens complimented her aloud, but then drew her aside and questioned her, and it seemed the woman was very poor, and wanted to earn a living.

Titiens told her it was of no use her spending time, doing that which she could never do and then put a $50 bill in hand. Those scenes were of almost daily occurrence, her whole life was, but the unalterable good humor and kindness of the great artist never varied.

Titiens, spite of the large amount of money she has earned, died rich. She lived in comfortable use at St. John's Wood. A large parlor her earnings went to the support of Mapleson in his musical enterprises. Her death is a heavy blow to his success. The old friendship subsisted to the last, and she never forgot the old friend, who had first shined her in London. Her son to her was everything. Now she is dead, it may truly be said a better woman and greater artist never lived.

QUIPS AND CRANKS.

Wanken Blue wears such red necktie that his audiences ask it his through lots of smoked glass.

Is there anything the matter with the cable? It is a very long time since we heard from it.

It is said that horse recently chased two ladies on Broadway, hence they had no polo-nolgie.

It is admitted on all sides that business is much better now than it was at this period last year, and yet there is less talk seen on our principal streets than was exhibited a year ago. Fashion is to blame for this.

"What" asked a fly, timidly, of an eminent philosopher, "is the meaning of the phrase, 'modus operandi?'" And the great linguist, whose mind was untainted with the literature of ancient Greece and Rome, replied: "It is Latin for 'How the cussing works.

"Good gracious, Set!" said Mrs. Spicer, as the Sunday-school scholars sang "all plaided and plumed in tartan are" "what are those men parading with bare legs?" "Can't say unless they are Americans, and then they may," said Spicer, as he lifted his hat to the big chief.

We are now able to wer our correspondent "Scholar." Striped hose are still fashionable. The rain that began Tday settled all doubts in our mind regarding thatter, and we can now answer the question freely.

Sitting Bull said the pr day: "The Americans are liars and thieves." Oh, if General Howard should happen to hear of that, just! Oh, blood, blood, blood. Don't him, anybody, for goodness sake. He'll ril over South America looking for Sitting Bull, a revolver.

"That Husband of Minne been set to music. But that's nothing. Mrs. Bossom says that husband of hers has often been set to pushing the baby coach, and saring potatoes, and such jobs. She would set him to music, too, she says, but they have neither piano nor accordeon in the house.

When you have just fifteen minutes in which to eat your breakfast and catch the train, how it does soften the tender heart of man toward the gentler sex to see the waiter-girl, who went off to get his order, lean up against the side-board and go to sleep, and dream of home, and Heaven, and peace, until the whistle blows.

"There is reason in all things," but it tries a man's mental strength and faith most desperately to comprehend the hired girl's reason for blacking the stove with her shoe-brush, when he finds himself at church with a pair of boots that look like a twin bulletin of "Silver Gray Rising Sun Stove Polish."

"If ye don't let me put that coal in, it'll get all the black washed off it," said a smart little boy to Duncan Richardson. Then the little boy was smarter behind than he was before, while previously he had been smarter before than he was behind.

A monkey in the zoological gardens parts his hair in the middle.—Ex. Some one should sit down gently, lazily on that Darwinian species pretty soon he may be clamoring for a collar eighteen inches in depth, and a dollar-store diamond breast-pin in his cravat, and a situation as a New York dry goods drummer.

Notices for waits are becoming quite fashionable nowadays. The ladies are quite handy with this kind of work, and the perforated card-board and worsted coats but little. The fathers of families grumble however, when the girl strikes him for a four-dollar frame to bound a two-shilling motto with "God Bless Our Home," or "Economy is Wealth."

A friend to the human race invented a patent boot-jack which shuts up like a vice when it strikes anything, and hence is calculated to hold on to a cat every time until the mocking laughter with which the feline is wont to greet the touch of a boot-jack is hushed in death. Unfortunately, however, the inventor, in a moment of forgetfulness, used the boot-jack to pull off a new tight boot, and when the battle was over, the boot-jack was a wreck, and the inventor looked as though a mad dog had hunted him around the block by the hour.

MUSICAL AND DRAMATIC NOTES.

Rignold.—"Henry V." is making his way towards Brooklyn again, and the monarch may be certain of a hearty welcome.

Olympic.—The performance for the present week is highly worthy of the discussion of the amusement seeking public.

Daly.—"Life," Augustin Daly's great New York success, will be given at Wood's Theatre by the Fifth Avenue Company next week.

Success.—Messrs. Sothern and Williamson can claim to be favored with the most astonishing and flattering success.

Aquarium.—The concerts at the New York Aquarium, combined with the marine wonders, are the thing to do just now in Gotham.

Niblo.—Another success is to be scored for the popular playhouse. "The Law of the Land" follows in the wake of its illustrious predecessors.

Barnett.—Aunt Polly Bassett's "Singing Show?" will prove the attraction for one week at the Brooklyn Athenæum, beginning October 29th.

Circus.—Gilmore's Garden will be devoted to Howe's London Circus, on and after the 22d inst. Report speaks in the highest terms of its attractions.

Grover.—The author of "Our Boarding House" has at last succeeded in giving light to his meek drama of "Lupe." The piece was finely put upon the stage of the Chestnut Street Theatre in Philadelphia, but failed to be the favorite that his first production has proved.

Hess.—The unexpected appearance of the Hess Opera Troupe at the Fifth Avenue Theatre, is a delightful surprise. The first work to be presented will be Thomas's "Summer Night's Dream."

Aimee.—"La Marjolaine" has proved one of the grand successes of the season. The "concone" song promises to be the rage in social circles this Winter.

Woods.—The appearance of Augustin Daly's Fifth Avenue Company, this week, in the "Princess Royal," and "Divorce," should prove an attraction sufficient to fill the theatre at every entertainment.

Wallack.—"My Awful Dad" at the New Park Theatre is one of the sensations of the week. All who have failed hitherto to enjoy this remarkable performance should not fail to do so ere it be too late.

Thomas.—The world-famed Thomas Orchestra, assisted by the Swedish Ladies Vocal Quartette, are to favor New York with three grand popular concerts during the coming week. Their advent in Brooklyn is looked forward to with impatience.

Gilmore.—The benefit to this indefatigable leader on Thursday evening last was deservedly the occasion of a rare compliment to one who has contributed so largely to the entertainment of the public.

Salcedo.—One of the features at the New Park Theatre this week will be the appearance of Signor Salcedo, the contortionist. This celebrated eccentric virtuoso of Gustave's Band will perform one of his solos.

Abbott.—The gifted prima donna, Miss Emma Abbott, appears at the Academy of Music this evening in a programme of exceptional interest, assisted by a galaxy of talent. This is an opportunity which should not be missed.

Bouligny.—New Orleans has produced a new composer in Signor. The lady is described as being possessed of the most estimable qualities. Her appearance in New York will occur at no distant date.

Bryant.—One of the most enjoyable entertainments in New York, is that of the Bryant Minstrels, at their pretty theatre in Broadway. The programme promises some of the leading artists of the day.

Jefferson.—"Rip Van Winkle" has at last called for a benefit. In his company is Mr. B. L. Farjeon, his son-in-law, the celebrated novelist. Mr. Jefferson begins an engagement at Booth's Theatre, under the management of Augustin Daly, on the 27th inst.

Barnum.—"Queen Mary, and "Lucrezia Borgia" will be given at the New Park Theatre during the coming week, by the accomplished actress Miss Agnes Dargan. This celebrated lady's appearance will be one of the events of the present dramatic season.

The fashion journal says, "feathers are still the style for hats and bonnets." Bells, too. We slept on a hacked bed the other night that must have as much as thirty or forty feathers scattered around on a car load of skin. But this is carrying fashion devotion to the extreme of fashion.

At ten o'clock yesterday forenoon a man, who looked as if he would care to do right if he had a n chance, entered an oyster store on Michigan avenue, and courteously inquired:

'Do you have oysters here on the one-half shell?'

'Yes, sir, we do,' was the answer.

'Which half of the shell is the oyster on?' was the next inquiry.

The oyster man regarded the stranger keenly, and after a minute replied that they were on the left half of the shell.

'Ah—the—too bad,' muttered the man.

'I wanted them on the right half. Good day, sir. I can't go left-handed oysters nohow.'

The Daily Stage.

ESTABLISHED 1874.

DEVOTED TO THE DRAMA, MUSIC AND ART.

PUBLICATION OFFICE,
254 State Street, near Boerum, Brooklyn.

SPECIAL NOTICE.

Dramatic and other associations giving entertainments will be furnished with the DAILY STAGE more reasonably than ordinary programmes.

NEW PARK THEATRE.

Undoubtedly one of the most noticeable weeks of the present dramatic season in Brooklyn will be the current one at the New Park Theatre. It is an established fact that any play, bearing upon it the stamp of New York metropolitan success, will be a favorite elsewhere, because a production which has withstood the fire of criticism and the chances of public favor in Gotham, is prepared to pass muster in any city of the Union.

In Mr. Lester Wallack's appearance, then, in his inimitable role of Adonis Evergreen, "My Awful Dad," the management of the New Park Theatre has the good fortune to be able to present a piece which has been received with acclamation, and has enjoyed a protracted run.

Of Mr. Wallack's many master-pieces, we think that none is more amusing and artistic, at the same offering a more extensive field for the play of his peculiar ability, than that of the Adonis Evergreen.

It is a performance to be seen, studied and enjoyed.

The support is judiciously selected from the members of the stock company, who fulfil their duties most acceptably.

A most worthy successor to so deservedly celebrated an actor as Mr. Lester Wallack, Miss Augusta Dargon begins an engagement at this theatre for one week, October 31st.

From her extensive repertoire the lady selects "Queen Mary" and Lucretia Borgia" for her appearances. The former drama will be presented during the first half of the week with the Wednesday matinee, and the latter for the remainder of her stay.

No incident of the bloody Tudor's life can be devoid of interest, while in the dark Borgia, we have the picture drawn by the masterly pen of Victor Hugo.

Here, then, are two weeks of rare enjoyment at the New Park Theatre.

WOOD'S THEATRE.

The "Princess Royal," and "Divorce" are two of the acknowledged successes of Augustin Daly, and when we find them performed by the original Fifth Avenue Company, as they are this week at Wood's Theatre, we may highly recommend the treat.

There is a peculiar charm about the "Princess Royal" that never fails to win the unqualified approbation and applause of the public, while "Divorce" is a society drama of acknowledged power and interest.

For the first half of the week the "Princess Royal" will be given, the remainder being devoted to "Divorce."

We are pleased to learn that for the ensuing week the same accomplished company will remain at Wood's Theatre in order to present Mr. Daly's great drama, entitled "Life." This is a production replete with emotion and incident which apply to the masses, to high and low, to all who are dwellers in and know by experience the throbbing pulse of city life.

ACADEMY OF MUSIC.

This house opens its doors this evening to a concert which will interest the large number of music lovers in Brooklyn. Miss Emma Abbot, the celebrated prima donna, will render two grand operatings, and will be assisted by Mme Carreno, and Messrs. Arbuckle, Robyn, Stanley and Ferranti. Such an array of first-class talent should attract a large audience, especially as the programme includes such eminent names as, Schuberth, Wallace, Bellini, Gounod, Chopin, Liszt and others. The occasion will be one of rare interest and enjoyment.

OLYMPIC THEATRE.

Week after week counts itself away, and yet we have this cozy play-house staunch and firm, full of vigor and ever affording a varied show of entertainment. For this week several of the former favorites are retained, noticeably Prof. Sylvan's Magic Mirror, while a host of novel attractions are offered.

All such as choose to enjoy an evening of solid fun and merriment, will do well to give the Olympic a call. There is a modest, inoffensive flavor of wickedness about the place that is quite sui generis.

TRUTH IN SONG.

Killeen Allanna! When he slipped on a banana skin, fell and sprained his ankle, he cried in his impotent wrath, "A lean Bunann!"

It was an antiquated sylvster who croaked, "I Cannot Sing the Old Songs." Truth! Why? Because her voice was cracked and had ascended.

The author of "Don't be Angry with me Darling" seemed this when his wife hexed his cart with the refrigerator.

Of course the author of "There's a Letter in the Candle," merely meant to divert his wife and mother-in-law's attention while he stole out to take a milk punch.

The man who wrote "Turn Backward, O Time," wasn't able to take up a note that fell due the next day.

The fellow who reeled off "Shall we Then Meet as Strangers," would have been delighted to have done so, but his tailor wouldn't have it.

The author of "Kiss Me, Darling, Once Again," had been doing it steadily for four hours, and she was beginning to weaken.

The warbler who wanted to know "Where, Oh Where, are the Hebrew Children?" is invited to drop a line to Judge Hilton.

The author of "Carry Me Back to Ole Virginny," meant to the same old coal in the Eighth Precinct Station.

The man who wrote "Love's Young Dream," couldn't possibly have meant what he said, for he married an old woman of seventy, with $150 in the bank.

He who wrote "Bonnie Blue Eyes," wasn't referring to his wife's, for he had blackened them the night before.

The author of "Come Back to Me, Maggie," was terribly in earnest, for she had taken his bankbook, and all the furniture she could carry with ease.

It was a woman who wrote "Theodore, Theodore, Why so sad." He didn't tell her that he had just been driven out of his boarding-house, with obloquy and scorn, and that a ham sandwich then was a gorgeous impossibility.

A citizen, who should be preparing himself for the unknown life beyond the grave instead of lying up to such tricks, removed the setting from his big gold ring the other day, leaving a marked and decided vacancy. He got on a street, holds his hand so that the ring must be seen, and pretty soon a man bends forward and remarks:

"Excuse me, sir, but you have lost the set from your ring."

"So I have," replies the owner as he looks around the floor.

Every passenger began to peer around, and the man who made the discovery finally asks:

"Was it a valuable set?"

"It was a thousand dollar diamond," is the calm reply.

There is another movement on the part of passengers. Some look along the seat, some under it, and some make a dive for pearl buttons and other small objects.

"When did you miss it?" asks the first man as the search weakens a little.

"A year and a half ago, when I was attending camp-meeting in Illinois!" is the sad reply.

Then every passenger straightens up, every eye looks into vacancy, and not the faintest smile can be seen on any face. A person boarding the car just then would wonder what great man in the city had just died, and if the passengers were on their way to take a sad farewell look at his remains.

A Large Dry Goods House.

The establishment of Messrs. Wechsler, Abraham & Co., 297 and 299 Fulton and Washington streets, is the largest and most complete on Long Island. These gentlemen do an extensive wholesale business at 43 and 45 Worth street, New York, and as they import directly, and manufacture made-up goods, are in a position to sell lower than any house in either city.

The advantage they possess, their customers reap; the two or three intermediate profits smaller houses pay are thus saved to purchasers at their house.

It being their intention to build up a large Dry Goods House in Brooklyn, we know that they are determined to spare no sacrifice to attain that end, and in order to encourage and foster their growth, they give their patrons advantages, we believe no other retail establishment can offer. To enumerate:

They sell their goods at the smallest possible margin.

They exchange all unsatisfactory purchases, or "return the money if desired;" and the facilities obtained through their New York Wholesale House enable them to sell cheaper than any concern in Brooklyn or New York.

We feel assured that the ladies of Brooklyn and Long Island, take pride in the establishment of W. A. & Co., and we know that all this house asks for is the assistance and support their merits most assuredly deserve.

Look Nice for Two Dollars.

Mrs. Cary will mail to any lady a receipt for making a preparation that will beautify her complexion in sixty days, for $2. The expense, after you have the receipt, is very little. Who would not look nicely when it can be done for such a small sum?

A Reduction in Billiards.

Mackenzie has reduced the price of playing Billiards 50 per cent. at his elegant Room over the Post Office, Washington street.

The Ladies Don't Object

Ladies as a general thing don't object to smell of a good cigar. The cigars sold at P.T. Vanderbilt's Opera Cigar Store, cor. of Fulton and Court streets are known to be good by most every smoker in the city. N. B.—The store has no branch store.

Just the Thing.

C. H. Rivers, the unrivalled instructor of dancing has opened his elegant Academy, 175 State st., for the season. This is good news and every one says it is just the thing.

HAS JUST COMPLETED

A ROMANTIC LOVE STORY,

ENTITLED

HAD BEEN COMMENCED IN THE

New York Weekly.

The characters in this fascinating and exceedingly well-told romance are as boldly and artistically delineated as Terry Dennison, Paulina Leslie, Lawrence Longworth, Katherine Dangerfield, and Duke Mason—all distinctive creations of the same gifted pen. Their especial charm is that they speak and act as human beings, and are therefore totally unlike the mouthing and stately effigies so often seen in the pages of fiction, and nowhere else. Mrs. Fleming's characters are so truthfully portrayed, their peculiarities so deftly and charmingly sketched, that they become impressed upon the reader's mind, and are gratefully remembered as familiar acquaintances, in whose society we have passed many pleasant hours.

"SHADDECK LIGHT"

Had been commenced last week in

OF THE

New York Weekly.

LADIES' FASHIONS.

[WRITTEN FOR THE BROOKLYN DAILY STAGE.]

The Fall openings at the leading furnishing houses brought to light some very elegant dresses and some plain yet stylish ones that will be more useful to practical people. Among the latter were costumes of soft twilled woolen goods in seal brown, olive green, bottle green and plum shades made up without any trimming other than rows of machine stitching and a single side-plaited flounce. The overdress for these was a yoke polonaise with plaited front and back. The yoke is straight and square, and the plaits disappear in the skirt below the waist, and the belt is confined to the plaits, leaving the tapering sides unbroken by a belt-line. Six or ten rows of parallel stitching on a broad facing, or hem finish the edge very neatly. The sleeves are set nearly tight-fitting that the outer seam is left open at the wrist, and buttoned by three or four buttons and holes. The plaited flounce has large side plaits, is hemmed on either side, and is held in place by three or five rows of stitching. This dress is suitable for travelling, morning walk, etc.

The more elegant costumes are combination suits of woolen stuffs, which resemble rag carpet, with silk, or else brocaded silks and stamped velvet, with plain velvet or gros grain. The overskirt, lately forsaken for the polonaise, is likely to regain the ground it has lost, since the latest importations shows more basques with trimmed skirts. The over-skirt is composed of a sort of large apron, fastened back by two panels, with a full back breadth of the same material falling beneath it and forming the train of the dress. The waist is worn long, and filled with whalebones; this is a continuation of the entrance basque.

The French gray corduroy dresses are made up in plain designs, with little drapery, and are richly trimmed. A simple, single flounce is the most stylish finish for the bottom of lower skirts, as the long over-dress must not have its outline interfered with by an elaborate trimming beneath it. The lower skirts of most dresses are of silk, and as they are nearly concealed by the over-dress, very inexpensive silks are used when the dress is entirely of silk.

Very small black and white check silks are again in fashion for autumn toilettes, they are trimmed with black and white lace.

The fringed faille takes the first rank as a trimming for wrappings to be worn during November.

Mandarin yellow is much used for brightening up black toilettes. It is not sewed to the dress permanently, but a small scarf of ravelled silk or satin ribbon is made for the throat, also a chatelaine bow for the left side at the waist, and long looped bows are put on the sides of the skirt for drapery. Ten-roses and a mandarin feather are then put in the black satin capote, and a long looped yellow bow trims the black parasol.

New linen collars in English shape with cuffs to match have a bunch of lengthwise tucks for their only ornament. The set costs about 85 cents. Negligee scarfs of knitted wool for wearing over the head or shoulders, or ornamented with cloth figures cut in Egyptian or other Eastern designs, are shown in scarlet, tilleul, sky blue, and navy blue, pink and white, and white with black. Low square-necked princesse dresses are the stylish designs for full-dress toilettes. Satins and velvet brocades for the over dress, with plain gros grain lower dresses, are the first choice in materials. The favorite moss green is seen in both dark and delicate tints for such dresses, and the toilette is quite as often in striking contrast as in shades of one color. The beaded trimmings are also used for evening dresses, and expensive hand passementeries will show every color used in the toilette. Distinguished looking toilettes have the quaint "old gold" color combined with olive-color. Still others of moss green have pipings and facings of sky blue, pink, and cream-color. One new fancy in floral trimmings is a deep pepium point made entirely of pink crushed roses, to be placed on each side of a white brocaded silk dress.

A Great Story in a Great Paper.

Mrs. Mary Agnes Fleming one of the most brilliant of American authors, in last week's issue of the "New York Weekly," began what is undoubtedly one of her best stories. This is the opinion of those who have been favored with the opportunity of perusing the manuscript. It is a love romance, and is entitled "Shaddeck Light." As Mrs. Flemming bears the reputation of having never written a dull story, every fresh work from her entrancing pen is eagerly perused by tens of thousands of new readers, as well as by all her old admirers. There was a brisk demand for the "New York Weekly" last week, for which entertaining paper Mrs. Fleming writes exclusively.

A Musical Resort.

Messrs. Boylan and Spiers have made a grand success of the Philharmonic Musical Resort, 456 Fulton street. Their place is crowded nightly by gentlemen who love to hear good singing. They deserve the success they have obtained, as they allow no comic or vulgar songs to be sung in their establishment.

WISHES TO CALL ATTENTION
to an entirely new article introduced by him, and only to be obtained at his warerooms. It has the emphatic moresement of the best medical authority as an article conducive to health and restorative in long troubles. It is a mixture, more elastic than the best hair, and from the nature of the material of which it is constructed, it spreads a delightful and refreshing perfume equalled by few of the most delicate and sensitive persons. It costs two-third less than hair, and will last equally as long.

The Daily Stage.

ESTABLISHED 1874.

DEVOTED TO THE DRAMA, MUSIC AND ART.

PUBLICATION OFFICE,
38 Fulton Street,.....Brooklyn.

THE DAILY STAGE is the ONLY House Programme in the several Theatres in Brooklyn; including THE ACADEMY OF MUSIC, COL. SINN'S NEW PARK THEATRE, HOOLEY'S THEATRE, OLYMPIC THEATRE.

THE DAILY STAGE is the LARGEST paper of its class in the country. As it reaches eighty large number of the first people of Brooklyn, it is the BEST medium for advertising in the city.

All communications should be addressed,

BROOKLYN DAILY STAGE
38 Fulton street, Brooklyn.

SPECIAL NOTICE.

Dramatic and other associations giving entertainments will be furnished with the DAILY STAGE more reasonably than ordinary programmes.

"THE STAGE" LAST SEASON.

During the past season, which commenced August 16, 1875, there has been 128 performances at the regular theatres, and 161 at other places, at all of which THE BROOKLYN DAILY STAGE was the programme. Consequently 1,289 editions of it were issued during the season that closed on June 10th. The circulation of the STAGE during the season was 1,500,000 copies, that being 34,651 per week for 43 weeks.

NEW PARK THEATRE.

This week will be presented the celebrated comedy, "The Gilded Age," with Mr. John T. Raymond, who has just completed a most successful engagement at the New York Park Theatre, in his great role of Col. Sellers. It is needless to mention the many farcial and side-splitting points the play presents. Although a considerable length of time has elapsed since we have had the pleasure of witnessing this play, and reminiscences enough remain to bring to the public's mind the hearty welcome this gentleman received on his former visits, and though time does change many things, this play and actor it has not. The graphic illustrations of his pre-water scheme, the steamboat investment, hogs and mules, his transactions with one of the Senators, etc., are all extremely laughable, and yet painfully true in every-day life. 'Twas said of this performance when first produced in New York: "The person who can sit the play out and not laugh, is a man to be shunned and avoided, his heart being in the wrong place." In justice to Mr. Raymond and the management of this theatre, for offering of excellent an opportunity to the people of witnessing one of the finest comedies on the American stage, the house should be more than filled every evening. Next week, Harrigan and Hart's great combination.

OLYMPIC THEATRE.

The entertainments given at the Olympic continues to draw full houses. The management give his patrons something new each week, and now the Saturday matinees are well attended. This week the following artists appear in a grand bill: The Lynn Sisters, Clark Gibbs, the Sharpleys, Miss Mattie Watson, J. Fields, Hurley and Marr, Harry Bennett, Joe Arthur and the regular stock company. The entertainment will conclude with the new burlesque, entitled "The Chinese Laundry."

ACADEMY OF MUSIC.

Every lover of opera bouffe will hail the advent of M'lle Aimee with delight. American has seen many representatives of this class of lyric drama, but none to surpass Aimee in refinement and brilliancy. During the limited engagement of three nights and one matinee, will be presented two great European successes, entirely new to the American stage. For Thursday evening, Offenbach's "La Boulangere a des Ecus," and on Saturday evening Lecocq's last and greatest triumph, "La Petite Marine." Here, then, is novelty in store. For the remaining two performances, "La Belle Helene," and "La Grande Duchesse" will be given. This is Aimee's farewell to Brooklyn, and a most charming one it promises to be.

ODDS AND ENDS.

Fruitless shrubs—Hat trees.

Cora Pearl will marry an Englishman.

Paris has over 65,000 professional beggars.

In California a woman is never "the wife of his bosom." She is the "lady of the home."

Mrs. Swinsbelm is resting beneath her own fig tree in the suburbs of Fitchburg.

Texas expects its greatest fruit crop this year.

Mrs. Commodore Vanderbilt is the richest widow of her age in America.

The West Point graduates this year will number seventy-seven—the largest class on record.

The only drawback to fortune tellers getting rich in quick time is the fact that only one fool out of twenty has any money.

It is thought the European war will exchange enough broadstuffs for gold to enable this country to resume specie payments.

Rose Eytinge has just purchased a summer residence in Orange, N. J., near the home of General McClellan.

The trouble with the heathen Chinee is that his civilization is of a different stratum, and refuses to assimilate with ours.

Long Branch landlords have filled the Rusland with glue to keep her together until the season opens.

There is no truth in the popular rumor that the Russian fleet is preparing to bombard our Turkish baths.

Fate is getting ahead of Kate Claxton. A hotel in St. Paul, Minn., burned down a day before she wanted possession there.

A Virginia bridegroom, seven feet high, has begun to complain already. He says he has no more woman than follows half his size.

Free Trips to Coney Island.

The New York Family Story Paper coach will leave the City Hall, Brooklyn, for Coney Island, every Saturday afternoon during the summer months, at three o'clock, sharp, and will arrive at Mr. Cable's hotel on the beach, at half-past four o'clock precisely. An hour and a half will be given to passengers, which will be ample time for a lunch or a bath. Then, on the minute of six o'clock, the coach will leave the Island, returning to Brooklyn in the early evening.

Gentlemen are requested to apply for tickets at the Family Story Paper office, No. 74 Beekman street, New York. No tickets are issued for gentlemen unless accompanied by a lady. Although these trips are made FREE OF EXPENSE to passengers, particular care is taken to maintain the highest degree of order and decorum.

Ladies, especially, are invited to embrace this opportunity of enjoying a ride along the boulevard, and of inhaling the wholesome sea breeze of the beach.

FASHION NOTES.

Sleeves buttons both for ladies and gentlemen are once more made in couples linked together.

Hair nets are again fashionable, and the most popular ones are made with colored braids. Chenille nets are also worn.

The newest fans are made of white or violet wool, and each stick is decorated with some pretty landscape or flower painting done by hand.

Dolmans made to be worn with any dress are generally of some light shade of woolen material. Dressy styles are made up in black goods for more elderly ladies.

Dresses laced in front increase in favor, as also are round waists. They have always five seams in the back. Both styles have been but recently introduced.

Fancy pockets suspended at the side are prepared for summer ulsters which are of decidedly thin material. The handsomest are produced by inspiration—the result of being without any definite plan beforehand. v

The special feature to be noticed among greenadines this spring is the general introduction of colors, and the change of popular taste from large and showy open work figures, to fine stripes, small figures and checks.

Olive and cream shades, and the gray-blue called robin's egg is preferred to the low priced striped and checked silks, in preference to the more backneyed black and white and black and gray styles.

The netted purse is once more taking the place of the morocco portmonnaie. The new purses are of silk netting with silver or steel beads, and they are made in the shape of small bags with metal clasps.

Feather bands are popular for trimmings. Row after row of plaited black lace is another stylish trimming for black mantles. The French imitation thread lace is most used for this purpose, headed by passementerie or galloon.

Sandals may be mentioned as one of the vagaries of fashion in shoes this season. They are intended to be worn with fancy stockings. For full dress in warm weather slippers are a leading fashion.

Linen, duck, reepped pique and light grades of woolen materials are the proper fabrics to be used for children's clothing during the summer. Light flannel or wool suits will be worn and they are quite as cool if not cooler than linen.

Handsome satchels for shopping and traveling uses are made of Japanese leather, ornamented with odd figures. The mountings are warranted not to rust or tarnish, and are made in many pretty designs.

Belts in front of basque bodies are again in vogue. Some belts are more than a finger length wide in the side seam after being gathered there; they then slope away narrower and are fastened by a gold buckle a trifle to the left of the front.

Each sleeve at present is a complicated composition, repeating in miniature and summing up in a small space the trimming of the entire toilet. Sometimes the sleeve almost to the wrist is made without any trimming, but in this case it is furnished with very deep cuffs of white lace or linen, reaching in the back almost to the middle of the forearm. With these deep cuffs are worn broad collars to match, which are almost like small capes.

At this season of the year many persons are washing lace, and, as few know how to accomplish this feat well, the following directions will prove of value. This plan, if properly followed, will make lace equal to new. Put two quarts of rain water, two ounces of best yellow soap, cut very thin, and two ounces of soda into a jar; when quite dissolved, put in the work and place the jar in a cool oven and let it stand all night. Take out the lace and put into clear water and let it remain for a few hours, then take it out and pin out on a cloth or board to dry. If the lace requires to be rather stiff, dissolve in the rinsing water a lump or two of white sugar. Starch should never be used.

"Stumpty Dumpty."

Messrs. Harrigan and Hart are now writing a serial for the Boys of New York, entitled Humpty Dumpty Dick. Boys in the gallery—beware.

Brooklyn Artists.

Many of our readers could not understand how King Rex's costume could be on exhibition at Burt's shoe store and be used in New York at the same time. Fact is, in the morning Rex wore a traveling dress—in the evening, the royal robes exhibited there—all of which were made and furnished by EAVES, of 361 Fulton st. The ermine trimmings, so much admired, were from the establishment of Mr. J. Welnberg, of 235 Fulton street.

The Banjo.

The undersigned begs leave to inform his patrons and the public generally, that he has removed his Banjo Depot to No. 136 Atlantic street (near Smith), formerly of 99 Smith street. Banjos exchanged, made, altered and repaired. Best strings in the city. Instruction given. Success guaranteed. Respectfully,

WM. TULLY.

It Keeps the Lead.

A good thing always the cheapest. So if you buy one of JAMES M. STRAIN'S PATENT TRUNKS, you will have the best. Besides all kinds of Trunks you will find at STRAIN'S, corner of Fulton and Johnson streets (under Tice's Jewelry store), a complete stock of Bags, Portmanteaus, etc.

About Segars.

A fine segar is a good thing, but there is so much deceit in the business of late that a man is almost afraid to take the chance of purchasing a box at any price. If good segars at fair prices, go to H.T. Vandevoer, Opera Cigar Store, corner Fulton and Court street. N. B.—No Branch Stores.

A Result from Advertising.

U. KRIEVLER, the jeweler, of 15 Sands street, is perhaps, one of the best advertised men in Brooklyn (in this name may be seen in almost every advertising medium in the city. The result is that he is doing a thriving trade, and repairs more watches than any jeweler in the city.

About Dress-Making.

RAYMOND.—John T. Raymond and his "Millions in It," will cure sore eye or a fit of the blues at Col. Sinn's this week.

HARRIGAN.—Harrigan and Hart, and their great excelsior company, will be at the Park Theatre next week, when full houses will be the order. Secure your seats at once.

HOOLEY'S.—Hooley's Theatre is closed this week. Callender's Georgia Minstrels will open there for three weeks, commencing June 4th Mr. Hooley is busy arranging for the opening of his Chicago house.

MUNRO.—Mr. Norman L. Munro's big stage, known as the Family Story Paper stage, made its second trip last Saturday. The guests were mostly ladies, who enjoyed the trip very much. This kind of staging is a good thing.

MORRIS.—Miss Clara Morris will not depart for Europe as announced, but will spend the summer in the Catskills.

LAWLER.—Mr. Frank Lawler has been engaged as stage manager of the Rush Street Theatre, San Francisco.

ROBSON.—Stuart Robson and W. H. Crane appear in "Our Boarding House," in San Francisco, shortly. "The Danicheffs" is also to be given there.

KNIGHT.—George Knight appears in "Evangeline," at the Fifth Avenue, June 4th. The libretto of the piece is announced as by Mr. John Brougham, the music by Edward Rice.

GAYLOR.—Mr. Charles Gaylor has written a play for Miss Jennie Hughes, the vocalist and comedienne, with which that lady is to star during the coming season.

THOMPSON.—The opening piece in which the Lydia Thompson Troupe will appear at Wallack's is called "Oxygen; or, Gas in the Burlesque Metre." This piece has been given with great success at the Folly Theatre, London.

HOGAN.—Mr. Hogan, the leader of the choir of St. Charles Borromeo Church will be tendered a grand concert at the Church Edifice, on Wednesday evening, June 6th, when a grand array of talent will be produced.

HART.—Manager Josh Hart will inaugurate, late in September, his new London Alhambra and Cafe Chantant, at what has been heretofore known as the Olympic Theatre, a five years' lease of which building he has obtained. The whole company will be imported from Europe. The auditorium will be a literal fac-simile of the London Alhambra. A cafe and restaurant will be attached. Work is at present in progress on the building, and it is expected to be completed in four months. The entertainment given will be on the plan of the London Alhambra, and will include variety acts, interspersed with singing and dancing.

DURAND.—M. A. Durand opens the Twenty-third Street Theatre (formerly Bryant's) on October 24, for a season of four months of French comedy and vaudeville. Thus far there has been a subscription of $150 a night, which guarantees the success of the enterprise. The company has already been mainly engaged in Paris by Mr. Venial, who is to be stage manager and 3d leading. It is as follows: Chamonin, 1st comedian; Henriot, juvenile; Didier, leading; Gerard, eccentric and character; Charlotte Leblanc, soubrette; Madame Bonnary, old woman; Eugenie St. Maur, character; and Madame Gerard, second leading. The first leading lady has not been engaged. On the selection in this case will depend in a great measure the success of the season. After the New York season the company goes to Boston, two weeks; Philadelphia, two weeks; and Montreal, one month.—Dramatic News.

SHAKESPEARE'S Complete Works are presented to every reader of the New York Family Story Paper. Look out for a house and lot exci.

Prospect Park Pavilion.

Every one in Brooklyn knows of the Prospect Park Pavilion at the main entrance to the Park, but few as yet know what a magnificent place it now is. The new proprietor has made vast improvements this spring, and it is now what it ought to have been in the first place. Ladies and children will find it a good place to obtain lunch, ice cream, soda, etc. The place is fitted up as a family refreshment saloon, and run in first-class style, with the prices within the reach of all.

A Lady's Visiting Card.

We will furnish 50 handsome cards, with your name nicely printed thereon, for 25 cents. Ladies please call at MARTIN & BENNETT'S, Printers, opposite the Academy of Music—325 Montague st.

THE MANAGEMENT of the Grand Central Hat Store is not only offering one of the finest assortment of Gentlemen's and Youths' Straw and Felt goods, but offer them at such a low and reasonable price that already they are looked upon as being just such a store as Brooklynites have been in search of for some time. The number is 505 Fulton street.

The Daily Stage.

ESTABLISHED 1874.

DEVOTED TO THE DRAMA, MUSIC AND ART.

PUBLICATION OFFICE,
38 Fulton Street,.....Brooklyn.

THE DAILY STAGE is the NEATEST paper of its class in the country. As it reaches nightly a large number of the first people of Brooklyn, it is the BEST medium for advertising in the city.

All communications should be addressed,

BROOKLYN DAILY STAGE,
38 Fulton street, Brooklyn.

SPECIAL NOTICE.

Dramatic and other associations giving entertainments will be furnished with the DAILY STAGE more reasonably than ordinary programmes.

"THE STAGE" LAST SEASON.

During the past season, which commenced August 16, 1875, there has been 1,138 performances at the regular theatres, and 161 at other places, at all of which THE BROOKLYN DAILY STAGE was the programme. Consequently 1,299 editions of it were issued during the season that closed on June 10th. The circulation of the STAGE during the season was 1,500,000 copies, that being 34,651 per week for 43 weeks.

THE VALUE OF APPLAUSE.

The excellence of a performance is supposed to depend entirely upon the manager, the author, and the actors.

On the contrary, the audience has quite as much to do with it as either of these other three factors.

Generous but judicious applause is the breath of life which inspires manager, author and actors alike to do their utmost to deserve success.

In France, applause is considered so indispensable to a good performance that it is never left to chance or the caprice of the public. It is bought and paid for by the management.

Hence the claque, which is merely a party of men hired to applaud at the right time.

No French actor will undertake to play without his claque. M. Fechter imported the system into England, and when remonstrated with on the subject, emphatically declared that his applause was as much a part of his acting as his wardrobe or his wig.

Hearing this, thoughtless persons say: "What vanity the actors are so fond of being applauded, that if the public won't do it they'll pay fellows to come and stamp."

Yes; but the question of applause is not a question of the vanity of actors.

Acting is an art so simple and yet so complex, so apparently easy and yet so practically difficult, that the uninitiated can scarcely understand how the ladies and gentlemen before them upon the stage are, and yet are not, at the same moment the personages whom they are supposed to represent.

For example, Mrs. Scott Siddons is impersonating Lady Macbeth. Surely that is Lady Macbeth herself whose eyes glare in search of Banquo; whose hand seeks to steady and support her craven husband, and whose voice never quavers as she addresses the astonished guests. Yes; but at the same time, it is Mrs. Siddons who speaks only the lines set down for her, and gives the cue for the next speech.

This dual identity is constantly preserved upon the stage, and thus, while a good actor utterly ignores his audience, he is simultaneously most dependent upon his coldness or his kindness.

All applause comes to the actor like the spur to a spirited steed; like champagne to a poet; like nectar to the gods. It exhilarates him. It enables him to outdo himself.

Achievment grows upon appreciation, and the audience which applauds most always sees the best acting.

The English fashion of "receptions" is a very graceful form of applause. It is the recognition which an actor receives as he makes his first appearance for the evening—a sort of "How d'ye do?" or "We are glad to see you."

This is no trouble to an audience. It commits them to no judgment upon the actors' performance; but the effect upon him is magical. He feels at ease in a moment, and he will play the better for it the whole evening.

During the performance an actor who gets no applause is like an artist painting in the dark. He never knows what he has accomplished, what effects he has produced. The only way to let him know he is right is to applaud him.

The value of applause, then, to an actor is incalculable; but its value to an audience is as great. The one reacts upon the other. To get the best of acting, an audience must inspire it by hearty, genial frequent applause.

Try the two systems for yourself. Sit through a play without applauding anything; then take the same piece and applaud everything that strikes you as good in the dialogue, acting or scenery. Compare your own enjoyment during the two evenings, and you will be astonished to learn the value of applause.

MINNIE FISKE

BROOKLYN ACADEMY OF MUSIC.

This week Mr. Edwin Booth, will appear in the following Great Works supported by a Superior Company. Monday, "Hamlet." Tuesday, 'Othello." Wednesday, "Richelieu." Thursday, "Merchant of Venice." Friday, "Fools Revenge." Saturday Matinee, Victor Hugo's Great Drama. "Ruy Blas." Saturday, "Brutus." Next week Mr. Booth will give another entire change of plays.

THE PARK THEATRE.

This week Col. Sinn presents an entertainment of unusual attraction, consisting of Novelty and Drama. Amy Stone appears in her new drama of "Bigamy," a play that has met with considerable success. The Novelty part embraces Emmerson and Clark, the Foy Sisters, and the popular George Knight in his original Dutch sketches, and other new faces. E. L. Davenport and Booth's Theatre Company will play "Daniel Druce," at the Park for one week commencing Feb. 26. Next week another new Company. Regular Matinees Wednesday and Saturday.

HOOLEY'S OPERA HOUSE.

This week Mr. Joseph H. Keane, supported by his own Company appears in "Rip Van Winkle." Mr. Keane made a very favorable impression at the New Broadway Theatre, New York, when he performed for two weeks, and the press of New York gave him the highest compliments bestowed on any actor for many years. When Joseph Jefferson lost his sight, Mr. Keane was his choice to play his part, and its now a hard matter to say which, Jefferson or Keane, plays the part best. Matinees Wednesday and Saturday. Prices at this house remain the same. Mr. Hooley will present a new star every week.

OLYMPIC THEATRE.

The Management of the Olympic has got his hands full trying to make room for the crowds, that come to see his novel entertainment, the performance seems to give satisfaction to all and this week he presents the best bill of the season. For a social few hours go to the Olympic.

Young People's Association.

The Young People's Association of Christ Church and Sunday School, of the Eastern District, propose giving one of their grand entertainments in aid of their charity fund, at the Lyceum, corner South 9th and Fourth sts., on Wednesday evening, Feb. 7th. These entertainments are so well known and so popular, that our friends will be glad we have called their attention to the forthcoming one.

A Flony Way.

A new flour mill is to be started in New York that will outdo anything in that line. The mill is situated on Maugin, Delancy, and Tompkins sts., occupying the whole square. It will be known as the New York City Attrition Flour Mills. With their new process of milling they claim to save 20 per cent. more than any other concern in this country. We may soon look for a drop in the price of flour if the concern will benefit the whole country and everybody in it.

A Rusked Man

EATON, the Broadway Costumer, notwithstanding his engagement to furnish the elegant and characteristic costumes required for the proper production of the pieces to be performed by Mr. Edwin Booth and company, at the Academy, during his present run of two weeks, is enabled to offer his numerous friends and patrons the largest and best assortment of Costumes for Masquerades and private theatricals, to be found anywhere, 303 Fulton street, Brooklyn, and 845 North 8th street, Philadelphia.

faded from his lips, which quivered as he said, at last, with an effort to smile:

"I'd like it vastly, only you see I am not yet through college, and I should be expelled at once. Then Father never would forgive me. He'd disinherit me, sure, so—"

"Hardly as bad as that, I think," spoke the purring, soothing voice of the doctor, while one of Josephine's hands found its way to Everard's which it pressed softly, while Josephine herself said:

"We can keep a secret, you know, till you are through college, and it would be such fun for—"

"If you do, George!" Everard said, and at last blood came surging back to his face. "It will be the darkest day I ever got into, and the best kind of a lark. To be as tight as you please. I am more than willing."

There was a cheer and a deep nush when the curtain was withdrawn, disclosing the bridal party upon the stage, flitted up to represent a most artistic drawing-room; groups of gaily dressed people standing together, and in their midst, conspicuous above all, Everard and Josephine, she radiantly beautiful, with a look of exultation on her face, as a triumph of coquetting emotions at his heart as she wondered if Dr. Matthewson had told the truth and was authorized to marry her really, or if Everard would stand to it or repudiate the act, with a face white now as snow, and a voice which was hukey in its tone as to the question: "Do you take this woman for your wedded wife? Do you promise to love her, and cherish her both in adversity and in health, and, forsaking all others, keep thee only unto her, be answered: "I do," with a voice which rang out clear and distinct through the grave and made him cry cold.

"Do you take the lord he thought it was going to be; it was the same dreadful nightmare, and he could not at all realize what he was doing or saying. Even Josephine's voice, when she too said "I will," sounded very far away, as did Matthewson, as the solemn words according to the authority vested in me I pronounce you man and wife. Wood God has joined together let no man put asunder."

It was over at last; the crowd dispersed, and the tired actors, sleepy and cross, gathered up the paraphernalia scattered everywhere, and went to their several homes. Everard and Josephine were to be alone, for she had no maid to say, and so much so to so, that it was after twelve, and the summer sun was high in the heavens ere she was ready, and they started at last for home, accompanied by the young man with whom Everard was staying in Ellicottville, and who had come down to the ball. He was full of fun, and called Josephine upon her being a bride, and asked Everard if he didn't think he's a capital joke it should prove to be a genuine marriage.

"Yes," Everard answered, "it would," but his voice was so constrained and unnatural that Josephine looked up inquiringly at him, and felt a twinge of pain when she saw, even in the moonlight, how white he was.

It had been arranged that young Stafford, a friend from Ellicottville, should pass the night at Mrs. Fenton's, and when the party reached the cottage they found a supper prepared for them of which coffee and sherry formed a part, and under the combined effects of the two Everard's spirits began to rise, and when at last he said good night to Josephine and went with his friend to his room, he was much like himself, and felt that it would not be a very bad state of affairs after all if it should prove true Josephine was now his wife. It would only be expediting matters a little, and the secret would be no romantic one as usual. Still he was conscious of a vague feeling of unrest and distinctness to talk, and decided on his intention of plunging into bed at once.

"Reckon you'd better read this first," Mr. Stafford said, handing him a telegram. "It came this morning and I brought it with me, but thought better not to give it to you till after the play, for fear it might contain bad news which would disturb your action."

Now young Stafford knew perfectly well the nature of the telegram, for he had been in the office when it came, but he decided not to betray to it the play was over. It was from Everard's father, and read as follows:

"Mr. Josiah Fenton, Jr.—Your mother very sick. Come immediately. J. E. Fenton."

"Oh, Stafford," cried Everard's voice was like the cry of a wounded child, "why didn't you give me this before. It is was a train left at five o'clock. I could have taken it, and saved—"

He did not finish the sentence, for he could not put into words the great horror of impending evil which had fallen upon him with the reading of the telegram. Indeed, he could not define to himself the nature of his feelings. He only knew that he wished he had gone home in a wave to Rosie's summons, instead of cool a la to Josephine, where he had possibly contributed into he had declared this to what. And in this he meant no disloyalty to Josephine, nor attributed any blame to her; and when next morning, after a troubled night in which no sleep visited his weary eyes, he met her at the breakfast-table looking so bright and fresh, and pretty as if no tea had not kept a sleepless night wondering if he had not actually experienced a delicious feeling of ownership in her beauty, and a momentary fell willing to defy the whole world, if by so doing he could claim her as his then and there. He told her of the telegram, and said he must take the first train west, which left in about two hours, and Josephine's eyes instantly filled with tears which shone like so many pearls, as she said:

"I am sorry for you, and I hope your mother will recover. I have always wanted to see her so much. Would you mind telling her of me and giving my love to her?"

This was after breakfast, when they stood together under the vine-wreathed porch, each with a thought of last night's ceremony in their minds, and each loth to speak of it first. Stafford had gone to the hotel to settle his bill of the previous day and make some inquiries about the connection, and so for a time the family were alone when Dr. Matthewson appeared, wearing his blandest smile, and addressing Josephine as Mrs. Everard, and asking her how she found herself after the play.

At the sound of that name given to Josephine as if she had a right to it, a scarlet flame spread over Everard's face and he felt the old horror and dread of the night creeping over him again. Now was the time to know the worst or the best, whichever may be closest to it—and as calmly as possible under the circumstances, he turned to Dr. Matthewson and asked:

"Were you in earnest in what you said last night? Had you a right to marry us, and is Josephine really my wife?"

It was the first time he had put it into words, and was if the very name of my made her dearer to him he put his arm around her and waited the reply to hear where it which supply and dreadfully.

"Most assuredly she is your lawful wife! You took her with your full consent, knowing I could marry you, and I have your proxy certificate with. I suppose the lady will hold."

He handed a paper similar to Josephine, who, with Everard looking over her shoulder, read to the effect that on the night of July 17th, in the Village Hall at Holbarton, the Rev. John Matthews united E. Everard Everard, Jr., of Rockville, Ohio, to Miss Josephine Fleming of Holbarton.

"It is all right, I believe, and only needs the names of your mother and myself to witness to make it valid in case the marriage is ever contested," Matthewson said, and this time he looked politely at Everard, who was staring blankly at the paper in Josephine's hands, as if it had been the death-warrant he was reading he could scarcely have looked paler.

Something in his manner must have communicated itself to Josephine, for she, too, assumed distress she could not learn, and saying her head to the office, that she could.

THE FORREST HOUSE;

OR, EVERARD'S REPENTANCE.

BY MRS. MARY J. HOLMES.

CHAPTER I.—TWO LETTERS.

The first, a small half-sheet, inclosed in a large white envelope, and addressed to a relative, informed hand to Mr. James Everard Forrest, Junior, Ellicottville, Berkshire County, Massachusetts, with a request in the lower left-hand corner for the postmaster to forward immediately; the second, a dainty little perfumed missive, with a fanciful monogram, directed in a plain, round hand to J. Everard Forrest, Esq., Ellicottville, Mass., with the words "In haste" written in the corner. Both letters were in a hurry, and both found their way together to their owner, a brownhaired, brown-eyed, brown-faced young man, who sat under the shadow of the big maple tree on the Common in Ellicottville, lazily puffing his cigar and fanning himself with the Boston paper, for the thermometer was nicety in the shade, and the hour 10 A. M. of a sultry July day. At first it was almost too much exertion even to break the seals, and for a moment J. Everard Forrest, Jr., toyed with the smaller envelope of the two, the one whose delicate perfumery he knew so well, and which quickened his pulse a little and brought a deeper glow to his cheek.

"I may as well see what Josey wants of me in haste," he said, and breaking the seal he read:

"HOLSWORTH, July 15.

"MY DEAR NED: You must come to Mattie Welbeck-day, but come no-morrow on the four o'clock train. I want you particularly. Everything has gone at sixes and sevens, for just as I was ready to go to Murdock, who has been dying for two days, I grew more, must really die, and, of course, the Murdock boys can't, and you can't sail into the quarter of the bridegroom in the play where I am bride. You will have very little to say. I am told it is not fair in fifteen minutes, but you must come to-morrow so as to produce with me once at least. Now can't you dare fail. I shall meet you at the station.

"Yours lovingly,

"JOSEPHINE FLEMING."

"P. S.—Do you remember I wrote you in my last of a stranger, a Dr. Matthewson, who has been in town a few days stopping at our inn. He has one connected to the private condition that are the otherwoman. I do not know why he insists upon that p-int, but he do es; so do not fail me."

"Ah-ha, with love, "JOE."

"And so this is my lady's great haste," the young man said, as he finished reading the letter.

"She wants me for her tricegroom. I rather think I have tried before, and I don't know but I'm willing, so I guess I'll have to go; and now for Rosie's interesting document, which must be forwarded immediately. I only wish it may prove to have money in it from the governor, for I am getting rather low."

So saying he took the other letter and looked at it carefully, while a smile broke over his face as he continued:

"Upon my word, Rosie did not mean this to go astray, and has written everything out in full, even to Massachusetts and Junior. Good for her. Wonder why she didn't take a large envelope; but then, she needed all this space, and has filled it, too, and how crooked; why, that junior stands at an angle of several degrees above the line. Rosie ought to do better. She must be nearly thirty-two; but then she's a nice little girl and I'll see what she says."

What she said was as follows:

"HOLLY FARM, Tuesday, July 14th.

"MR. EVERARD FORREST:

"Dear Sir.—Nobody knows I am writing this to you, and I suppose you will be angry, but I can't help it. I have things talking about you even in her sleep. She did it last night, for, but I thought if you knew how bad she was, you would, perhaps, come home for a part of your vacation. I'm sure you must be good to see her, for she is very well and your father, too. So no more at present.

"Yours respectfully,

"ROSAMOND HASTINGS."

"P. S.—Miss Beatrice Holsworth has come home from New York and had the hair-dresser, and real every speck of her beautiful hair. You don't know funny she looks! She offered me the switch for mine to make her a wig, because it wears naturally, and is just her color, but I would not sell it for the world; would you? Inclosed find ten dollars of my very own money, which I send you to come home with, thinking you might need it. Do not fail to come, will you?

"ROSAMOND."

Everard read this letter twice, and smoothed out the crisp ten dollar bill which was carefully wrapped in a separate bit of paper. It was not the first time he had received money in his sore need from the girl, for in a blank book, which he always carried in his pocket, were several entries, as follows: "Jan. 3, from Rosamond Hastings, five dollars: March 4th, two dollars; June 5th, one dollar," and so on until the amount was more than twenty dollars, but never before had she sent him so large a sum as now, and there was a moisture in his eyes and his breath came heavily as he put it away in his purse, and said:

"There never was so unselfish a creature as Rosie Hastings. She is always thinking of somebody else. And I am a mean, contemptible dog to take her money as I do; but then, I honestly intend to pay her back sometime, and it is the thing of my own."

Then resuming himself, he put his purse in his pocket, and glancing again at Rosie's letter his eyes fell upon Miss Belknap's name, and he laughed aloud as he said:

"Poor Bald Bee Belknap. She must look comical. I can imagine how it hurts her pride. But always better, perhaps, that she should wear what her hair is her only beauty. If I except her eyes, which at present are too large for her thin face. Josey used to call her round eyes and face set me beg to a beauty yet, though not like Josey; no, never like Josey."

And that herself the young man back to Miss Fleming's letter, and its imperative request. Could he comply with it? Ought he not to go at once to the sick mother, who was always him so sadly, and who had made all the happiness he had ever known at home? Rosie's letter was an inclination drew him to Holburton and the fair Josephine, with whom he believed himself to be desperately in love, and who had given him reason as any young man of twenty well can be. Perhaps Rosie had been duly alarmed; at all events, if the mother was sick, Everard was wanting him badly, his father would write, of course, and on the whole he believed he should go to Holburton by the afternoon train, and then, perhaps, go home.

And so the die was cast, the young man little dreaming as he walked to the telegraph office and sent across the wires to Miss Josephine Fleming the message that would in a few hours send dension was to influence his whole future life, and change him in a network of difficulties which it would take many years to overcome.

CHAPTER II—DR. MATTHEWSON.

The train from Ellicottville reached Holburton at noon. In fact its habit was to be late, but on this particular day it was about on time, and at exactly that time, and the one stage which Holburton boasted was in waiting at the door of the station, the only station of the out-of-the-way town which lies between the Empire State and Massachusetts. Everybody in the village was assembled to see the departure of the stage, which, though not a mail-carrier, was the only conveyance of the kind, and the two fat, motherly matrons who sat in the depot, silently but heartily wished that Josephine Fleming's fine lawyer, while they watched and discussed the young lady's dress on the occasion, outside, was waking up and down, seeming wholly unconscious of the excitement around him. He was becoming, for she knew perfectly well that she was an object of curiosity and comment, and more than once she paused in her walk and turning it gave them a chance to see them. Twice in order to give the other lawyer a chance to see how many tucks and ruffles and puffs there were in her new dress, worn that day for the first time and made by sister Agnes with a French fashion-sheet before which all the efforts of all old maid sisters could endure. And a very pretty picture Josephine Fleming made standing there in the sunshine looking so artless and innocent as if no thought of beauty or dress had ever filled her mind. She was a pink-and white blonde, with straw hat and stylish in her black suits and white underhead, and those dreamy blue eyes of which poets sing and which failed to charm a matter-in order to sway the sterner sex just by that pleading, confiding look which, for example, Everard was not, and makes him very tender toward the helpless creature appealing so innocently for his care and protection.

Josephine is not my heroine, though without her the story would be nothing, and so I will say to my readers that while I do not like her, I do not like her little friend, and the two old ladies did not like her, though they thought her pretty and quite oriental

ESTABLISHED 1874.

DEVOTED TO THE DRAMA, MUSIC AND ART.

PUBLICATION OFFICE,
38 Fulton Street, ... Brooklyn.

THE DAILY STAGE IS THE ONLY HOME Programme in the several Theatres in Brooklyn; including COL. SINN'S NEW PARK THEATRE, THE ACADEMY OF MUSIC, HOOLEY'S THEATRE, OLYMPIC THEATRE.

THE DAILY STAGE is the neatest paper of its class in the country. As it reaches nightly a large number of the first people of Brooklyn, it is the BEST medium for advertising in the city.

All communications should be addressed,

BROOKLYN DAILY STAGE,
38 Fulton street, Brooklyn.

SPECIAL NOTICE.

Dramatic and other associations giving entertainments will be furnished with the DAILY STAGE more reasonably than ordinary programmes.

"THE STAGE" LAST SEASON.

During the past season, which commenced August 16, 1875, there has been 1,128 performances at the regular theatres, and 161 at other places, at all of which THE BROOKLYN DAILY STAGE was the programme. Consequently 1,289 editions of it were issued during the season that closed on June 10th. The circulation of the STAGE during the season was 1,500 copies, that being 34,651 per week for 43 weeks.

THE PARK THEATRE.

Mrs. D. P. Bowers drew large and fashionable audiences last week, and during the present one Col. Sinn presents a bill equally as strong of the variety order, embracing the following artists: The great Gus Williams, Jennie Engel, the Mace Acrobatic Combination, Carroll and Barry, Kelly and Ryan, the riflemen, the Austins, etc., together with the three-act drama, "Breaking the Chain; or, Camilla's Husband," with Miss Annie Ward Tiffany, George R. Edeson and the entire dramatic company in the cast.

HOOLEY'S OPERA HOUSE.

Business at Hooley's Opera House improved wonderfully last week. The house looked like old times, and the entertainment surpassed any seen of late. The closing of the first part, entitled "One Hundred Years," is undoubtedly the hit of the season. Mr. Hooley has now found out the sort of entertainment that the people want. This week "One Hundred Years" will be continued, and the whole company in new acts. The performance will conclude with one of Billy Rice's new burlesques. Regular matinee every Saturday. No matinee on Wednesday. Go and see Hooley's Minstrels.

OLYMPIC THEATRE.

Manager Chevalier has struck the right kind of a show for the Olympic, and the proof of it is a full house every night. Mr. Wood, the stage manager, got up the first part in grand style, and runs the show like a well regulated clock. The Female Minstrels seem to be a permanent fixture, and with the change that Mr. Wood makes each week, the Olympic cannot fail to draw good houses. The Olympic's motto is "smoke and be happy." No matinee at this house.

BROOKLYN ACADEMY OF MUSIC.

Brooklyn is soon to be favored with Mr. Edwin Booth, the greatest actor of the day. He will commence an engagement at the Brooklyn Academy on next Monday, January 29, and continue every evening and Saturday matinee for two weeks, and at each performance will change the programme. The sale of seats will be commenced at the box office on Saturday.

Emerald Ball.

The Emerald Association will hold their Thirty-ninth annual ball at the Academy of Music, on Wednesday evening, January 24. Gilmore's Band will furnish the music, and Mr. Arhuckle will give cornet solos. The Emerald ball has continued to be the leading one of the season for many years. The tickets are $5, and the cause a good one.

A New Story by Mrs. Mary J. Holmes.

The lovers of entertaining stories will be pleased to learn that America's favorite novelist, the renowned MARY J. HOLMES, has just completed a new story, which is pronounced one of the most interesting this gifted lady has written. Of course the New York Weekly, for which MRS. HOLMES is exclusively engaged, is the only paper in which this story can be read. It is entitled "The Forest House; or, Edward's Repentance," and the opening installment will be given next week, in No. 52 of the New York Weekly. A brisk demand for this fresh production of a story writer who has never failed to entertain and delight her multitudinous admirers, must follow the appearance of Mrs. Holmes' last and best story.

E. D. Burt & Co.

MESSRS. E. D. BURT & CO., of 287 Fulton street, continue to sell the best Boots and Shoes at fair prices. Their goods are always cheap, for they wear the longest.

About Segars.

A fine segar is a good thing, but there is so much deceit in the business of late that a man is almost afraid to take the chance of purchasing a box at any price. For good segars, at fair prices, go to H.T. Vandeveer, Opera Cigar Store, corner Fulton and Court street.

The Ross Soap.

HOOTAS' German Laundry Soap is the best. Get a bar and try it, and you will never have anything else.

Physical Culture.

Everybody should develop their bodies at BURNHAM'S Academy, corner Smith and Schermerhorn streets.

BUSINESS MEN, we work very cheap and satisfactory, print Cards, Circulars, Bill Heads, Opening Circulars, etc., neatly, cheaply and promptly. MARVIN & BENNETT, 158 Montague street, opposite the main entrance to the Academy of Music.

SCROLL SAWING has become quite a fashion, and ladies, gents, boys and girls have become great experts. All the necessary saws, patterns and wood of all kinds, can be had at HERDE & KIPPE'S, 318 Fulton street, Brooklyn.

PERSONAL AND DRAMATIC NOTES.

LEVY.—Levy and his cornet left San Francisco on January 3 1,for Australia.

CARENEUVE.—Careneuve commences a two weeks' engagement at McVicker's, Chicago, this week.

DIETZ.—Miss Linda Dietz has retired from Scherr's traveling company on account of delicate health.

STAGE.—The Brooklyn DAILY STAGE will be used at the Academy as the programme. Advertisers wanting space, apply at once.

RICE.—Billy Rice, of Hooley's Minstrels, has become a great favorite. In burlesque he is the "boss."

MCCULLOUGH.—John McCullough has developed poetic aspirations. The San Francisco Call accuses him of having written a song.

ADAMS.—Edwin Adams, spite of rumors and statements of his death, has arrived safe and sound in San Francisco, and will shortly come on here.

CONWAY.—Lillian Conway is spoken of favorably by the Philadelphia press for her meritorious performance of "Mabel Vane" at the Chestnut Street Theatre in that city recently.

MITCHELL.—Maggie Mitchell's new play, "Mignon," is a notable success. Walter Lennox and Wm. Harris, both old Brooklyn favorites, are with her company.

MARKHAM.—Pauline Markham, of euphemistic blonde celebrity, is displaying her "vocal velvet" at the Covent Garden Theatre, London.

SCHIFF LOTTA.—Miss Emma Schiff, English dramatist, has written a drama for the volatile Lotta. It is said to be of startling and effective merit.

KAYNE.—Mr. E. M. Kayne will have a benefit at Hooley's on Friday evening, when a fine entertainment will be given.

BOOTH.—Mr. Edwin Booth will commence a two weeks' engagement, under the management of Mr. McVicker, at the Brooklyn Academy of Music, next Monday, January 30. The sale of seats will commence Saturday, at the box office.

THEATRE.—The Brooklyn Theatre will be rebuilt. The building will be commenced in May and finished in September. It will be capable of seating 1,200; will be constructed of brick and iron, and when finished will be the model theatre of America. Messrs. Shook and Palmer will be the lessees as before.

STRUTHERS.—Little Mabel Struthers has made a great success at the Boston Theatre the past two weeks as Little Pearl, in the dramatic version of the "Scarlet Letter." She is the daughter of Mr. Robert Struthers and Jennie (Gourlay) Struthers.

FORREST.—The Forrest Dramatic Society gave their second performance at the Brooklyn Athenæum last Friday evening. The plays were "David Garrick" and "I've Written to Browne." The audience was large and fashionable, and the performance gave entire satisfaction. Both the plays were ended dancing commenced. All appeared in full dress.

CAMPBELL.—The immediate cause of the sudden return of Bartley Campbell, the dramatist, from London, was the death of his brother Frank in Louisiana. He is now with his family in Allegheny, Pa. His play, "The Virginian," will be done at the Standard, London, in March. Mr. Campbell is now at work on a new drama for J. C. Williamson, for which he receives $5,000.

A funny man, who travels under the grim name of "Bulldog," is responsible for the following:

"There's Johnny Bull, who ruled the wavy sea;
With Irish Bull, of fun celebrity;
And Papal Bull, long of the Roman See;
Dr. Taurus Bull, known to astronomy;
Great Ox Bull, Norway's fiddle-de dee;
Stout Sitting Bull, who roams our west country;
Stock Jobbing Bull, whom bears dislike so not;
And Canine Bull, of jaw tenacity."

LADIES' FASHIONS.

[WRITTEN FOR THE BROOKLYN DAILY STAGE.]

Here we are, almost a month gone in the New Year, and a deal of frolicking and fun has been gotten through with. I attended a kettle-drum a few evenings ago.

"Whatever is a drum kettle?" I hear you ask. Well, it's a sort of between and a happy one, where one is not expected to dress as if for a dinner or evening party, but a very pleasent, informal, 5'o clock or thereabouts dropping in by invitation, of a pleasant few of one's friends. And you know in these times it's ever so nice to feel that you can go somewhere without importing a costume to do it in. We are having everything in the way of concerting and theatricals first class, and instead of longing for some place to go, the dilemma is where to go first. Fashion remains about the same.

The lady who is dressed in the best taste, always wears that which gives a new attraction to her natural charms without being conspicuous in form or fabric.

All-wool fabrics, soft and clinging, seem to be the favorite materials for winter dresses; and especially so when combined with pipings, cordings, and bandings of silk or faille of another shade or color.

There is very little change in the popular tints and tones of color. Red is gaining favor with brunettes; but there are lovely bronze hues—lead, mulberry and green, that are becoming to all types of beauty. For the many soft tints of blue and green that are changing for blondes as those of pink are for the dark-complexioned belles.

The polonaise and Princess over-dress are still in vogue, and the style of skirt is not changed. They should clear the ground in front, and far back at the sides where the narrow train or demi-train commences.

Square bodices are much worn for evening, and they are very pretty and suitable for young ladie

There are a myriad different kinds of sleeves of all variations of the tight and loosely fitting coat sleeve, and each one seems more beautiful than another.

Jewelry is undergoing a considerable change amongst us; the tendency is no longer in favor of massive jewelry, but instead of the wide bracelets, with huge ornaments of diamonds or other precious stones, which have been worn for some years, there is nothing to be seen now but narrow circlets.

Uncut but polished garnets, the[illegible] of small value, are the rage, and are much employed for ear-rings, and ladies watches no longer have chains attached to them

Pairs have mounting of mother of pearl that are carved in open work designs until they look as delicate and fragile as lace.

Cloth fringes are something new and novel, and consists of bands of cloth, cut out at the lower edge, in small tongue shaped pattes and placed one above the other; there are always two or three tiers of them and there is a certain variety in the shading. For example, the first and shortest fringe would be admiral blue, the top of the fringe is embroidered with either a star or flower, embroidered with wools of the three shades of blue. This cloth fringe may be either straight, pointed, or lozenge-shaped; it is, in fact, rather cloth picked out than fringed.

Although the clinging Princess costume, worn without crinoline, is a marked feature of the present fashions, a newer mode is to have the entire costume in one piece but cut of in two, as the polonaise and skirt; or in three pieces as in the bodice, upper and underskirt. The new dresses of a single piece are so trimmed that they simulate a Princess polonaise; every effort is made to decrease the quantity of material, not for economy's sake, but for making the skirts as clinging as possible. Crinoline died hard, and drapery apparently follows its example; ultra elegantes are wearing the back of the overskirt as plain as the front, but it is in fashion for a mean several yes.

Silk dresses are trimmed with rich fringes or braids, en coulored with gold, silver, and colored flowers. Plush is also much used for trimmings, especially on woolen dresses. It is placed in bands both on the skirt and tunic; also, on the jacket, which matches them. Narrow plush ribbons, lined with satin, have taken the place of velvet, both for bonnet strings, when worn, and neck ribbons, on which to suspend lockets.

The silk veil, so graceful and becoming to female beauty, has been perpetuated in the earliest times. The delight of Grecian ladies was to possess veils of a crimson or purple color, employed either for shading, concealing, or setting off the features, or to render the form more graceful by being thrown over the shoulders.

Mr. Falls, a well known Irish sportsman, happened one day to ride down a hound. The irascible, but witty master attacked him in no very measured language. "Sir," was the reply; "if I have you recollect that I am Mr. Falls, of Dungannon. The answer was ready; "I don't care if you are Mr. Falls of Niagara; you shan't ride over my hounds."

Jewels.

Among the larger establishments of which Brooklyn has reason to be proud, one of the most prominent is that of HART BROS., the Jewelers on Fulton and Johnson streets, where may be found Jewelry of every description, embracing every novelty in Rings, Necklaces, Pendants, Crosses, etc. We notice particularly their large assortment of the new style of Lockets and Scarf Pins, and nowhere have we seen such a large and beautiful stock of Silver Flagree Goods, which they are offering at prices to suit the times. Watches they have both Gold and Silver, from the best makers in America and Europe, and their stock of Diamonds, Pearls and Cameos is both choice and beautiful, and at most satisfactory prices.

The Daily Stage.

ESTABLISHED 1874.

DEVOTED TO THE DRAMA, MUSIC AND ART.

PUBLICATION OFFICE,
38 Fulton Street,.....Brooklyn.

THE DAILY STAGE is the ONLY Home Programme in the several Theatres in Brooklyn; including
COL. SINN'S NEW PARK THEATRE,
THE ACADEMY OF MUSIC,
HOOLEY'S THEATRE,
OLYMPIC THEATRE.

THE DAILY STAGE is the neatest paper of its class in the country. As it reaches nightly a large number of the first people of Brooklyn, it is the BEST medium for advertising in the city.

All communications should be addressed,
BROOKLYN DAILY STAGE,
38 Fulton street, Brooklyn.

SPECIAL NOTICE.

Dramatic and other associations giving entertainments will be furnished with the DAILY STAGE more reasonably than ordinary programmes.

"THE STAGE" LAST SEASON.

During the past season, which commenced August 16, 1875, there has been 1,128 performances at the regular theatres, and 161 at other places, at all of which THE BROOKLYN DAILY STAGE was the programme. Consequently 1,289 editions of it were issued during the season that closed on June 10th. The circulation of the STAGE during the season was 1,500,000 copies, that being 34,651 per week for 43 weeks.

THE PARK THEATRE.

The excellent bill presented at the Park Theatre last week drew large houses, and satisfaction was depicted upon the countenances of all present. Col. Sinn thoroughly understands what is pleasing to a Brooklyn audience, and as a result always presents programmes which cannot fail to please. This week the attractions are up to the usual merit, and a very fine entertainment is offered. Among the artists who appear nightly are, the Ethiopian comedians, Weaver and Lawton; Miss Lottie Brown, in select ballads; Scanlan and Cronin, in an amusing Irish interlude; Karl Lind, in his feats while in an inverted position upon a pyramid formed of glass; Fields and Hoey, in their performances upon musical instruments, many of which have been invented by themselves; Miss Jennie Engel, the serio-comic vocalist; Johnson and Brune, in laughable songs and dances; the Brooklyn favorite, Sam Devere, in original banjosongs and witticisms. The performances each evening conclude with a 3 act drama, entitled "Lottie Lee; or, the Quicksands of Life," in which George R. Edeson, S. K. Chester, R. C. White, Miss Annie Ward Tiffany and the full dramatic company appear. Next week there will be another programme presented, and in a short time Miss Lucille Western will appear at this theatre. The usual matinees take place on Wednesday and Saturday afternoons.

HOOLEY'S OPERA HOUSE.

The excellent entertainment offered at this cosey place of amusement is at last beginning to be appreciated, and refined audiences once again throng the house. The work of restoring Hooley's Opera House to its old-time popularity has been a difficult one; but with characteristic energy Manager Hooley has spared nothing to carry out this enterprise, well knowing that in the end success must reward his efforts. The very best minstrel talent in the country was obtained without regard to expense, and the programmes presented here been carefully arranged to display the merits of the company, and at the same time to contain nothing that might call a blush to the cheek of any lady. At first, Mr. Hooley met with discouragement in the shape of small audiences, which, however, grew in size as the character of his entertainment became known, until now, his theatre is the resort of the better class of theatre goers, who know that a pleasant evening may be passed here. Each week there is a change of programme, and the one offered this week, is, if anything, superior to those heretofore presented. The usual matinees will be given on Wednesday and Saturday afternoons, and on Monday next there will be the usual change of bill. That Hooley's Opera House is worthy of patronage, will be evident to all who attend this week and witness the fine performance.

Clara Morris.

Miss Clare Morris end the Union Square Theatre Company, under the management of Messrs. Shook and Palmer, will appear at the Brooklyn Academy of Music, on Saturday evening, January 8, in the latest Union Square success, "Miss Multon." The performance is for the benefit of the sufferers by the late calamity. Notice will be be given in the daily papers when tickets may be secured, and those wishing seats will do well to buy in advance, as the demand will be large.

ABOUT WOMEN.

An old maid—A woman that has been made for a long time.

Young ladies ought to wear only religious papers on Sunday.

Woman first tempted man to eat; he took to drinking on his own account.

The young lady whose feelings were "all worked up" has ordered a fresh supply.

The prudent housewife makes her bread when she kneads it.

Eleven hundred girls are employed at one artificial flower factory in France, none being over twenty years of age.

"Matilda, I am young and rich, I can make you supremely happy." "You can, George, by leaving me forever." He went his way.

Mrs. Brown tells her husband not to sit in his chair sleeve, or he will catch cold. How can a man sit in his shirt sleeve?

Young ladies, says a Kansas editor, are always ready for young gentlemen to make their "statements."

A lady of fashion stepped into a shop not long since, and asked the keeper if he had any matrimonial baskets, she being too polite to say cradles.

"Pray, Mr. Professor, what is peripherals?" "Madam, it is simply a circumlocutory cycle of oratorical sonorosity, circumscribing an atom of ideality lost in verbal profundity." Thank you, sir."

A lady who was inoticutive at whist has broken off her engagement with her lover, because he recommended her to "scoop her mind up with a peanut shell and fix it on the game."

A young woman of Chicago objects to the new silver coins because the Goddess of Liberty is dressed just as she was fifty years ago, and that's so servilly "old fashioned."

Two ladies are discussing a third, who is, of course, absent. "She is really charming," says one; "end, above all, she has such an air of intelligence." "Yes," answers the other, "but there are no words to that air."

Enamored writing master to a young pupil: "I can teach you nothing; your hand is already a very desirable one, and your I's (eyes) are the most beautiful I ever saw."

A young lady, while on her way to be married, was run over and killed. A confirmed old maid savagely remarked, "she has avoided a more lingering and horrible destiny."

A beautiful but blind young lady recovered her sight after marriage. On hearing this an old bachelor wickedly observed that it was no uncommon thing for people's eyes to be opened by matrimony.

Little Robbie went to a show and saw an elephant for the first time in his life. When he came home his mother asked him what he had seen. "An elephant, mamma, that gobbled hay with his front tail."

A Brooklyn man who had received an invitation from friends in Philadelphia to come and visit the Centennial, wrote back: "You are very kind, but since I married and became familier with the mysteries of e woman's wardrobe, variety shows have lost their charm for me."

An Unfair Move.

A nervous man, whose life was made miserable by the chattering of two blacksmiths, prevailed upon each of them to remove by the offer of a liberal compensation. When the money was paid down, he kindly inquired what neighborhood they intended to remove to. "Why, sir," replied Jack with a grin, "Tom Smith moves to my shop, and I move to his." All parties who move in any part of Brooklyn will find it to their advantage to get their furniture and Carpets at John F. Meson's, corner of Myrtle avenue and Bridge street.

Thrown on the World.

This charming story was published in the New York Weekly, and met with overwhelming success. Messrs. Street & Smith have it now republished in book form and elegantly bound. Price, $1.50 For sale by all newsdealers, or at the office of the New York Weekly, 31 Rose street, New York, and of the American News Company.

Nothing Better

For a Christmas Present. There is nothing that will prove more lasting than a ticket for one quarter's dancing lessons at C. H. RIVER'S Academy, 178 State street. Don't forget the children, and let them have a knowledge of dancing in time. There's nothing better.

Artificial Teeth.

Good and reliable work. Skillful treatment, and moderate charges. DR. HENDERSON, the old established dentist, 310 Washington street, opposite the Post Office.

A Useful Patent.

One of the most useful articles that was visible at the various Summer Hotels was JAMES H. STEARN'S PATENT TRUNK. This trunk has no equal, and is not expensive. Besides all kinds of Trunks you will find at STEARNS', corner of Fulton and Johnson streets (under Tice's Jewelry store), a complete stock of Bags, Portmanteaus, etc.

A Result from Advertising

U. KERSTEAD, the Jeweler, of 15 Sands street, is, perhaps, one of the best advertised men in Brooklyn; his name may be seen in almost every advertising medium in the city. The result is that he is doing a thriving trade, and repairs more watches than any jeweler in the city.

Shakspeare Given Away.

Every reader of the New York Family Story Paper this week is entitled to the 3rd part of a beautifully illustrated volume of Shakspeare, royal octavo size. A part will be given away each week until completed.

Physical Culture.

Everybody should develop their bodies at BURNHAM'S Academy, corner Smith and Schermerhorn street.

LESSONS IN ELOCUTION AND ACTING.—After many years experience as a successful teacher, the subscriber solicits the attention of those ladies and gentlemen who desire to study Poetic Reading, or for the stage. FIRST-CLASS CARRIAGES to let at all hours by P. SHAUGHNESSY, at EXCELSIOR Stables, 229 and 231 Washington street. Wedding, Visiting and Theatre calls promptly attended to.

Miss Anna Dickinson.

"Cross and Crown," Miss Anna Dickinson's new play, will be produced at the Arch Street Theatre, Philadelphia, on Nov. 27. As it is usual with this house when any unusual production is put on, the services of our Brooklyn costumer, of 368 Fulton street, are called into requisition. The costumes are elegant in the extreme, and doubtless add to his already large Philadelphia reputation. Such orders as the above enables EAVES to offer unusual advantages to local trade.

Irish or Yank.

Mr. Francis S. Smith, one of the proprietors of the New York Weekly, has written a story, entitled "Yankee Luke and Irish Luke; or, Small Boys with big Hearts." The story will shortly be commenced in the New York Weekly, and those fond of good reading should be sure to get the Weekly, as Mr. Smith's stories are of the best.

About Dress-Making.

Miss L. MINNICK, of 301 Fulton street (over S. B. Jones). Ladies' Costumes made up in the most artistic styles. out of small quantities of material. Cutting and fitting a specialty; prices reasonable.

PERSONAL AND DRAMATIC NOTES.

THOMPSON.—Miss Charlotte Thompson was at Wilmington, Del., on Christmas.

WEATHERBY.—Ellen Weatherby has rejoined the "Evangeline" Combination.

LAMB.—Ed. Lamb is with Daly's traveling "Pique" Combination.

EXITS.—Four new exits have been made from the auditorium of the Union Square Theatre.

HOOLEY.—Manager R. M. Hooley is giving fine entertainments at his neat little Opera House.

SINN.—Col. Sinn continues to keep up a big show. The business is commencing to look like old times.

ROBERTSON.—Agnes Robertson (Mrs. Dion Boucicault,) directed a rehearsal at Booth's Theatre recently.

HILL.—Harry Hill, not he of sporting celebrity, but a Newark litterateur, has written a drama, entitled "Raus Romanny."

WESTERN.—Lucille Western is at the Walnut Street Theatre, Philadelphia, this week. She will be at Sinn's Park Theatre next week.

SHAUGHRAUN.—Last Saturday night the "Shaughraun" was presented for the 200th time.

KELLOGG.—The Kellogg English Opera Company, under the management of C. D. Hess, is filling a two weeks' engagement in Chicago.

SOTHERN.—Sothern, now in Detroit, will play at Chicago and St. Louis on his way to San Francisco, where he is booked for January 23d.

CHANFRAU.—Mrs. Chanfrau, supported by her own company, will play in Reading on the 5th.

SELLERS.—Col. Sellers is at St. Louis, playing his last engagement previous to appearing at the Park Theatre, New York, where he will be supported by Miss Marie Gordon.

DAVENPORT.—E. L. Davenport will play a two weeks' engagement at the Walnut Street Theatre, Philadelphia, commencing January 8th.

GROVER.—Leonard Grover's new play, "Our Boarding House," has met with success in San Francisco. It will be produced at a New York theatre this season.

MULTON.—"Miss Multon" will be played at the Brooklyn Academy on Saturday, for the benefit of the sufferers by the late fire. The receipts from the late union matinees will probably aggregate about $13,000.

SOTHERN.—Mr. Sothern opens in September next at the Eagle Theatre, New York, for a season of four months and longer, if success continue. He has no less than twelve new plays in his coming repertoire, and these will all be tested.

ROBSON.—Col. Starbottle (Stuart Robson), who has been doing Cape Crosstree in Boston, denies that he is "responsible, personally responsible" for the questionable remarks made by his whilom agent, Theodore Hamilton, before a Coroner's jury in this city.

DANICHEFF.—"Les Danicheff" was placed in rehearsal at the Union Square Theatre on Tuesday. Not that there is any intention of withdrawing "Miss Multon" for the present; nor is there any necessity of so doing. What affected this play was being taken off for almost a week in the midst of its run. A good deal of money will be spent to readvertise it. "Les Danicheff" will not be played until the middle of February. Charles R. Thorne, James O'Neill, Sara Jewett, Fanny Morant, and John Parselle are in the cast.

When a woman blushes and weeps, can she be said to raise a hue and cry?

Good news for poor travelers in France—The second and third class carriages on all the railways are in future to be heated in winter by reservoirs of hot water, a luxury hitherto monopolized by the first.

Governors in New York will hereafter hold office for three years. Hence that State will not again vote for Governor and President at the same time until 1888.

ODDS AND ENDS.

A dry subject—The mummy.

A mustard plaster is a warm personal friend.

Out of season—An empty pepper box.

Bad timber—Returning boards.

Ministers of war—Fighting par-ons.

The third river in Scotland is the forth.

Preferred creditors—Those who don't dun.

A HUSBAND OF THE PERIOD.

Yes, love, I'm breakfasting quite late;
But then, you know, it's Sunday,
And we who work for six long days
Deserve our comfort one day.
You're rather early home from church;
I hoped you liked the sermon,
That velvet cloak, dear, by the way,
Looks charming with your ermine.

A chilly morning out of doors;
I'm glad you didn't wake me,
(Oh, native cunning, mother wit,
Pray do not yet forsake me!
She heard me stumble up to bed
At three o'clock—I'd swear it!)
Dark blue is just your color, dear;
You always ought to wear it.

I've eaten very little! Yes,
It's nearly time for dinner;
This cutlet, too, seems rather flat,
(The truth is, as I'm a sinner!)
A bloodshot look about my eyes!
My fingers in a flutter!
All fancy, love, I feel superb,
(That nauseating butter!)

You waited up last night till twelve!
For that, dear, I should scold you.
Of monthly meetings at the club
How often have I told you!
This waiting—had I not a key,
Perhaps I shouldn't mind it;
But having one—(by Jove, I took An hour, last night, to find it!)

I left the hall door open! Who Insinuates that slander?
It's a falsehood, base and infamous,
If you'll excuse my candor.
Why, love, you trust mere servant's talk
I cannot well conjecture.
(She seats herself! The storm has burst,
Now comes my curtain lecture.)

LADIES' FASHIONS.

[WRITTEN FOR THE BROOKLYN DAILY STAGE.]

The first week of the new year introduces an endless variety of dress fabrics. Many of wool are soft and shiny of texture, and quite suitable for the clinging, scantily draped Princess that is so popular. Broken woven patterns prevail to some extent; but damasse, combined with plain materials that harmonize in color, seems to be greatly preferred. Velveteens mixed with stripes of silk or satin will be favored also. One of the most novel of striped fabrics has threads of red silk woven on a dark green silk ground; another of the same pattern is of lavender or dark plum color; and the most elegant is a dark brown woven with cream color. A cheaper material is of fine, soft woolen, of every variety of color, threaded with red, blue, pale lemon, and every imaginable and indescribable tint. But perhaps the great novelty of the season is a new fabric of royal, fine and dark, lightened by spare strands of colored silk.

Many dresses and costumes made in the latest goods are exceedingly handsome, and not very expensive.

One of these, given as a model, is of a plain prune colored, woolen fabric. The skirt is narrow, and has a demi-train, and is edged by a graduated flounce, deep in the back and slanting toward the front, and headed by a wide bias band of the same, striped diagonally with turquoise blue. The long, Princess polonaise is buttoned straight down the front, and draped at the back under a pointed tab; the cuffs of the sleeves, the pocket, and every outline is trimmed with the diagonally turquoise stripe to match the skirt.

You know everybody said last winter that fur would not be worn this season, because it got so common then!

What a mistake!

Why, there never was so much fur used as now; the market is already drained, and the next we hear of will be a famine in fur; and then to think of all the animals that will be trap coaxed next season.

Queer world this; there is but little enjoyment, that costs a life (even though it be a dumb brute,) in some shape.

New shapes for pockets are introduced every week; and it is quite probable that they will help to adorn the drapery of all new dresses for a considerable time to come. They are ornamental, certainly, and in a small way quite convenient, especially when a purse or valuable handkerchief is carried in them, but only—for bold pickpockets.

The gentlemen are following suit; they wear suits of invisible checks, coats trimmed with fur, the same as we.

Did you ever notice how nearly those horrid men follow in the wake of our fashion?

I really believe if the most of them were put on the confessional rack, they would own their greatest grief was that they could not wear a "bustle" and a "pull-back skirt."

LOOKOUT.

Attention, Ladies.

Those ladies who desire to economize can do so by calling at No. 332 Macon street one door from Yates avenue, (no sign), where they can have beautiful and fashionable bonnets made for fifty cents, by a private milliner of years' experience, who can give the best of reference. Old materials made to look equal to new.

About Segars.

A fine segar is a good thing, but there is so much deceit in the business of late that a man is almost afraid to take the chance of purchasing a box at any price. For good segars, at fair prices, go to R.T. Vandeveer, Opera Cigar Store, corner Fulton and Court street.

Skating.

The only place to have your Skates ground and repaired is at HEROS & KIPP'S, Brooklyn Skate Depot, 316 Fulton street, near Pierrepont. Largest assortment of Club and Wood Top Skates in the city.

Valuable Information.

The cosey, and it every respect, complete Academy for Dancing, 175 State street, corner of Court street, presided over by the popular and enterprising teacher, C. H. RIVERS, is now open for the Fall and Winter. If one can't learn to dance under Mr. Rivers' instruction, give it up.

ESTABLISHED 1874.

DEVOTED TO THE DRAMA, MUSIC AND ART.

PUBLICATION OFFICE,
38 Fulton Street,.....Brooklyn.

THE DAILY STAGE is the ONLY House Programme in the several Theatres in Brooklyn; including THE BROOKLYN THEATRE.
COL. SINN'S NEW PARK THEATRE.
THE ACADEMY OF MUSIC,
HOOLEY'S THEATRE.
OLYMPIC THEATRE.
THE DAILY STAGE is the neatest paper of its class in the country. As it reaches nightly a large number of the first people of Brooklyn, it is the next medium for advertising in the city.
All communications should be addressed,
BROOKLYN DAILY STAGE,
38 Fulton street, Brooklyn.

SPECIAL NOTICE.

Dramatic and other associations giving entertainments will be furnished with the DAILY STAGE more reasonably than ordinary programmes.

"THE STAGE" LAST SEASON.

During the past season, which commenced August 16, 1875, there has been 1,238 performances at the regular theatres, and 161 at other places, at all of which THE BROOKLYN DAILY STAGE was the programme. Consequently 1,399 editions of it were issued during the season that closed on June 10th. The circulation of the STAGE during the season was 1,500,000 copies, that being 34,651 per week for 43 weeks.

EXTRA MATINEE.

There will be matinees at the Academy of Music, Park Theatre, Hooley's, and Olympic Theatre, on Thursday, Thanksgiving day, at 2 P. M.

THE BROOKLYN THEATRE.

An exceptionally fine bill is presented at the Brooklyn Theatre this week in the shape of Shakespeare's great historical tragedy, "Julius Cæsar," with Messrs. Davenport and Barrett in the cast. It is very rarely that the public have the opportunity of witnessing "Julius Cæsar" presented in as complete a manner as it is at the Brooklyn Theatre this week. New scenery, rich costumes, and in fact all the elegance and grandeur of Roman palatial days are here reproduced upon the stage. Messrs. Davenport and Barrett, as Brutus and Cassius, have established a reputation of which they have reason to be proud, and which has long since preceded them here. Mr. Davenport possesses all the necessary accomplishments to well represent the Roman Senator, with his dignity and polish, while Mr. Barrett, as Cassius, ably portrays that spirited character. Their names have, in fact, almost become synonymous with the play, and their appearance is always a guarantee of the success of a tragedy to which age has added popularity. They are supported this week by the full dramatic company of the theatre and Mr. Wards, who plays the part of Antony, in a highly creditable manner and with excellent effect. Those who have never been so fortunate as to have seen "Julius Cæsar" presented upon the stage should embrace this opportunity of doing so, and even those who have should go again, as it is a play which is, perhaps, more to be enjoyed at the second presentation than at the first. Next week the "Two Orphans" will be produced, with an excellent cast.

THE PARK THEATRE.

Col. Sinn makes an entire change of programme this week, and introduces several new faces. Among those who appear nightly are the Gangeroo, known as the Royal Japs, who give exhibitions of their skill in magic, jugglery and gymnastic feats. This troupe consists of five persons, who were formerly attached to the house of the Mikado of Japan, for his Majesty's amusement, and some of their feats are remarkable. There also appears at each performance, Harry Kennedy, a ventriloquist; Schoolcraft and Coes, Ethiopian vocalists and comedians; Lizzie Barrett, a serio comic vocalist; Fred Warren, a Dutch comique; Harris and Carroll, character specialists, and Sam Devere. The performance closes each evening with a new piece, entitled "The Brooklyn Mechanic; or, the Clinton Avenue Heiress," with the full dramatic company of the theatre in the cast. The scenes and incidents of this piece are located entirely in Brooklyn, and many parts of it possess considerable merit. The attraction next week at this theatre is Mr. F. S. Chanfrau, in his celebrated character of "Kit."

HOOLEY'S OPERA HOUSE.

Once again the old-time favorite familiarly known as "Dick" Hooley, returns to Brooklyn to manage the cosey little theatre which bears his name. As an amusement caterer, Mr. Hooley is well known to the Brooklyn public as one who believes in giving only first-class entertainments, which shall be highly amusing, and at the same time embrace nothing that might shock the most fastidious taste. Although entertainments of an unrefined character may exist for a time and be very popular among a certain class, Mr. Hooley believes that in the end, only a first-class entertainment, which may be patronised by refined society, will continue in popularity. With this idea in view, he presents to the public this week an excellent minstrel company, embracing artists of reputation. Among those who appear are, Billy Rice, the comedian; Fayette Welch, this being his first appearance in our midst, and the cast Little Mac, Baker and Doyle, Justine Robinson, E. M. Kayne, J. K. Campbell, Karl Steele and Cool White, the whole forming a vocal sextet and a complete orchestra. This is without doubt one of the best minstrel companies that could have been selected, and in presenting them Mr. Hooley has shown that he has not forgotten what constitutes a popular, and at the same time, first-class entertainment. Matinees are to be given weekly, on Wednesdays and Saturdays. Next week there will be an entire change of programme, and new songs, sketches, etc., will be introduced.

OLYMPIC THEATRE.

When Manager Chevalier opened the Olympic Theatre this season, it was with the determination to make it a permanent success, and as a consequence he has presented excellent programmes, which have weekly added to his popularity. This week he offers an exceedingly novel entertainment, embracing Female Minstrelsy, drama and variety. Besides a full troupe of Female Minstrels, there appears each evening, Mr. Frank Jones, in his musical specialties, and in a new sketch, entitled "Bill Buster;" Prof. W. A. Allen, in Indian bar tricks, etc.; Mr. J. H. Ryan and Miss Josie Willard, in Irish specialties; Master Leo, in his musical performance on glasses; Hawkins and Smith, in songs and dances, and the Ateeline Sisters, in their clog dances. The performance each evening closes with the production of the "Female Forty Thieves."

Marksmen, Attention!

Those who have not already subscribed to the Marksmen's Record, soon to be published by Ed. R. DARVEAU, should do so on the first opportunity. It is a handsome thing, and every Marksman in the Second Division should have one.

CARLSON, 172 Bridge street, pays the biggest prices in America for cast-off clothing.

WHAT WOMEN WILL WEAR.

[WRITTEN FOR THE BROOKLYN DAILY STAGE.]

Every week brings a large display of new materials and new colors, in a variety that almost defies description or classification. Terry velvet is again coming into fashion, and plush will be used for entire costumes, and is an admirable imitation of otter.

In colors there are four shades of brown fashionable—variations of the neat and elegant seal and bronze brown. There is also a "royal blue" that is nearly black, and a lovely oak-leaf green.

Tunics and polonaise are still made so immoderately long that they almost hide the underskirt; and the newest caprice is to place a band or flounce, or both, beneath the bottom edge to simulate the underskirt itself. This is a most economical new whim, as the addition may be made of any heavier and darker fabric, and of the same or any other color.

For young people who are anticipating the pleasures of the skating rink, a few toilets have been already devised. Young misses, according to their complexion, may choose from blue, claret, green, gray, or cardinal cashmere or cloth trimmed with fur, with hat, scarf, and stockings to match.

It is fashionable for lady equestrians who ride gray horses to wear gray habits. In all cases the color of her dress must match the color of her horse, as well as be becoming to her style of beauty. It is rather an odd freak, but I presume it will take.

The little folks are wearing dresses cuter than ever; a new design in infantile wraps for them, is, to use seal-brown silk for a sacque and shoulder cape, with one thickness of wadding between it and the lining, then quilt it in diamonds and arabesques, a small flower in each diamond. Belt it with a seal-brown sash. A cap to match, makes a rich little suit.

Artificial flowers for brides and bridesmaids are no longer considered fashionable. A bride's dress may be of rich material, but it should be simply made, and artistically decorated with real orange blossoms. A bridesmaid may wear a pale silk dress ornamented with clusters of freshly gathered roses.

Three cornered silk handkerchiefs, edged with lace, are shown for wearing around the neck.

A new notion in the way of reticules, to be worn with street dress, is made of black velvet, ornamented with silver, and with a silver chain to attach it to the belt. The reticule is very little larger than an ordinary purse.

Gloves, whether Danish or of kid, are worn very long, entirely covering the wrist, and coming inside the sleeve, which is rather open at the bottom. It is usual to wear five or six-buttoned gloves.

A suitable ball toilette for a young lady is made of pale-blue silk and ivory-colored cuttack, which is a kind of silk canvas. The train is of blue silk, bordered with two flounces, pulled very closely. The front of the skirt is of the cuttack striped with bias of the blue silk. The over-skirt of the same cuttack is also striped with blue and trimmed with blue and white lace, or blue and white fringe; a large bow of blue silk is placed on the right side. A low corsage—cuirasse of cuttack cut in large scollops around the bottom, and striped with blue ending with a long point between each scollop. The neck is trimmed with lace, and bows of the silk and lace on each shoulder complete this beautiful toilette.

A bonnet called the baby capote is made of ivory satin, surrounded with a drapery of prune-colored velvet and ivory satin, which falls back on the neck. Ivory lace is set round the hat, and the strings are of the same lace. A plume of prune-colored feathers on the right side completes this little gem of a bonnet.

Another, called the chaperon-directoire is made of velvet and faye, mode shade. The brim is of plaited faye raised up at the front, kept down and rather wide behind. The crown rather high, is of velvet, adorned with a feather of the same shade. In front is a wreath of oxyacia. This is very pretty for a young lady.

SUNNYBOY.

Ee Did Play It.

Once, when John Kemble played "Hamlet" in the country, the gentleman who enacted Guildenstern was, or imagined himself to be, a capital musician. Hamlet asks him: "Will you play upon this pipe?" "My Lord, I cannot." "I pray you." "Believe me, I cannot." "I do beseech you." "Well, if your lordship insists on it, I shall do as well as I can;" and, to the confusion of Hamlet, and the great amusement of the audience, he played "God Save the King." We beseech to tell you that JOHN F. MACK'S is the place to buy good Carpets and Furniture very cheap. Corner of Myrtle avenue and Bridge street.

Sleight-of-Hand.

CASSENAVE, the great sleight-of-hand performer, will be at the Brooklyn Academy of Music again, on Friday and Saturday evenings, Dec. 3rd and 4th, and will also give a matinee Saturday, at 2 P. M.

Valuable Information.

The cosey, and in every respect, complete Academy for Dancing, 175 State street, corner of Court street, presided over by the popular and enterprising teacher, C. H. Rivers, is now open for the Fall and Winter. If one can't learn to dance under Mr. Rivers' instruction, give it up.

Masquerade Parties.

Private masquerade parties promise to be all the rage this season. Ever, the costumer, of 303 Fulton street, says there have not been as many calls, so early in the season, for years. There is also some talk of a grand masquerade ball at the Academy of Music, in January next, with grand historical tableau, marches, etc.

Physical Culture.

Everybody should develop their bodies at BOSWORTH'S Academy, corner Smith and Schermerhorn street.

PERSONAL AND DRAMATIC NOTES.

ORPHAN.—The "Two Orphans" will be played at the Brooklyn Theatre next week.

SINN.—Col. Sinn continues to produce new attractions every week at the Park.

MINSTRELS.—The Female Minstrels continue to draw full houses at the Brooklyn Olympic.

CAZENEUVE.—Cazeneuve drew in good house at the Academy on Nov. 20, notwithstanding the weather.

ADAMS.—We are glad to hear that Mr. Edwin Adams was at date of last advices quite well and acting very successfully in Melbourne.

MORRIS.—Miss Clara Morris is the leading attraction of New York, in the new play of "Miss Multon," at the Union Square Theatre.

HOOLEY.—R. M. Hooley has re-opened Hooley's Opera House this week with a fine minstrel company.

FIELD.—Miss Kate Field has appeared in London as a singer. She is said to have more chance of success in that line than as an actress.

THOMPSON.—Charlotte Thompson, during her engagement in Philadelphia, will play two new plays, "The Rescue," by Mr. Louis Vider, and "Only a Woman," by Lancaster and Magnus.

OATES.—The New Broadway Theatre, late Wood's Museum, is to open on Dec. 18, with the Oates Opera Bouffe Company. Mr. Samuel Colville, manager.

CAZENEUVE.—Cazeneuve, the great sleight-of-hand performer, will be at the Academy of Music, Friday and Saturday, Dec. 22d and 23d. There will be a Cazeneuve matinee on Saturday, the 23d, at 2 o'clock.

RUBENSDORFF.—Madame Rudersdorff has formed a soirette, to be composed of Misses Virginia Belmont, Georgia Cousilin, Mary Turner, Gabrielle Allen, Annie Parker and Marion Keeney; soloist, pianist and accompanist, Miss Franc Wheeler.

PROCTOR.—Mr. Joseph Proctor, the tragedian, enters the lecture field for the first time this season. He will shortly appear at Tremont Temple in a Shakespearean lecture, with analytical comparisons and commente upon the characters of Richard III., Othello, and Iago, with illustrative selections from the dramas in which those characters occur.

DIVORCE.—The cast for "Wanted, a Divorce," at the Grand Opera House, San Francisco, was: Armand Patrivard, M. V. Lingham; Monsieur Tradivant, J. B. Polk; Henry de Bagnolles, M. A. Kennedy; Madame de Mursan, Miss Eleanor Carey; Madame Laguesy, Miss Emily M. Stayer; Fanchette, Miss Katy Mayhew; Therese, Miss Gertie Granville.

SUCCESS.—The London Hornet gives the following list of American successes, which it hopes will sooner or later reach the English capital: "Davy Crockett," with Mr. Frank Mayo; "Conscience," with Miss Claxton; "The Mighty Dollar," with Mr. W. J. Florence; the Fifth Avenue Company in "Pique," "Life," and "Divorce;" Lotta in "Zip;" and Booth in "Leap" and "The Apostate." Our contemporary has not mentioned Mr. Booth's strongest parts, which are unquestionably Hamlet and Iago.

EAGLE.—The Eagle will be turned into a star theatre next season, with Charles R. Gardiner, at present of the Arch Street Theatre, Philadelphia, as the manager; Mr. Joseph Hart remaining, of course, as proprietor. The plan pursued will be the engagement of the best stars, beginning in the month of August. Variety will, of course, disappear forever from this house. These arrangements will probably preclude the engagement of a comedy company this season. Arrangements have already been completed with a number of the most prominent stars for next year.

The latest novelty as an ornament for ladies' hair is the combination back comb (patented), consisting of two combs, connected by a number of fine bands. As worn on the back braid, it makes a handsome and unique ornament.

OUR BABY.

Have you seen a little darling,
Dimpled, dainty, sweet and fair!
"Our Baby," is this cherub,
With its soft, brown silken hair.
They handle, just now so helpless—
Deep and dark its baby eyes—
Rich to us in childish beauty,
Has it strayed from Paradise!

Fairer than the dream of poet,
Purer than the stainless snow;
Has it wandered out of Heaven,
To these earthly realms below!
For our hearts that watch it, trembling
With excesses of mortal love.
"Our Baby," so richly dowered
By the seraph hosts above.

Clasp it closely, doting parents,
With the kind, parental arm;
Lent you only, it this treasure,
Guard it well from earthly harm.
"Our Baby" will cling forever
'Round the tendrils of your heart,
And its joyous, loving nature,
Sunshine to your life impart.

Father! guard "Our Babe" from sin—
(Need we all this care of Thine)
Oh! comfort and sustain in trouble,
Bless it with Thy peace divine.

FASHION GOSSIP.

DEAR STAGE—I heard a lady say, yesterday, she has been traveling in the Old World; that she could "get a handsomer cosey chair in Paris for less money than she could buy the plainest silk here." When you wants a "mory" go to the other side to get it, by all means.

Where have I been? What have I seen? I believe those were the queries of me in your last.

Well, I've heard Beecher in one of his eloquent lectures, in which he says something; not a few quotations from talented authors, not what no one said to him, but his own, in his own master mind, that can see, reason, and expand for itself.

Then I went to Barnum's great moral show one night, and saw the baby hippopotamus. Great baby that; it looks like a four-year old bay pig. I suppose I ought to say. It's an ugly looking beast; but I suppose, like all babies, awfully cunning.

Wonder what Moody and Sankey would say to see their consecrated ground desecrated by knights of the ring! There is more applause than there was last winter, and the audience, well—they may not be the same people, but they are the same in spirit—curiosity seekers.

We hear of gigantic swindles and thefts. Why, the other day, a man just from the mines went into a "pleasure hall" to take a chance at a game of faro; hung his overcoat on a hook for the purpose, and when he was ready to go, the coat had gone first; and that coat had a deed for a million dollars' worth of claims in it, beside all the chap's money. So you see, there is something else can have "millions in it" besides Col. Sellers' eye water.

I wish you might have been with me yesterday when out sight-seeing.

Broadway has its beatest dress on again, and looks charming.

There is so much cardinal worn and displayed in shops, that melancholy does not exist in coloring, and it's a real relief to see bright red plumes bobbing in the wind, and ribbons flying as far up or down the promenade, as one can look.

There are lovely collarettes worn this fall, some are made of a cardinal feather band with broad lace edge, quite full, falling over the shoulders, while above there are two or three rows quilled full and standing. They are fastened in front with either the bead of a bird or cardinal bow. These are ever so pretty; then there are real tasty affairs for brightening a costume for home and evening, made of black or white lace, pointed behind and coming quite low in front, with square ends. These are made with bows, loops or puffs or ribbon, in any shade one may fancy.

There are also crepe collarettes, pretty bend embroidered in silk floss, and edged all around with a narrow quilling of white "liss." One in cream, another in cardinal, that I looked after with longing eyes, and dreamed about since.

I saw a new Paris bonnet. It was ever so pretty; black velvet with three ostrich tips; the front high, and narrowing close to the ears; a bandeaux inside the brim of a puff of cardinal velvet, and two flat loops with short ends of three-inch-wide cardinal ribbon was placed just under the cape of hat at the back. Not a flower, not an ornament. It was quietly elegant.

A "love of a dress," for evening, is of pale gray silk, the front breadths of the long skirt entirely plain at the bottom, and the long back breadths edged with a narrow knife plaiting of poppy red silk headed with a double plaiting of gray, with a bias dividing band. Three wide bias, rounded pieces of gray trimmed to match, are closely draped entirely round the skirt, the ends caught up and fastened on the left side by large sash-like bows of poppy red. The gray cuirasse bodice and tightly fitting elbow sleeves are trimmed to correspond.

Hamburg dresses are usually supplied by the maker with a rucking of crepe lisse in the neck and around the sleeves, before sending out; and as a rule, rucking is the most popular neck dress. For more practical use, however, linen collars and cuffs are in greater favor—the pure white, varied by those banded, bordered, or made of colored percale—cardinal-red, Chinese blue, ecru, gray, and black all being in vogue.

Linen collars and cuffs are often finished with lace rucking.

The latest cloaks are made a usual length sacque, finished with trimming; this to wear in moderate weather; a short of the same fully trimmed, is made with loops at the back bottom under the sacque at the bottom, making it in a trice an elegant winter cloak, nearly as long as the dress.

Who shall say fashion is not progressive, when two elegant outer wraps are combined in one.

This is too lovely a morning to stop indoors, so pray excuse me. I'm off for the promenade.

LOOKOUT.

An Immense Livery Stable.

Parties wishing to hire a Coach, Clarence, Pony Phaeton, or Light Wagon, will find no better place in Brooklyn than at Joseph Johnson's Livery Stable, 5, 10 and 12 Nevins street. That is the largest Boarding and Livery Stable in the city, and what Mr. Johnson has not got in the line of livery it will be impossible to find elsewhere.

A Useful Patent.

One of the most useful articles that was visible at the various Summer Hotels was JAMES M. SPEAR'S PATENT TWINE. This trunk has no equal, and is not expensive. Besides the cover of Twines you will find at SPEAR, corner of Fulton and Johnson streets (under Tice's Jewelry store), a complete stock of Bags, Portmanteaus, etc.

A Result from Advertising.

D. KRISTLER, the jeweler, of 38 Sands street, is, perhaps, one of the best advertised men in Brooklyn; his name may be seen in almost every advertising medium in the city. The result is that he is doing a thriving trade, and repairs more watches than any jeweler in the city.

Smoky Chimneys Cured.

The Gothic Patent Chimney Top and Ventilator, applied on trial for thirty days. Manufactured by JAMES H. WHITLEY, Stoves, Ranges, etc., 311 Fulton street, near Concord, Brooklyn.

DR. ROMAINE'
Depot for GOLDEN SARSPRIZE,
259 Varick street,
New York.

The Family Ale Keg.

Thousands will be pleased to know that they can buy a keg of fine Amber Ale, containing one gallon, for 75 cents. The keg is a patent and is fitted with a handy faucet (the keg to be returned), and delivered free to any part of the city. J. V. DEGELS, 197 Joralemon street.

Whiter than Snow, Blacker than a Crow.

Or any other color of any kind or quality to please the Ladies, at WURTZ'S Hair Emporium, 302 Fulton street, Brooklyn, up stairs. One of the most comfortable parlor, polite attention, and the largest stock of Hair Goods in the world. Prices way down.

Aboit Segars.

A fine segar is a good thing, but there is so much deceit in the business of late that a man is almost afraid to take the chance of purchasing a box at any price. For good segars, at fair prices, go to H. T. VANDER C., Opera Cigar Store, corner Fulton and Court street.

Attention, Ladies.

Those ladies who desire to economize can do so by calling at 332 Macon street (no sign), where they can have beautiful and fashionable bonnets made for fifty cents, by a private milliner of years' experience, who can give the best of references. Old materials made to look equal to new.

About Dress-Making.

MISS L. MISKIMIN, of 321 Fulton street (over S. B. Jones). Ladies' Costumes made up in the most artistic styles, out of small quantities of material. Cutting and fitting a specialty; prices reasonable.

Just the Same.

In Fulton street, corner of Johnson, DR. COLVIN has his branch office, in charge of his nephew, R. G. COLVIN, M. D. Gas and operations precisely as in New York.

SCROLL SAWING has become quite a fashion, and ladies, gentlemen and girls have become great experts. All the necessary saws, patterns and wood of all kinds, can be had at HAGAR & KIPP'S, 318 Fulton street, Brooklyn.

LESSONS IN ELOCUTION AND ACTING.—After many years experience as a successful teacher, the subscriber solicits the attention of those ladies and gentlemen who desire to study Poetic Reading, or for the stage. Voice, gesture and facial expression, fully considered. Inquire at 353 Bergen st., above Fourth av., Brooklyn. GABRIAL HARRISON.

The highest price ever before given paid for Pawn Tickets on any kind of goods at CAMERON'S 172 Bridge street, Brooklyn.

FEATHERS AND QUAIL SHOOTING.—The season opened on this island on Oct. 1st, and the game is plenty. To know where to go to, get your information from Hogg & Kiffe, 318 Fulton street, Sportsmen's supplies.

BUSINESS MEN, we work very cheap and satisfactory. Printers' Cuts, Bill Heads, Shipping Circulars, etc., neatly, cheaply and promptly. MARTIN & BENNETT, 185 Montague street, opposite the main entrance to the Academy of Music.

FIRST-CLASS CARRIAGES to let at all hours by P. SCANLON, at Stables of Clarence Hubbs, 39 and 41 Washington street, Wedding, Visiting and Theatre calls promptly attended to.

REMOVAL OF
Koch's, of 438 Fulton Street, to a Larger and Finer Building.

An increased and increasing business has made it necessary for the above firm to seek larger and more commodious quarters, they have, therefore, at a great expense, fitted up the corner of Fulton Street and Elm Place, with an entrance on Fulton Place in the most approved and modern style, giving them nearly three times the capacity of room formerly occupied by them at the old stand.

Larger facilities, superinduced in part by their N. Y. Store, on Twenty-third Street, coupled with the fact of their store being overcrowded during the busy season, and complaints being made by their customers of the overcrowded condition, has also made it a matter of necessity for them to seek more commodious quarters.

This is the largest and best equipped establishment, devoted exclusively to millinery, in the country.

Their formal and first full opening, in their new quarters, took place on the 9th and 10th of September, and was one of the grandest affairs ever witnessed in this city.

Upon the third floor was an Industrial Exhibition, showing the various industries in which this firm is engaged in manufacturing.

One of the looms from the ribbon factory, weaving ribbon by electricity, was on exhibition. Some of the people from their feather and flower factory demonstrated how flowers and feathers are made. Making hats was also one of the features.

This was one of the interesting phases of the opening. The first floor will be entirely devoted to Untrimmed Hats, Ribbons, Flowers, Feathers, Velvets, Laces, Ornamentie, in fact everything appertaining to a first-class Millinery establishment.

The second floor, which can be reached by a commodious elevator, will be entirely devoted to Trimmed Millinery. These parlors, which have a dimension of 200 feet, will contain one of the largest and finest assortment of Trimmed Hats in this country.

There are many novel and beautiful features connected with these rooms, which will make them the rendezvous for shoppers in millinery not found elsewhere.

Interspersed here and there will be found beautiful Moorish Pagodas lined with mirrors, where ladies can make their selections in seclusion without intrusion.

Many very elegant show cases filled with some of the most rare and beautiful productions of Paris and London of The Millinery Art. Many original from their Paris office, as well as many beautiful and original designs in Trimmed Hats from their work room on premises. Don't forget; their opening took place on Wednesday and Thursday, September 9th and 10th, at their new and elegant establishment.

SPECIAL • NOTICE.

In calling attention to the following extracts from the press notices given this combination in Boston, I desire to state that they are honest, ungarbled expressions of good opinion, in no way perverted from the original text, but copied verbatim from the journals specified, copies of which can be procured in support of this asser tion. This statement is deemed necessary, for in these days of humbug, public credulity is often imposed upon by unprincipled people who do not hesitate to employ any means to further their pecuniary advancement. Every scene or situation will be presented as advertised. The play is a combination of mirth, music, song and sentiment, with un original plot to interest. Every detail of stage appliances will be minutely carried out and no trouble or expense will be spared to make each presentation of Held in Slavery a gem of dramatic excellence.

"HELD IN SLAVERY."

A MELODRAMA AT THE GRAND OPERA HOUSE.

Some Very Striking Stage Effects.

"Held in Slavery," a rather lurid melodrama, but fraught with alternating incidents that excite and amuse, was the attraction at the Grand Opera House last evening. The author, Martin Hayden, who plays the role of the villain, is capable he has not given that attention to the lines of his melo-drama which might greatly enhance its symmetry, yet shows a remarkable appreciation of striking stage effects, and has utilized this feature to a large extent. The plot deals with the trials of a young lover who unwisely falls into the clutches of the desperate villian, and he is torn in twain by the young hero. By treachery the girl is announced as a slave through some false documents, but even the consequent ownership of her by the villain cannot avail to make her consent to a marriage with him. The young hero wants to marry her himself, and he literally goes through fire and water to accomplish that end. The attention of the audience was held in high interest throughout, and the action was frequently applauded by the large audience which filled the theatre. Martin Hayden as the lover and Miss Anna Boyle as the heroine shared in the honors. Charles Robinson, Blake and Harry Von Rosen furnished some amusing specialties during the progress of the melodrama.

THE BOSTON NEWS.

TUESDAY, AUGUST 23, 1892.

The success of the new idea in force at the Grand Opera House was again demonstrated last evening by the hearty reception given "Held in Slavery," a realistic melodrama in four acts, with first class effects and special scenery, opened the entertainment. A touching drama of considerable merit, it is to-day, besides a number of pleasing specialties, in competent hands of actors, lauded by Martin Hayden and Anna Boyle.

Elsie Adair, "a gleam of sunshine," proved a strong favorite. The specialties held the audience until a late hour, and still the large audience cried for more. There is a whole evening of fun at the Grand Opera House and of variety enough to please every body.

Boston Journal.

TUESDAY, AUGUST 23, 1892.

"HELD IN SLAVERY" AT THE GRAND

"Held in Slavery," a melodrama with a great many realistic embellishments, was the attraction at the Grand Opera House last evening, and the audience showed its appreciation by the great amusem ent with which the play was received. The action of the piece occurs in the South. Jenny, the daughter of a rich planter, loves Julian, a fellow, through the intrigues of Vincent, a rival planter, that she is a slave. Vincent is finally thwarted in his plans, however, by Julian, a young sailor, and the play closes with a strikingly realistic scene, in which Julian rescues Jenny from the smuggler's retreat. Mr. Martin Hayden takes the part of Julian, Walter Von Rosen acts Vincent and Anna Boyle, Jenny.

"SAVED FROM SLAVERY."

NEW AND ELABORATE SCENERY

By CUNNINGHAM & CLARE, Niblo's Theatre, N. Y.

BOSTON HERALD.

TUESDAY, AUGUST 23, 1892.

GRAND OPERA HOUSE.

"Held in Slavery," a lively melodrama was seen at the Grand Opera House last evening.

The melodrama was written by Martin Hayden, a y ung man who plays the part of the hero.

There are some touches which recall Bartley Ca mpbell's "White Slave" in the piece. It c quite well written and interesting, and has many sensational, melodramatic points.

There were some clever variety features introduced into the play, the butterfly dance of Clara (Elsie Adair) and the song and dance of Teddy (Charles Robinson) being especially deserving of commendation.

BOSTON POST.

TUESDAY MORNING, AUG. 23, 1892.

At the Grand Opera House last night appeared Martin Hayden in his nautical melodrama, "Held in Slavery," with Miss Anna Boyle in the role of heroine, and Mr. Hayden as Julian, the hero, contribute humor to various situations in amusing Irish specialties. The Scenery and Mechanical Effects of the play are notable in variety and realism. There is a rain storm on the Gulf of Mexico with electrical effects, and in Act 3 an explosion and interior of a burning building with flame ungues and burning rafters which might call out the Boston fire department. It is altogether an exhibit of novelties including a black-eyed Elsie Adair, in the serpentine or butterfly dance, is one of the prettiest features introduced.

Boston Daily Globe.

TUESDAY, AUGUST 23.

Popular attractions, such as are offered at the Grand Opera House, ought to fill the theatre every night. The programme for the week includes comedy and drama, with scenes most exciting and realistic, and singing dancing and fighting. There was a large house last night and the applause was spontaneous and frequent. As a literary effort, "Held in Slavery" can scarcely be judged, but as the vehicle for scenic effects and sensational incidents it serves a good purpose.

In act one there is a realistic scene of a sailboat at the mercy of the waves and a rain storm in the Gulf of Mexico.

In act three there is a thrilling spectacle of a house in flames, and the rescue of the hero and child in the midst of an explosion.

In act four there is a fierce hand-to-hand struggle between the villian and the hero. In the first two there is an exciting dance by Elsie Adair, and in act three also some amusing Irish specialties by Charles Robinson.

Upon Martin Hayden and Anna Boyle, as Julian and Jenny, fall the burden of what acting there is in the play, and Harry Sedley as Skinner and Elsie Adair as Clara, supply some serviceable fun.

[Special Dispatch to DRAMATIC NEWS.]

BOSTON, Aug. 22.

Held in Slavery, a nautical drama, presented by Martin Hayden and his company, was the novelty unveiled at the Grand Opera House to-night, and packed the theatre. The piece is undoubtedly a money winner, and these can be no doubt, after the enthusiasm which prevailed to-night, that the people will be crowded all the week. Many effective stage effects are startling. There are clever specialty acts are introduced to give cheers. This play, be it said, does not depend by any means on its mechanical features, but is presented by a good company. Besides it is blessed with a good plot, and has plenty of humor.

GRAND THEATRE.

WEEK COMMENCING OCTOBER 27, 1890.

NOTICE.

We respectfully call the attention of the Public to the New Season now inaugurated at the Grand Theatre, assuring our patrons that no effort or expense will be spared to make this the most attractive place of Amusement in the City of Brooklyn, and to this end we have secured at considerable expense, some of the brightest and best combinations ever organized, and each week will bring forth its perfect wonder of attractions. Our motto is to please and place before the Public the cleanest, brightest and best plays and specialty attractions that can be produced, and at prices within the reach of all. Our corps of attaches are polite and gentlemanly, and will be sure to see that all who come will be treated with politeness and courtesy, and all who come will be made to feel that it is a perfect home of Amusement and comfort.

Very Respectfully,

THINGS THAT HAPPEN.

ACT I.—THE SCENE IS IN THE BACK YARD. Jabez Cook looking for Schenck. "If I find him I'll put on blackfins onto him." Schenck's hiding place. "What are you doing in that dog house?" John's experience in crabbing. "There's only one way to cook hard crabs and that is to bile 'em." Bobby and Jack's yacht. Unfixing the sails as a lake. "I'll bet that's a dog fight." The bureau scarves. "Take off that rig at once." Nellie describes her fun at a dog fight." The bureau scarves. Jerry. Dancing with the Dump. The two sidesores. hunt. Lucy's advice. Nellie and Jerry. Dancing with the Dump. The two sidesores. Lucy's first pie. Jerry's introduction to Schenck. "I'll make his block I'm the dog." The challenge. "If you kin make me you kin win my pile." Wrestling for blood. "Jerry's fit. "Can I go in the dog house and dye." Nellie in a dilemma. "I like you, Darned if I don't." Schenck and Dick try conclusions. "Some one kilt that tramp." Jerry's bath. (LAUGHABLE SITUATION.)

ACT II.—THE LITTLE BACK PARLOR. Martha hauls Schenck over the coals. "I let him flop me." Jerry as a clerk. "I want to hear no more about those Jones gals." Jerry shows his real character. "It's wrong and I won't do it." Jerry's tribute to the factory boys. Jerry and Schenck have a little "scrap." "What are you doing there?" Nellie's answer. "Some one get a gun and blow my brains out." Jerry's wails the result. "If the bird hadn't dodged I never would have broken the windy." Frank proves an alibi. Nellie sings about the mother she has made. Jerry's appeal (song). "Son, go and call a hot slung-ter." Jerry tries cold slaw. "Water! Water! a human volcano!" "I will write to you, Frank." Nellie's discovery. "He's married, the brute." The merry making. (LAUGHABLE PICTURE.)

ACT III.—THE HOME OF JOHN WESLEY, NEWYORK. Schenck and Martha's first visit to town. Martha finding fault with Bobbie enlightens them. "Play keeps." John's explanations. Sleeps, feeding style. "What's the matter child, is you blind." The street fair. "Some of those old songs." Schenck insists on singing. "I wish I had stayed to hide." Jerry's transformation. "I'm a dude now." Cute cin tricks. "Can you make one finger go one way and the other go the other way?" A new wrinkle in wrestling. "Sold again, by gosh." Nellie's marriage. Frank extends his congratulations. Schenck drinks. Jerry brings sad and surprising news. "My God, my husband." Jerry's Surprise. Nellie denounces Dick. "I brought it." "Thank God I am not your wife." (STARTLING DEVELOPMENTS.)

ACT IV.—HOME AGAIN. The letter from the White Caps. "I'm done for." John has a word to say. "Advertise, Schenck, advertise." Jerry and Schenck. "Give me those letters." A little detective work. "A little talent." "Any way." Frank explains to Nellie. "I love you." In the employ of the Government. "Where did you get these?" Schenck sold again. Dick demands his wife. "Aint got my shackles." The certificate found. "Lock that mash up." Happy ending. Music, songs and dance.

Prof. Dorman writes, "A dose of Hiccolene Tonic Drops is the worth of an ad to Brickford."

The genial Ed. Haddock will open his new resort, the Club House, on Fulton street, to-morrow (Tuesday) evening, and those who attend will be sure of a good time.

INTERIOR DECORATION.

Home Journal, Sept. 20th.

The rapid improvement in interior decoration results largely from the system now in vogue of placing the treatment of important orders entirely in the hands of artists especially trained in this department, many of the more worthy giving them carte blanche in the matter. Some of the most elegant and tasteful designs that have recently attracted our notice were shown at the house of CHARLES EATON, 46 West 14th Street, N. Y., which presents an almost endless variety of rich and beautiful UPHOLSTERY GOODS, LACE CURTAINS, PORTIERES, PAPER HANGINGS, SHADES, &C., Mr. Eaton has for twelve years been especially engaged in furnishing this class of goods for "the trade," and has during that period originated and introduced several of the now prevailing styles of interior decoration. The fact that several of the leading carpet and furniture houses have been placing their orders in his hands for execution, has confirmed his reputation for good taste and skill in the department of house decoration. To those now engaged in refurnishing, we say that the establishment at 46 West 14th Street, is worth visiting.

NOTICE.—On account of the recent FIRE on premises, some special bargains are to be obtained.

A splendid opportunity to purchase Sealskin and Otter Sacques and Dolmans, Fur and Silk-lined Wraps, direct from a reliable manufacturer, is now offered by C. C. SHAYNE, 108 Prince Street, (near Broadway), New York Mr. SHAYNE has the reputation of manufacturing the Leading Styles in reliable and elegant Furs, and is now selling at retail at regular wholesale prices. A word to the wise, etc. Ladies are taking advantage of this splendid chance, and Mr. SHAYNE'S store is crowded with purchasers.—N. Y. Tribune.

Next Week Bartley Campbell's "White Slave."

A house crowded to the doors—hundreds turned away unable to gain admission, and on a night of a severe storm; an audience thrilled with surprised excitement and anon convulsed with irrepressible merriment; recalls of the principal performers and a demand for the author during the progress of the piece which would not be denied. If incidents such as these do not set the seal of popular approval upon a play, it were difficult to imagine what, in these days of easy theatrical triumphs, constitutes success. This was the situation at the Park Theatre last eve, where Bartley Campbell's "White Slave" had its initial representation in this city. It is unnecessary to enter at any considerable length into the causes effecting this result. In "The White Slave," Mr. Campbell has produced a spectacular melodrama dealing with a purely American topic, that of Southern slavery, and if the work be not a monumental, one the treatment of its subject is nevertheless masterly and clever, and calculated to win for its author a more substantial reward than that of mere renown as a playwright may. Opinions may differ as to the artistic excellence of the play; its originality may be questioned; it may be claimed that its situations are conventional, that its tableaux are but reproductions of others gone before; even granting all these, it cannot be gainsaid that "The White Slave" appeals unerringly to the popular taste and that it will therefore take its place among the standard successes of the day. Not only was last night's audience overwhelming as to numbers, but in its expression of delighted approval it exceeded all heretofore known bounds. It followed the fortunes of the White Slave, Lion, (charming y impersonated by Miss May Newman), and Clay, (Chas. D. Herman), with unflagging interest. The strong situations forming the climaxes to the several acts of the play were received with wild outbursts of applause, while ripples of laughter broadened out into a deep torrent of hilarity anent the comical episode in which Mrs. Lee, (Mrs. Frank Foster), Martha, (Miss Jennie Morton), Joe, (Mr. C. White), and Clem, (Mr. Chas. Webster), were the principal figurantes.—Brooklyn Eagle.

During the season the following unparalelled list of attractions will be presented at the Novelty Theatre, in addition to others that will be announced at a future time. No other theatre in New York or Brooklyn can offer inducements to the amusement-loving public superior to those herein enumerated:

Did it ever occur to you, how little wear there was in a pair of Knee Pants for the boy? As a matter of course your purse has stood the test, and by this time you're thoroughly familiar with the fact Singularly enough, a boys' best traits will come out, at elbows and knees. Marbles, Leap Frog, and a dozen other sports and pastimes contribute their telling influence in this direction. We've a remedy for this though we guarantee no sure cure. We can sell you a pair of extra Knee Pants—every size and pattern—in fact several hundred to select from, to go with any Cost. They're heavy, solid and wear-resisting; genuine Knock-abouts—and we sell 'em very cheap. In fact we show some as low as 50 cents a pair, and from this up to the finest of cloths. BUFFALO, OCTOBER 24.

With the accent on "our own." Our own manufacture. That stands for the finest and best made stock of wraps, jackets, Newmarkets, and sacques in Western New-York. If we've emphasized the point enough we'll be quiet for a time, but we haven't if you've thought of buying a winter wrap without seeing what we have made for you. We're admonished to tell you what we have. Where'd be the use in specifying a list of names —Raglans, Gretchens, Newmarkets? If we tell you some have hoods and some capes and some both, do you catch any idea? It can't be conveyed. So perhaps the best thing'll be to have our same little say and keep on repeating it till you're persuaded to look.

Plush sacks—nothing made simply to sell. Our $20 sack is the same as you'll see at $25 in the other stores. From that they go to $65. You can get a very handsome sack for that figure. You should.

Infants' plush cloaks, embroidered cashmere and silk plush, in all colors; handsomest are in cream.

Only a word about our seal garments. We'll warrant them genuine Alaska seal, and we'll save you money on them. For the rest, and the rest is the greater part of the whole, let the stock speak. It's capable of doing some rather eloquent talking —persuades in silence. The best energy of trade is the quiet persuasion of good goods at reasonable prices.

Barnes, Hengerer & Co.

FOOLISH FLASHES.

Little pens of metal,
Little drops of ink,
Make the tyrant tremble
And the people think.

There is no such thing as failure, till a man gives up.

"I had reckoned on having some fruit for dessert, landlord," said a dissatisfied traveler at a hotel. "Well, you reckoned without your host that time," was the retort.

Dr. Tanner's Digester is for sale by Harries Bro's and Powell & Plympton.

It is said that the Czar of Russia generally wears a smile on his face. It is also currently reported that he occasionally takes one in his mouth.

The man who attends to his own business and lets others alone, is an antipoverty society by himself, and a good one.

Halbert's Star Kidney and Liver cure.

There's one good point about the hornet. When he comes to see you on business he doesn't try to lead up to the subject by slow degrees.

The ladies delight in using Stoddart's Peerless Face Powder, because it leaves the skin clear, soft and beautiful. Its use cannot be detected. Price 25 cents.

A hygienic writer says that "no woman can walk in a corset." A great many women do "walk in it," however, but it is only by a tight squeeze.

Look at our Glenmore Derby, $2.49, equal to any $4.00 hat in the town. Buffalo Hat Mf'g Co., 77 Seneca Street.

"Bolts and bars" is no longer a correct expression. Modern bars don't have any bolts—except when the police are around.

Nason & Son, Photographers, Main and Clinton Streets.

In the woman department of an Eastern paper is an article entitled, "How to Live to be Old." Women don't want to get such information as that. "How to live to be always young" would find more readers.

There is one man who is not deserving of mercy in the next world. It is he who will have his hair cut on Saturday night.

"Parties desiring Folding Beds this fall will save money and find a select assortment by calling on Buffalo Folding Bed Co., 60 Delaware Ave."

"The cockroaches in this house are remarkably versatile," said an actor at the hotel table, picking up a biscuit. "I notice that they appear in different rolls every morning."

Smokers are delighted with the "Ex-Sheriff Cigar," Many will smoke nothing else in the smoking car. Occasionally try the "Breakfast Table." Kind friends, and you'll be nice as well as affable. Each brand is of the very best.

Singly stands the "F. S. C."
The cheapest and best you'll ever see.
These brands sold everywhere.

Some very fashionable women would no doubt be happy if they could seize upon and wear the bustle made by a large crowd in a small room.

Wonder Smoke, the great Catarrh remedy, is for sale by Harries Bro's and Powell & Plympton.

It is all well enough to say thirteen is an unlucky number. But this country started in in business with thirteen States, and seemed to be holding her own up to going to press.

A Beautiful Home For Sale.

I have for sale for $12,000 one of the most stylish medium-sized residences in Buffalo. The house is located on a pleasant up town street, is new in exterior colors and has all the modern and neatly arranged interior. The interior of the house is decorated in an entirely new and novel manner, different from anything else in Buffalo. I recommend any one wanting a medium-sized residence, to look at this house before purchasing. It is a gem.

HENRY E. DIXEY in ADONIS.

Thursday Night, Nov. 5d, and balance of this week, everybodys favorite LOTTA, will present her New Success, "Pawn Ticket No 210." The Detroit Free Press makes the following brief mention:

"Pawn Ticket 210." Lotta and her new play, "Pawn Ticket 210," received another ovation at the Detroit Opera House last night. The play proper is a judicious combination of the melodramatic and the comic; the performance has, of course, the delicious though indescribable Lotta bouquet, with dashes of admirable acting by John Howson, Geo. C. Boniface, Jr., J. W. Hague, Cyril Scott and Lillian Richardson.

Lotta is this season in the highest physical health, plump and vivacious, able to endure hard work without apparent fatigue, and in appearance not a day more than 20 years of age. The main secret of Lotta's youth is systematically temperate living and the wisest and carefulest husbandry of her abundant natural vitality. In action she is as graceful as a kitten, and she never seems to be conscious of her audience. Then, too she relishes the fun which she creates for others, and so, after a fashion, makes herself one of us in enjoyment of her own performance. Her liberal management finds expression this season in the selection of the ablest company she has had in years. "Pawn Ticket 210" will be repeated tonight and Saturday afternoon.

DIXEY and ADONIS Next.

New York's greatest success, "Adonis," which ran all last season at the Bijou Theatre will be presented here next week, commencing Monday, November 7th, with Henry E. Dixey, the famous Original Comedian, in the title role, supported by Rice & Dixey's Big Burlesque Company.

DEDICATED TO HENRY E. DIXEY.

If the man who grew a blade of grass
Where none e'er grew before,
Has done well by his fellow men,
How much my friends, the more
Does he do well who makes to grow
From out a desert heart
A spring of laughter, at whose flow
New joys unbidden start

The man who come to criticise,
Once hearing, stays to laugh;
The callous wording drops his mask
A dread of glee to quash.
He prude and zealot learn that life
Is something more than stern,
The cynic tries, perchance, to chaff—
And finds himself in turn!

There is a sermon in your smiles
Oh, Heilbronner One,
Who conquered all the British Isles
With your contagious fun!
That sermon teaches me
To turn without a frown
If there's a better in the book,
Turn me the chapter down!

All manly feelings are akin,
There's no good fellowship
Compares with that born of a jest
And cherished by a quip!
And, Dixey, you who turn away
Your thousands full of laughter,
Have just so many friends to pray
For your good luck hereafter!

"Alcohol is immense for cleaning silver," remarked Sarcastcus to his wife yesterday when he saw her working hard at the table cutlery. "Yes," said Mrs. S., "I notice it certainly cleans all the silver out of your pockets lately."

Miss Fanny Davenport is one of the many distinguished Ladies who testify to the value of "Stoddart's Peerless Liquid" as a beautifier of the complexion. Price 50c.

"Did you get on to the banana peel on the stairs?" asked one office boy of another. "Yes," replied the other, with an expression of feeling, "I tumbled."

PLEASANTRIES.

To get a good dinner the waiter must be feed; to enjoy one, you must feed yourself.

Scribuler—"What did you think of my 'Tale of Poverty' in the last Bazoo?"

Cynicus—"Very well carried out—it was poor from beginning to end."

"The Globe" Clothers are giving a ticket to the Buffalo Fair, good for any day, Sept. 3d to 13th, to every one making a purchase of $5.00 or more.

Guest—"Isn't my dinner ready yet?" New waiter—"I'm afraid it is, sir. I've eaten it myself over a little.

You got the better of me in proposing for the hand of Amelia first." "Never mind, old fellow, you may be the best man in the wedding."

D. E. Morgan & Sons, 259 Main street, have the latest and most approved styles, designs and patterns in all-wool Ingrains, Tapestry and Brussels. It is an old-established house, and has a reputation for square dealing that is worth a fortune to any business firm.

Humorist—"I dreamed last night about some jokes that I wrote."

Friend—"(who has read some of them)—How I pity you."

Solid Gold Watches sold on payments of $2.00 per week. Lee, Martin & Co., successors to Hibbard Bros., corner Main and North Division streets, up-stairs.

Young author—"Do you receive much rejected manuscript nowaday?"

Old author—"No, not very much."

Young author—"I suppose there was a time when you got a good deal of it back?"

Old author—"Oh, yes, indeed; when I began writing for the press, I used to receive back more than I sent."

Dressmakers and sewing girls can double their income, by learning the only system of dress-cutting in America that cuts Worth's French front and back. No refitting. Call for treatise on dress-cutting at Mme. Kellogg's School of French Tailoring, 452 Main street.

Miss Nevertraveled—"One sees such ridiculous things in the papers, don't you think, Mr Justfromabroad?"

Mr Justfromabroad—"Yes, rather. It does seem that the editors tried to see which could tell the biggest yarn."

Miss Nevertraveled—"Why, only this morning, I read in the paper that it was a possible thing to get intoxicated on water."

Mr Justfromabroad—"Oh, that was all right. Why when I crossed, I was drun—er—hem—aw—this has been a glorious Easter, hasn't it, Miss Nevertraveled?" But the reply that he longed for never came."

Shakers find comfort in "Adams' Tutti Frutti.

Babrer—"Do you want a private mug sir?" Customer—"No, sir! unless you treat it with more respect than the one nature bestowed upon me."

In Men's Furnishing Goods, Messrs. Kendall & Kinne, 307 Main street, are still among the leaders of fashion. In fine shirts, underwear and neckwear, they are in the front rank.

Philadelphia editor:—"I understand you have bought a newspaper in the West. Is it a well-equiped office?"

Old friend (from the west) "I should smile. Two rooms and two Winchesters in the front of the stairs."

Watches, Rings, Silver-plated Ware, etc., sold on easy payments at Lee, Martin & Co., successors to Hibbard Bros., Main street corner North Division, up-stairs.

Sweet peas—The choicest assortment in the city. Roses and Floral work of every description. Go to Hale's, Floral store, 358 Main street, between Eagle an Niagara street.

Managing editor (at the banquet, replying to toast of "The Press." Extracts from his remarks):—"The noble engine of civilization, whose mighty throbs pulsate in unison with the onward march of enlightened progress the guide, the educator of the masses—whose vast responsibilities, etc."

Managing editor (in the sanctum): "Get up a column and a half about the dog fight to night, send a man to interview Sullivan about his last spree, and if that article on the "Dandy Barkeeper of New York isn't ready by three o'clock there'll be trouble up there, and don't you forget it!"

Barchat Bros. are sole agents for the genuine Corn and Bunion Cure, to be had at 512 Main street, also at branch, 72 Commercial street.

Assistant to editor:—"Here is an old joke I just found back in the draw. It's a dialogue between President Cleveland and Daniel. Might as well throw it away?"

Editor:—"Mercy no, man! Change the name to President Harrison and Elijah and run it next week at the head of the funny column."

C. B. Doty's Storage Warehouse is located at 1435 Main street; Down-town office Room 4, Brown's Building, corner Main and Seneca streets.

Read "The Times," the brightest and best penny evening paper.

Scrib:—"They say that an author's name is often worth more than his work."

Successful author:—"Yes, I believe that is very true."

Scrib: "Of course you always sign your name to your work, do you not?"

"Adams' Tutti Frutti" parties are the rage this season.

...SODE OF A STAGE DOOR...
...THE DEBUT AT MANCHESTER—A WOMAN'S AMBITION. THE AUDIENCE IN DEBUT—THE STORY OF A TELEGRAM—A WILD PLAY—AN EARNEST WOMAN, ETC.

NEW YORK DISPATCH.

Three years ago, one pleasant day in June, there came to the stage door of a London theatre a young and fair-faced girl, who modestly made this inquiry of the doorkeeper:

"If you please, sir, can I see Mr. Ryder?"

This stage doorkeeper was old and gray of hair, and upon his breath were the mingled odors of all and half and of his short clay pipe.

All stage doorkeepers are born old. What they are they have been always; what they have been they will continue to be until theatres and actors are no more.

This doorkeeper looked down into the uplifted blue eyes of the girl; he looked up at the ceiling of the passageway and then made answer.

"You can see Mr. Ryder—when he is here. But being that he is not here, why then you cannot see him, leave your name, mum, an' if there's a chance and course he'll give you a place."

"No, sir, here—place! What do you mean? I beg your pardon, but—really Mr. Ryder must be here. It is necessary that I should call on him at this time and at this door. You are sure he is not on the stage rehearsing at present?"

"Mr. Ryder, mum, never rehearses 'imself—he rehearses brothers, but not 'here, mum. It's late. 'E may be 'ere an minute. But he isn't 'ere'in' now. E's making hother people 'ere. Will you leave your name, mum?"

The visitor blushed, hesitated, turned away, stood on the threshold of the door a moment and then handed the old Cerberus a tiny card.

"Please give that to Mr. Ryder if don't care to wait here now. He will understand."

With the card the doorkeeper received a "tip" of coin. It was not a sovereign of a bank note. Merely a shilling.

"Thank'ee, mum," he said, "Mr. Ryder 'll 'ave it when he comes in. And he hought 'ave pointed, mum, as I say, 'e [illegible] know, you know," and over his [illegible] laid the index finger of nine.

The stage doorkeeper always hath ready his crisp bit of facetiousness.

He really of human nature, and of the faces of those who, seeking him, do soon on the eternity of years of life, which are the lot of the stage doorkeeper. And him that this was none of the common lot of the supernumerary girl.

"Thank'ee, mum," he repeated, as in making her exit she lightened up his soul with a bright and cheery smile that bestowed upon him a nod of her pretty bowl.

"She's like a ray of sunshine," he murmured, as he sat him down upon his broken-backed chair, and really he found the task of filling the short pipe. "And she isn't one of us, I'm sure him of. Now they all want to be hactresses. I 'spose one of these days she'll be a-worriing me like all the rest of 'em."

Through the smoke of his pipe, as he looked out toward the open street, he caught dimly a last glimpse of the girl as she stepped lightly into the cab and was driven away.

He never saw her again. But he heard of her, and with the name him.

For within that mouth he was stricken down with the chronic and laphachable enemy of all stage doorkeepers—rheumatism.

To his lodgings there came a messenger bearing a basket of delicacies, and with it a note embodying a thank you.

Weeks later when he resumed his pipe and his chair at the door, he learned from the veteran Ryder how it was that had so kindly remembered him as he laid there suffering in his lodgings.

It was the "ray of sunshine" that had lightened the gloom of the stage entrance on that June morning.

Otherwise, Adelaide Moore, the young English actress, who made her debut on Monday evening last as Juliet at the Star Theatre.

She became the pupil of the veteran actor, Mr. Ryder, who nearly half a century ago, then in his prime, was the great Macready's stage director, leading man and friend.

A fortnight before she made the visit to the stage door of the theatre she had received an invitation to pass an evening with friends of her family then residing in St. John's Wood. Her brother and her sister accompanied her.

One of the little party of invited guests present was Mr. Ryder. During the evening Miss Moore was prevailed upon to add as her quota to the entertainments in the drawing-room and then and there she read passages of the part of Portia in "The Merchant of Venice," and of Juliet in "As You Like It."

When she had concluded the reading of Portia's speech beginning with "The quality of mercy is not strained," the veteran actor took her by the hand, and said, as those around them were applauding her effort:

"My dear girl, you shall have my pupil if you will. It is long since I have heard that speech of Portia's delivered one possessing no knowledge of stage elocution with so much of good method, so clearly and with so much evidence of gesture to the elements of the text, and with so little of that stagey tone, for effect to which the amateur reader usually resorts."

The young girl stammered her thankful appreciation of his offer and the unexpected praise he had given her.

That event occurring three years ago —decided her fate.

She accepted his offer; she became his pupil, and never did pupil more apt than she. Quick in comprehension and intelligence, earnest in the task she had undertaken, seeking not such advancement as her merit might justly claim, she entered the lists in which so many scores have failed and so few been rewarded with success, and under the direction of her first professional friend and guide, Mr. Ryder, she made her debut as a lady in a theatre before an audience not too well disposed to be lenient toward a novice having the hardihood to present herself in the role of Juliet.

This was at Manchester, on the stage of the Theatre Royal, where not many years before in the same character he will lessie Neilson had by her beauty as well as talent, held an undisputed sway.

Before the week had closed—and it was a memorable one to her—she had won a goodly standing in the list, and critics clarned by her intelligence, as by her personal beauty, could speedily [illegible] the preliminary flourish of advertising and the ton-tom beating and circus [illegible] she began her course.

From Manchester she went to other provincial cities, and in one after another she was accorded a hearing and an attention which was as gratifying as it was unexpected.

At this time she was but eighteen years of age, and on last Monday evening at the Star, London, after her London debut, she was but twenty-one.

Upon that first reading for the amusement of her friends at that little social gathering in St. John's Wood her first public performance in the character of Rosalind, at Manchester, was a daring step. From that effort how great and how venturesome was the next—that which brought her fair and handsome face with her personal graces, her youth lightened by health and hope and as yet undimmed by disappointment, to the presence of a strange audience in a strange land on a strange errand.

This little woman came here with no blare of preliminary trumpets; there were no space advertisements of the dress describing her diamonds, her marvelous income from the friend-and-mother-editor of the French man-milliner Worth; there were no anecdotal reminiscences of the patronage bestowed upon her by the Belgravian Prince of Wales, nor were there any of the rarer show exhibitions which were a part and parcel of the career of the titled Mrs. Langtry.

She came to our stage did this little Adelaide Moore, with the unobtrusive garments of a modest aspirant upon her, the courtesy of gentle treatment, hoping that upon the novelty of her appearance hugs should have worn off she would be able to hold a place in the favor of the public to which she appealed.

She is physically more perfectly formed and handsomer than the Langtry and so far as that theatrical adventurer, whose well-developed beauty was her stock-in-trade, Miss Moore is infinitely the better endowed.

And above all, in her social relations she is without a stain.

On Monday evening as she stepped upon the stage with a smiling face and bowed and recognized the welcome extended her, there were but few in front of the house who knew that the smile was but a mask; that the woman's soul [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

N. Y. HERALD.

BY TELEGRAPH TO THE HERALD.

NEWPORT, R. I., August 14, 1885.—The young English actress, Miss Adelaide Moore, made her first appearance in America at the Opera House here to-night, and was greeted by a large and distinguished audience, many of the cottagers being present. The play selected for the lady's debut was "Romeo and Juliet." The performance as a whole was one of the most perfect stage representations ever witnessed in Newport. The company was a strong one.

As Juliet Miss Moore impressed the audience favorably when she made her first appearance. She is young and handsome, with a fine figure and a graceful carriage. It is plain to be seen that she has been tutored in the best school of acting, all of her effects being produced in a natural manner. Her little bits of light comedy in the balcony scene and with the nurse were most charmingly performed, while the later scenes of the play, after hearing of Romeo's banishment, the entire change of Juliet seemed to change in Miss Moore's portrayal of the character. The girl suddenly becomes a woman, and the actress developed a capacity for expressing the most widely changing emotions of Juliet which surprised her auditors, winning deserved applause. It is the conviction that could be urged against the performance of Miss Moore's English inflection in the scene where she learns of Tybalt's death. Her voice had not the loud, lasting expression usually heard here, and this, while really a virtue, has also been a defect. However, she avoided any appearance of strained effort at effect, though evidently doing her best.

Miss Moore wore a number of handsome and costly costumes and some very fine diamonds.

N. Y. JEWISH MESSENGER.

Miss Adelaide Moore is appearing in "Romeo and Juliet" at the New Theatre to good sized audiences. As Juliet, the young actress does well. She is graceful, and has an intelligent conception of the part. Her acting in the balcony scene, in the friar's cell, and in some of the other more important scenes, goes natural, and is deserved applause. In the first act Miss Moore was very handsome dressed in white satin, with [illegible] and pure white [illegible] and [illegible] of the same, stepped forward and made a curtsey, and was received in a musical fashion, [illegible] to the strangers. Astonishment and surprise were plainly blended in the countenances of some. Having low before the audience, they replied in a few words of English, to what they wanted [illegible] "Mr. Chairman," said the fair interpreter to the official as she went back to the seat, feeling that she had become the center of interest for the time being, [illegible] on every side were saying: "Why, what handsome girls are they, who speaks Hindoo like a native!"

One inquisitive and shrewd Yankee slyly crept over to where her interpreter was piled up and read her name on some of the many boxes. Surrogate." Miss Adelaide Moore, London, England."

"Well, I swan, I'm gosped, for he had seen Miss Moore a few weeks before at the Star Theater as "Juliet."

"And how did you learn the language?" inquired a gentleman who was in her party.

"Is Hindoostan," she replied. I was there a few weeks ago and learn to speak it very well.

N. Y. TIMES.

Miss Adelaide Moore, the charming young English actress, who was seen at the Star Theatre last week as Julia in "The Hunchback" and as Rosalind in "As You Like It." Miss Moore possesses youth and beauty and a graceful figure; her methods are original, and her acting is intelligent and impressive. This young lady evidently has pluck and energy and has performed many hard parts, and will have attracted large and fashionable audiences, by whom she has been received with very warm and approval. Her impersonations of Julia and Rosalind are winsome and attractive, and her appearance in these parts has added greatly to the favorable impression she created in Juliet of the previous week. Miss Moore will rest for three or four weeks and will then make a tour of the principal Southern cities supported by her own company, selected especially for the parts which they are to impersonate.

CINCINNATI ENQUIRER.

One of the fashionable and social dramatic events of the season will be the American tour of the young, beautiful and distinguished English actress, Miss Adelaide Moore, who will play a limited engagement in this country, appearing in a round of legitimate productions supported by the best American company money can secure. Miss Moore comes to this country indorsed, not only by the press of all England, who fittingly speak of her as the successor of Adelaide Neilson, but as a sterling, worthy woman, who has been a shining light and ornament in the best English society. Her engagement at the Star Theater, New York, which has just closed, has been conceded by press and public to have been an overwhelming and flattering success. Although the full season has barely expired, most of the best families are still at the seaside, the audiences were noteworthy from the number of society people of which they were composed. Miss Moore has been received on all sides among the leaders here with open arms. Miss Moore's coming will be under the personal supervision and management of Mr. Wm. B. Moore, while all the business appertaining to the tour will be under the direction of Mr. Edward L. Bloom, of the Bijou Opera-house staff.

CINCINNATI TIMES STAR.

SHE SPOKE THE LANGUAGE.—There was a curious scene at the Grand Central Depot in New York last week. Among the crowd which stood about the ticket office were two men with dark brown faces and strange oriental garb. Something was going wrong evidently for they chattered excitedly and gesticulated wildly to make the ticket agent understand their wishes. The officials was in despair for the ten forfigners refused to move, and the crowd behind pushed them impatiently, but without effect. Finally a lady elbowed her way to the front, and addressed the two Hindoos in their native tongue. "For heaven's sake," exclaimed the agent when finally, "is there anyone here who can speak this gibberish?"

A silence fell upon the waiting throng, and then one [illegible] stepped forward and made a few words in a musical, foreign tone to the strangers. Astonishment and surprise were plainly blended in the countenances of some. Having low before the audience, they replied in a few words of English to what they wanted [illegible] "Mr. Chairman," said the fair interpreter to the official as she went back to the seat, feeling that she had become the center of interest for the time being, [illegible] on every side were saying: "Why, what handsome girls are they, who speaks Hindoo like a native!"

MISS ADELAIDE MOORE MAKES UP AS A CHARMING BOY.

Miss Adelaide Moore has gone on with such performance deepening the good impression she made at the start. Her Julia was decidedly better than her Juliet, possibly because she grew more friendly with her audiences and knew herself better than at her first performance, but, her Rosalind, which she will play to-day for the last time, is decidedly the most and meritorious performance. People are accustomed to associate this part with its costume, and certainly Miss Moore, tall, well formed and pretty as she is, makes a most agreeable impression as a boy.

It may be said with much truth that her comedy is better up to the whole than her intenser action upon the stage. Miss Moore's delightful peculiarities and tendences are carried off with a good deal of art and no little intuition. The cast supporting her was in the main fully up to the requirements of a more than ordinary performance. Miss Moore, fighting as she had to do against a great many local friends once her arrival here, will leave to-night with the general sense that she has done herself a great deal of credit through her engagement. She is an earnest and hard worker, and we hope to hear follow up the good things the public know that she can do.

N. Y. HERALD.

A performance of "As You Like It" was given last evening at the Star Theatre There was a large audience. Miss Adelaide Moore, who played Rosalind for the first time during her present engagement, made us even better impression than she did as Julia. She was picturesque, graceful and, in her male costume, most winning. She treated the scene with Orlando and Celia in the forest with a light and graceful touch, and was intelligent throughout in her intentions. Miss Moore was most womanly and attractive. She is handsome in face and dresses and bears herself well. Her voice and gait, intelligence and earnestness are rare in the higher walks of the dramatic art. She was recalled before the curtain at the end of the third actand much applause followed her next delivery of the epilogue.

N. Y. WORLD.

Shakespeare's "As You Like It" was last night presented at the Star theatre by Miss Adelaide Moore, she playing the part of Rosalind. The performance was a smooth and acceptable one throughout, and the lady proved that in the comedy roles she has tact, intelligence and personal charm. Her make-up and her pleading manner won for her at once the good-will of her audience, which in the large out, deserved throughout the mess of excellence that a high standard of finish can show command. The comedy was very well cast. Miss Moore in selecting such parts as this will have no difficulty in establishing for herself a name and reputation in the profession.

N. Y. TIMES.

Miss Adelaide Moore presented Shakespeare's "Romeo and Juliet" for the first time in New York on Monday evening last at the Star theatre, and it was played throughout the week. She is a young girl of a very excellent company. Miss Moore, on the opening night, gave the character of Juliet a strong and intelligent portrayal, which merited and received the warm plaudits of the audience. Miss Moore possesses a charming figure, a beautiful and expressive face, and is endowed with a graceful winsomeness which will insure for her a full appreciation of the classical lines in which she will appear.

N. Y. NEWS.

STAR THEATRE.—A comedy Rosalind was Miss Adelaide Moore, in "As You Like It," at the Star theatre last evening. In woman's gown she was pretty and graceful, and in boy's garb she was charming. It is seldom that as winsome a Rosalind is doubted and hose, is seen as that of Miss Moore last night. Her acting was a marked improvement over that which she displayed as Juliet or Julia. She seemed to thoroughly grasp all the requisites of the character, and gave evidence of close study in its realization. The audience was large and greatly enjoyed the play which was rendered in good style throughout.

MANCHESTER GUARDIAN.

Miss [illegible] evening [illegible] is to be congratulated upon the [illegible] she achieved. Her seven scene well deserved the call before the curtain. Not less effective was the quarrel and reconciliation with Sir Peter, shortly before.

LEEDS (ENGLAND) TIMES, March 14, 1885

Miss Moore has displayed not a little courage in staking her artistic reputation for so difficult and trying a role as she has appeared in this week, and which has in many past years forth abilities which not many artistes are credited with possessing. That she has been successful in so doing we have seen her will admit. To a good personal and stage appearance she adds a charming warmth of manner and naivete which unavoidably find favor with her audience, whilst her int-epretation of her Shakespearean characters, latches much to be desired in regard to appreciation of the author's ideal.

BRADFORD (ENGLAND) DAILY TELEGRAPH March 11, 1885.

"The charming idyllic erection of Rosalind found a sympathetic and worthy interpreter in Miss Moore, who during the evening was several times called before the curtain for her artistic interpretation of a part replete with the subtleties of dramatic art. A prettier stage picture than this accomplished young actress displayed as Ganymede, would be difficult to imagine, and when to this is added a delightful ingenuousness and a well sustained rhyness of an athlete girl masquerading in male attire, tempered, however, with touches which showed that the actress possessed the more serious purpose of Rosalind in flying to the forest, it is not surprising that the audience should be warm in its approval. Miss Moore's interpretation of Miss Rosalind was marked by a fresh and genuine comedy, and her acting always finished and graceful, gave ample evidence of her versatile talent of which she is possessed.

THE STAGE (LONDON), March 5th, 1885.

Miss Moore is a most fascinating actress, and evidently a wise disciple of her audiences by her winning manner and clever acting.

THE ERA, March 7th, 1885.

Miss Moore's acting calls for the highest praise, and it is difficult to say in which of these characters she achieved most distinction.

ADVERTISER (ENGLAND), WORCESTER, October 25th, 1884.

As Juliet, Miss Moore showed remarkable ability, which distinctly marked her as a true disciple of the art of acting power. In the balcony scene her tenderness and emotional powers were displayed to the greatest advantage, while in the more tragic scenes, particularly in the tomb scene, she displayed such a triumph as any actress might be proud of. Her conception of the part is to hold the mirror up to nature, for while she avoids overstraining stagy or tricksy, her rendering is most impressive throughout.

THE STAGE, LONDON, October 24th, 1884.

As Pauline, Miss Moore reached a high historic level, and was frequently applauded. In the exacting scene with Claude she was seen at her best, the sudden transitions from the scene of youthful pride and overmastering love and devotion were powerfully depicted.

COURIER MANCHESTER, March 17, 1885.

Miss Moore possesses an admirable figure and looks the part of Juliet to perfection and she speaks the lines with a degree of poetic instinct which pleases, and in addition she is endowed with a keen and clever appreciation of the characters she undertakes to delineate. Miss Moore has great elocutionary power, and makes her points with skill and care, and great credit is due for the manner in which the part was played.

A sweet brunette with flashing eye,
Or blonde with golden hair,
Will charm the heart of any man
And make him do or dare.
The pleasant smile, the pouting lips,
And witching glances, too,
Doth make one think of love's sweet dream
I often do; Don't You?

II.

Ah there, within a cosey home
That's furnished plain and neat,
A charm it adds to love's sweet dream
As kindred souls we greet.
I love to see a pretty place
Where style and taste is true,
And rest a while from care and toil,
I love it; yes, Don't You?

III.

Now all who want to furnish well
Don't do as heretofore;
But go at once to where I say—
Number One on Avenue Four.
John Moriarty there you'll meet,
Whose terms are square and new,
For Special Credit he will give,
I like that plan; Don't You?

A SURE SIGN.—Farmer Huber (reading a letter from his son at college): "My greatly beloved and esteemed parent—" By jove, the scamp has run through with his money again!

Prompter (rushing in excitedly): Walley, the super whose salary you docked, has eloped this minute with all the unparalleled "Blue Hussar" jewels, the costly set of "Cleopatra" diamonds, and King Solomon's best crown. Manager (sternly): It was your place to guard the jewel chest, Antonio. I shall have to take five dollars off your salary.

He was a countryman, and he walked along a busy thoroughfare and read a notice over the door of a manufacturing establishment, "Cast Iron Sinks." It made him angry. He said any fool ought to know that.

A man out in Illinois advertises a toy sheep whose wool renews itself when worn off. An overcoat made of this particular kind of wool would fill a long-felt want.

A pincushion is a bad thing to sit down upon, but, even when it is full as a tick, its good points are plainly apparent.

Dead heats might learn a lesson from the fly. It never thinks of taking your sugar or things without "settling on the spot" for it.

Don't measure a man by the length of his funeral procession. A lone hearse often contains the remains of a very decent man.

"Sir," wrote a tradesman to a debtor, "if you will favor me with the amount of my bill you will oblige me; if not, I must oblige you."

"Did you have a large house over in New Jersey?" Theatrical Manager—Yes; the house never looked so large to me before. There were only three people in it.

It only requires two flies to run a horse-toad for six months. This kind of toad is not the breed to fill a long-felt want at country hotels.

A Western poet addresses some lines to Oliver Meredith, in which his cordial sentiments are marred by the rhyming of 'Lytton" with "spittoon."

"Aren't you ashamed t a man of your age to steal!" spoke the magistrate, sternly. "Did you ever know any one to live comfortably by theft?" "Perhaps not, your honor; but every little helps.

"What do you think of my 'Hamlet?' asked the young amateur of old Crusticus. "I didn't see it all," was the reply, "but from what I did see it must have been nature itself." "Oh, you are too good." 'Don't misunderstand me. I merely say it must have been nature, for it certainly wasn't acting."

The accommodations for banquets, private dinners or theatre parties at The Columbia, on Union Square, are such as to make even the most exacting delighted with the almost inexhaustible resources of this wonderful place. You appreciate the banquet rooms they must be seen. No pen can do justice to their luxurious furnishings. The prices are very moderate. The banquet rooms have been enlarged to twice the capacity of last season.

SOMEBODY'S LUGGAGE. The manager of a strolling company of actors wrote the following letter to a firm of dealers in theatrical properties at Buda-Pesth—'We have arrived safe and sound at Baiation. Angels and all the stage properties have come to hand in due course. Your messenger delivered the snow and hail in good condition; a day later we got the hurricanes, a zephyr was lost on the way. Unfortunately the thunder has burst and we have had to solder the damaged lightning. The rivers and the sea which we ordered you will please to send by water in order to save carriage. Don't forget the new clouds and the new sun, and be sure to despatch a waterfall, as ours got burnt. I would also request you to let us have two or three metres of frost and twenty metres of clear atmosphere."

A gentleman sent his servant to a circulating library with instructions to bring him "Moihs," by Ouida. On his return, being asked had he obtained the book, he replied: "Well, no, sir, not that precise one, they hadn't it; but I brought the nearest thing to it, 'Lubhock, on Ants'."

A certain husband never allows an opportunity to slip without extolling to the skies the excellent qualities of his better half. "My wife," he was heard to re'ark the other day, "is so kind, so indulgent towards everybody, that even when speaking ill of other people she does not believe a word of it herself."

LIGHTS ON A DARK SUBJECT.—Teacher—Now, here's the word "kidney" in the lesson for to-day. A kidney is one of the organs of the body. Holcom, you may give an instance illustrating the use of the word. Holcomb (without a second's hesitation)—We are going to have a new kidney in our church next Sunday.

"I suppose it is something of a tribute to one's beauty when a gentleman rises and gives one his seat in an omnibus," said Miss May Ture, somewhat proudly.

"That depends," said Miss Keene. "In some cases it is a mark of respect for age.

"Who is happy on this mundane sphere?" sneeringly exclaimed Pessimus. "The girl with her first engagement ring," triumphantly replied Optimus.

Critic: I didn't like that last line in your article. Editor: Well, the public did. Critic: Why so? Editor: Because it was the last line.

Old Man—Talkin' 'bout circuses, nothin' come up to th' ole-fashioned one-ring circuses, with one clown. Young Man—Only one clown! It must have been real amusin'.

"So she rejected you, did she? Your proposal didn't please her?" "Well, I can hardly say it didn't please her. I thought she'd never stop laughing."

Fond Grandmother—Understand Spanish? Speak French and German? What a talented young lady, you are, to be sure. The Little Lady (grandly)—Yes; and my Governess says that after a wh le I may speak English correctly.

Masher: Waitah, got any green peas? Waiter: Yes, sir; have some? Masher: Yaas; bwing me three. Waiter: Anything else, sir? Masher: Yes, a strawberry cut in thin slices. Waiter: All right, sir; anything else? Masher: No, good gwacious! Why, do you take me foh a perfect hog, eh?

An exchange is shouting out at the top of its voice—"Was Bunyan a gypsy?" Possibly, but it is our private opinion that Bunion was more likely a corn doctor.

When it comes to discharging a man every employer likes to become his own shipping clerk.

"What are you doing there, Johnnie?" inquired the school teacher of the scholar who had just taken off his shoes and stockings. "I want to know how many are four times five. I've used up my fingers, so I'm counting on my toes."

Mr. Bilton (on the second story)—Why have you put that top step of the stairs above the level of the floor? Architect—I thought you wanted all modern improvements. That's the step a fellow always reaches for when he gets to the top of the stairs in the dark.

Bilton—Your goods are all right you can replevin them. Donner—What! You keep the goods. Let me have the 10 per cent.

Briggs: Does your wife ever threaten to go home to her mother? I am willing to own that mine does. Braggs: No, much worse; she threatens to send for her mother.

"There is one thing, dear madam, about your charming little boy which pleases me particularly," said the visitor, who had patiently submitted to have his corns trampled upon and his whiskers pulled out by young hopeful. "And that is?" smiled mamma. "Dear madam, that he is not a twin."

A newspaper man wrote a love letter and had the compositor set it up. He said "he wanted to send it to his adored one as a proof of his affection."

HIS WORD SUFFICIENT. — Bohr (the author)—Wait a minute, and I'll show you the proofs of my novel. Gore—No, no! I don't want any proofs. Your word is enough.

During a very bad performance of "Hamlet" the audience in its entirety commenced to hiss, with the exception of one man. At last the gentleman next to him said: "Why don't you hiss him?" "It wouldn't be fair," he said, "as I came in on a complimentary; but if they don't do better soon, hang me if I don't go out and buy a ticket and join you."

"Do-s hanging prevent murder?" is a question which agitates the Society for the Abolition of Capital Punishment. Yes, it does. Cases are very rare when a man commits murder after he has been hanged once or twice.

First Chicago Man—Say, where do you get your clothes? Second Chicago Man—Well, the last suit I had was a suit for divorce.

Professor Quinz: What is your age? I used to know. Miss Drybones: A woman is only as old as she looks. Professor Quinz: Ah, but you must be younger than that.

Hayseed—Does this car go to Central Park? Conductor—Yes, yes; hurry up. I've lost two minutes now, waiting for you. Jump in. Hayseed—Oh, I don't want to go myself; Mr. Murphy's a comin' to town next week, and I want ter be sure she gets on the right car.

"Vat," said the collector for a little German band to a man who sat in his front window, "you no gif noddings for dot music?" "Not a cent," replied the citizen, with hopeless emphasis. "Den ve play some more, dat's all!" threatened the collector, so the refuser hastily gave up the coin.

First Banker: What sort of a man is your cashier? Second Banker: He is beyond reproach. First Banker: Indeed? Second Banker: Yes. He left for Canada last night.

GEORGE HOSMER,

The Most Scientific and Accomplished Oarsman in the World.

THE stage door of the Academy will be a poor place for the dudes to haunt during the run of "A Dark Secret." One of the gilded youths of Philadelphia, with the inherent curiosity of the race, noticing a crowd of young girls entering the gate on Ninth street that opens to the stage door of the Walnut Street Theatre, slipped in with the crowd, and in his anxiety to get a glimpse of the pretty girls and the preparations for the play, went one step too far, and found himself floundering in the river Thames. He was fished out of eight feet of water by one of the boatmen, and ejected from the theatre a wetter but wiser man.

The Philadelphia Dispatch says: "During the fourth act of 'A Dark Secret' at the Walnut the other evening much amusement was created by the anxiety displayed by some of the ladies in the audience while witnessing the highly realistic drowning scene, when Stephen Norton has thrown May Joyce into the river Thames. One poor fellow who had been looking cross-eyed at two ladies who accompanied him found himself suddenly seized by the coat collar on one side and by the shirt front and lappel on the other and pulled hastily to his feet, both ladies exclaiming: 'My God! John, that woman will be drowned!' They were only quieted when May Joyce was seen dripping wet but alive and well in the tableau after the dive and rescue."

"A DARK SECRET."

THE phenomenal success of the new melo-drama, "A Dark Secret," at the Academy during the past week, proves conclusively that Manager Donnelly, made a wise selection when he booked this popular success for the opening attraction. The play is by Messrs. Douglas and Willing, two English dramatists; the American rights were secured from the authors through Mr. John Cobbe, the London representative of Mr. H. S. Taylor's Anglo-American Attraction Agency, of New York and London. It has been arranged and adapted for the American stage by Mr. Charles B. Jefferson, and was presented for the first time in America at the Walnut Street Theatre, Philadelphia, seven weeks ago, where it scored an instantaneous hit.

7,000 PEOPLE DAILY,

Or over two million five hundred thousand a year patronize the Dairy Kitchen, Nos. 44 and 46 East 14th street, Union Square, the largest and most magnificent establishment of the kind in existence. REMARKABLE RECORD OF SCHOMER & CO.'S PIANOS IN THE MUSICIANS.

The firm of Schomer & Co. are regarded not alone by the piano trade, but in business circles generally, as one of the most enterprising and deservedly successful houses in the business. Starting in 1872, with limited facilities, and passing safely in the early stages of its existence through a period of unprecedented financial depression, this house, though it has had to contend with established concerns of many years' experience and almost unlimited resources has by the exercise of business tact and through the merit of its instruments won for itself a leading position in the piano trade.

It is due to the skill and care exhibited in the construction of these instruments and there consequent strength, durability and unsurpassed musical qualities that the limited production of 15 years ago has expanded into its present large production.

Where they then made four pianos, there present average production reaches the high figure of 40 pianos per week, and is yet insufficient to supply the extensive demand, and the firm is to-day largely in arrears of its orders. The Schomer piano combines a rich, pure tone of great volume and sympathetic quality with a precision, delicacy, and responsiveness of touch seldom found in other instruments, and these characteristics have not only made it popular with performers generally, but have also made it the prime favorite among artists for both concert and private use.

This firm make every variety of instrument square, upright and grand and constantly striving to meet every demand, has produced the Bijou Grand the smallest grand piano ever made, the most practical novelty yet presented to the public.

This instrument, while occupying little space, has great power and volume of tone, together with the tone-sustaining quality and elastic touch heretofore only found in the concert grand.

Exceptional durability, combined with perfection of tone and touch, makes the Schmer piano peculiarly adapted to the use of pupils and teachers in establishments where piano playing is taught.

The writer some time since, through the courtesy of Mr. Fahr, who has general charge of the financial affairs of the house, had an opportunity of visiting the factory and the tour was a source of no much surprise as gratification.

When In 1879 the old factory on Fourteenth Street was found to be too small to accomodate the business it was enlarged by taking in the house, numbered from 149 to 155 on that street. Very soon this was found to be insufficient to meet the demand of the works were transferred to Twenty-third street but on a considerably larger scale, while the salesroom, which now requires considerable space, remains on Fourteenth Street.

While Schmer & Co. have relied upon the inherent value of their instrument rather than upon the ofttimes factitious advertisements obtained from Exposition awards. they have yet received the highest distinction in many exhibitions, notably; Philadelphia, 1876; Montreal, 1881-2, and at Minneapolis and Sacramento, and they can point with pride to the magnificent indorsement, their instruments have received at the hands of the best native and visiting musicians, prominent among whom are Ed. Neupert and Gottschalk, the celebrated composers and pianists, and other native and visiting artists. It is not, therefore, surprising that the name of Sohmer & Co., upon a piano has become a guarantee for its excellence.

From the New York Times,

The name of SOHMER & CO. has become a synonym for liberality and enterprise throughout both continents, and the future of the house cannot fail to worthily sustain the past record and achievements.

From Frank Leslie's Illustrated Newspaper.

N. Y. Staats-Zeitung: Durch die Vielseitigkeit, welche sich das Piano im letzten Jahrzehnte verschafft, hat sich natürlicher Weise auch die Nachfrage nach solchen immens vergrössert, und mit der Entwicklung der Kunstsinns hat sich im Volke auch ein richtiges Verständniß für Instrumente und eine Fähigkeit ausgebildet, welch' letztere es in die Lage versetzt, ein gutes Piano von dem schlechten zu unterscheiden. Wer in Amerika sind gegenwärtig die glücklich, eine so große Anzahl Pianoconcerte zu besitzen, wie Europa, dieser haben wir aber den Vorzug, dieselben zu haben, die Klaviere herstellen, deren Vorzüglichkeit von seinem Piano einer europäischen Zuhört übertroffen wird. Dies wird auch in Europa und in der ganzen Welt anerkannt, und die namhaftesten Künstler besuchen ihre Klaviere und hiesigen Fabriken, von denen in erster Reihe die der Herren Sohmer & Comp. genannt zu werden verdient.

Ihre Instrumente haben einen prächtigen Ton und gehören, was gute Arbeit und Dauerhaftigkeit betrifft, zu den Besten was in dieser Branche geliefert wird.

Diese Firma, die im Jahre 1872 gegründet wurde, hat einen geradezu colossalen Aufschwung genommen, und in schwerständigen Kreisen wird behauptet, daß in einer verhältnismäßig so kurzen Zeit kein anderes Haus dieser Branche so glänzende Resultate erzielt hat. Dieses ist gar nicht überraschend, denn die Firma Inhaber sind nicht nur vorzügliche Geschäftsleute, sondern auch praktische Pianobauer, besitzen demzufolge die Fähigkeit, jedes Instrument in den verschiedenen Stadien der Fabrikation zu überwachen.

A LEADING PIANO HOUSE.

Almost immediately after the birth of the now great firm of Sohmer & Co., in 1872, came the memorable business depression of a year later. This fatal year proved the disastrous ruin of many long-established firms, but when the sun burst clear once more above the clouds of business panic this young firm came out unharmed. This house which now occupies a separate and absolutely unique position in the piano trade, was striving manfully without pretense to supply instruments of strength, durability and unsurpassed musical qualities And it was not long before the critical patrons of other establishments recognized the merits of the young firm and the Sohmer piano had gained its merited fame. From a limited production of four pianos the business rapidly outgrew its bounds, until now no less than forty beautiful instruments, stand ready for shipment each week. To keep pace with the ever-growing demand an enormous factory has been built in Astoria, L.I., occupying 250 feet of the river-front, facing Eighty-fifth street, New York, while the great salesrooms number from 149 to 155 East Fourteenth Street. Around this six story giant of masonry has grown up a little village of workmen. Here they labor and here they have their homes under the shadow of the great industry which earns a livelihood for hundreds of men. Scattered through the town are the various auxiliary workshops which have been added as the pressure of business increased. It is at Astoria that the famous Sohmer pianos are made. They combine a rich, pure tone of great volume and rare quality with a delicacy and sympathetic responsiveness of touch seldom found in other instruments. This is especially true of the Bijou Grand—the smallest grand piano ever made—which has already alone earned a proud reputation for its makers. The history of this firm in later years and the wonderful durability, combined with perfection of tone and touch of the square, upright and grand pianos, are known to hundreds of musicians and in thousands of homes all over the world, while the collection of prize medals from scores of expositions attest the indorsement of the oldest critics.—[New York World.

FROM THE NEW YORK SUN.

The Sohmer Pianos are the centre of attraction in the musical department of the present Chicago Exposition, where throngs of visitors are constantly gathered around them, charmed with the rich pure tones of the instruments on exhibition. It frequently happens that all the celebrated makes are being performed upon at once, but amid this vast melody, so musicians say, the magnificent tones of the Sohmer swell out in sweet and sympathetic individuality, excelling all others.

Messrs. Sohmer & Co. are a progressive house, and their constant aim has been always to gratify the desire of their many customers.

RICHARD WAGNER.

TWO LETTERS FROM RICHARD WAGNER.

DURING the Grand Operatic Festival at Bayreuth in 1876, a number of new Grand pianos of the most celebrated European as well as of several American makers had been placed at Mr. Richard Wagner's disposal; among them a new Centennial Concert Grand piano made by "Steinway & Sons" of New York, which from its wonderful power, beauty and sympathetic quality far outshone all rival instruments and which Mr. Richard Wagner at once chose for his own private use.

In the beginning of 1879, Mr. Wagner was requested by Mr. Theo. Steinway to send this piano to the Steinway Central European depot, in order to receive the latest invention, the "Tone Pulsator," patented July, 1878. On sending the Grand, Mr. Wagner writes as follows:

"BAYREUTH, March 11th, 1879.

My dear Mr. Steinway.

I miss my Steinway Grand as one misses a beloved wife; it is wanting constantly, wanting everywhere. I no longer indulge in music since that Grand is gone, and trust its absence will not be too long protracted.

Very truly yours,
RICHARD WAGNER."

The following letter was written to Mr. Theodore Steinway by the great master shortly after the return of the Steinway Grand (now containing the Tone Pulsator) to his home:

BAYREUTH, April 11th, 1879.

My dear Mr. Steinway,

Really, you ought personally to have witnessed the gratification which I experienced upon receiving back your magnificent Grand piano; you certainly would not have asked me to add another word.

I do indeed deem it humiliating for so many other branches of art, that this art of building pianofortes alone should so closely approach such undeniable ideal perfection. I know of nothing in Painting, Sculpture, Architecture, Literature and, unfortunately also Music, which—since I have comprehension of same —could compare with the masterly perfection reached in piano-forte building.

From your communication, however, I readily perceive with what enthusiastic love you seek to attain the incorporation of the most "spirituelle" tone into the piano which heretofore had only served as the exponent of actual musical sound. Our great Tone-Masters, when writing the grandest creations for the piano-forte, seem to have had a presentiment of the ideal Grand Piano as now attained by yourselves. A Beethoven Sonata, a Bach Chromatic Fantasie can only be appreciated when rendered upon one of your piano-fortes.

Although I do not possess the slightest dexterity in piano-forte playing, I delight in being able to do justice to your assumption of my inborn and cultivated sense of tone. For Sounds of such Beauty as those coming from my Steinway Grand, flatter and coax the most agreeable Tone-picture from my harmonic melodic senses.

In a word, "I find your Grand piano of wondrous beauty. It is a noble work of Art." And with a thousand thanks for this new attention, I delight in being able to call myself

Your friend,

RICHARD WAGNER."

THE ORIGIN OF "LOHENGRIN."

"THE OPERA HOUSE at Dresden, during the years preceding the revolution of 1848, also witnessed the production of certain musical dramas by one who has since made some noise in the world and who is likely to make more noise, strictly speaking, not music." This is the manner in which Henry F. Chorley, one time the musical critic of The Athenæum, disposes of one of the most eventful periods in the life of Richard Wagner—a period fraught at once with the gloom of heavy disappointments and the splendor of glorious results. In October, 1842, "Rienzi" had been produced and had caused a whirlwind of enthusiasm to go through the Saxon capital which had lifted Wagner to the zenith of the musical heavens. It did more; it gave him a home and in the following year made him the successor of one of his models, Carl Maria von Weber, as royal musical director.

But musician and public soon found that they had been deceived in each other. "The Flying Dutchman" was produced and in all but the singing and acting of Frau Schröder-Devrient, was a failure. In place of the fantastic wildness with which Wagner had clothed the old legend, the people had expected something of the pomp of "Rienzi." The public were disappointed in the opera, the composer in the public. His dissatisfaction with the conventions which he had followed in his operas thus far increased, and it was not long before he declared the opera which had been most brilliantly successful for the popular point of view "a youthful sin" and became a reformer, not to say a revolutionist, in the field of opera. In "Tannhäuser, which he completed in 1844—1845, he took a long stride in the direction of the goal which was assuming more and more definiteness in his mind. It was produced on October 20, 1845, at a great sacrifice of time and money, and created something of an enthusiasm which, however, collapsed in a short time like a punctured bubble. After a while a reaction set in. The people began to discern beauties in the work that they had not seen before, and Wagner thought he saw for the opera the prospect of a successful run on the German stage. Full of hope he applied to the Intendant of the theatre at Berlin, but met with a point-blank refusal. He sought permission to dedicate the opera to the King but was told that such a work could not be performed in Berlin, and as His Majesty accepted the dedication only of works that he was familiar with, he might arrange portions of it for a military band that they might be played at dress parade!

Sick at heart because of these new humiliations, as he himself expresses, he now began work on "Lohengrin." The subject was a congenial one. Like the Knight of the Grail, who fully aware of his lofty origin and mission, nevertheless longs for the love of Elsa, and the friendship of fair people, Wagner while he knew how high was his calling to reform his art, yet longed to be understood and loved. In this spirit he labored and gave to the world what many of his admirers believe to be his most beautiful opera. He completed the libretto in the winter of 1845-46, the music in March 1848. The opera was produced at Weimar under the direction of Liszt in September 1850. It was first heard in New York in German in the Stadt Theater in April 1871. Three years later it was repeatedly given in German. The representation by the American Opera Company will be its first production in America in the English language.

AMERICAN OPERA SEASON.

ACADEMY OF MUSIC.

The management of the American Opera Company feel that this enterprise will meet with encouragement not only from Americans but from all those of our citizens also, who, though not born upon our soil, have made America their home, and who, with their children, must share in all that redounds to the honor and advancement of the land of their adoption.

The idea of an American Opera Season and the formation of the American School of Opera (the latter being the first branch of the National Conservatory,) has been heartily encouraged by some of our most prominent and progressive citizens, as is evidenced in the following list of some of the prominent incorporators and trustees of the American School of Opera: Mrs. August Belmont, Mrs. William T. Blodgett, Mrs. Richard Irvin, jun., Mrs. Thomas W. Ward, Mrs. Francis B. Thurber, Mr. August Belmont, Mr. Andrew Carnegie, Mr. Henry G. Marquand, Mr. Parke Godwin, Mr. Joseph W. Drexel, Mr. Jesse Seligman, Mr. Theodore Thomas, Mr. Francis B. Thrurber, Mr. Richard Irvin, jun., Judge William G. Choate, Hon. William R. Grace, Mayor of the City of New York; Mr. William K. Vanderbilt; Mr. Henry L. Higginson, of Boston; Mr. Harrison Garrett, of Baltimore; Mr. N. K. Fairbanks, of Chicago; Mr. Timothy Hopkins, of San Francisco; Mr. A. Howard Hinkle, of Cincinnati; Mr. Leopold Methudy, of St. Louis; Mr. A. F. Tripp, of Buffalo; Mr. Frank Thompson, of Philadelphia, etc., etc.

The School of Opera and the American Opera Company, although under the same distinguished patronage, are distinct institutions, but are in perfect sympathy with each other in their practical working.

"The relation the American Opera and the School will mutually hold is this, then—the School enables the Opera to rely permanently upon a continual supply of fresh and well-trained voices, and the Opera enables the School to depend upon a permanent outlet for the talent it develops."

The establishment of a National Opera is the ultimate aim of the promoters of the first season of "Opera sung by Americans;" and it requires but the patriotic support of the lovers of music of this country to secure the speedy and triumphant success of this movement. The season will demonstrate that it is possible to give performances of Grand Opera of the highest class, with American artists in the rôles usually monopolized by foreign singers.

The music-loving people of New York and other American cities have long been desirous of hearing Grand Opera adequately sung in their native tongue. The management will strive to realize this expectation. The artists engaged are in the front rank of American-born singers, and in their coming operatic work will be surrounded by an ensemble which has never been equalled in this country. The American Opera Company represents an honest attempt, on the part of several well-known patrons of native musical talent, to prove to American audiences that there is no lack of American singers who require but encouragement and opportunity to do honor to the musical reputation of their native land.

The most liberal support is therefore confidently asked from the thousands to whom this announcement cannot fail to be of paramount and, we hope, of lasting interest.

REPERTORY.

TEN WORKS WILL BE PREPARED FOR THE FIRST SEASON.

They will be selected from the following:

ORPHEUS AND EURYDICE, GLUCK. LOHENGRIN, WAGNER.
THE MERRY WIVES OF WINDSOR, NICOLAI. CARMEN, BIZET.
THE FLYING DUTCHMAN, WAGNER. FAUST, GOUNOD.
THE TAMING OF THE SHREW, GOETZ. OBERON, WEBER.
THE BARBER OF SEVILLE, ROSSINI. LAKMÉ, DELIBES.
THE MARRIAGE OF FIGARO, MOZART. LÉCLAIR, HALÉVY.
THE MAGIC FLUTE, MOZART. THE HUGUENOTS, MEYERBEER.

And a work by Rubinstein, with other operas.

THE PRELUDE TO LOHENGRIN.

THE PRELUDE to "Lohengrin" opens with a long-drawn chord of the violins in the highest octaves continued with the tenderest pianissimo through several bars. It is like the thin white clouds floating in a serene sky, and scarcely discernible from the ethereal blue surrounding them. But suddenly the violins sound as from the farthcrst distance and in continued pianissimo—the Grail Motive—and at once the clouds take form and motion. Our inner eye discovers a group of angels descending from the height of heaven and carrying in their midst the holy vessel. Sweetest harmonies float around them, gradually increasing in warmth and variety, till at last, with the fortissimo of the full orchestra, the sacred mystery in all its overpowering splendor is revealed to our enchanted eyes. After this climax of religious ecstasy, the harmonious waves begin to recede, and, with their ebbing motion, the angels gradually as they have come return to their celestial abode. Such was, according to Wagner's own indication, the poetical —or, one might almost say pictorial—idea which suggested the sublime harmonies of his prelude; and never have the sweetness and shudderings of Christian mysticism been more fully expressed than in this triumph of instrumental music. [Francis Hueffer.]

THE TYPICAL MELODIES IN "LOHENGRIN."

WAGNER HAS given to the orchestra the duties performed by the chorus of the Greek theatre, to expound and elucidate the dramatic action. In his hands it becomes, as Moritz Carrière has said, a grand dramatic factor; enabling us to read, by its mysterious pulsations, the inner workings, the spirit, the soul of the drama presented. By means of thematic motives—motives of action and motives of feeling and of spirit—music is enabled to fulfill perfectly and to exhaust the dramatic mission. By means of their motives music succeeds in retaining the interest of the spectator in the action and in the dramatis personæ. They are the principal bearers of the poetic ideas. Sometimes, by their aid, the music awakens forebodings, sometimes memories of past joys and pains, now the full light and joy of the moment; but always taking us with the drama, expounding, elucidating, recalling, teaching. In "Lohengrin" there are six principal dramatic motives, designated as the Grail, the Lohengrin, King Henry, the Ordeal, the Forbidden Question, and the Ortrud or Intrigue. These are the arteries of the healthy organization through which the blood flows. Franz Liszt says: "Wagner is constantly stimulating us to meditation, compelling our memory to activity, thereby increasing the effectiveness of music and her charms by the joys of the mind. The melodies are to a certain extent the personification of ideas. Their return announces the return of those feelings which cannot be expressed by the words of the text. All situations or persons of any importance are musically indicated by melodies which become their symbols. The principal melodies have their roots in corresponding motives. There the intellect is called with feeling fully to enjoy the work."—John F. Jackson.

DEAR SIRS: Allow me to express to you the great satisfaction and pleasure that I have experienced from the use of your famous Pianos, which you have placed at my disposal during the Concert tour now in course of progress in the United States.

During my artistic career in the art centres of the world, I have used the pianos of nearly all celebrated manufacturers, but none of them can be compared to yours—none possess to such a marvelous degree that sympathetic poetic and singing tone quality which distinguishes the Steinway as peerless among them all. Before returning to Europe, I shall select and purchase one of your Grand pianos for Craig-y-nos Castle, my residence in South Wales.

Respectfully Yours,

WHEN THE Mason & Hamlin Company announced the accomplishment of a great improvement in Upright Pianos, which they would soon give to the public, much was expected, because of the vast improvements which had been effected by them in reed instruments, and the acknowledged superexcellence of their organs. These expectations are fully justified by the pianos which they are producing, which have extraordinary purity and refinement of tone. Every mechanic will see that the peculiarities of their construction must add greatly to their durability and especially their capacity to keep in good tune.

The company have as great a future in their pianos as they already realizing in their organs, which are confessedly unequalled among such instruments.—Boston Traveller.

New York.

DEAR SIRS: Before leaving New York I cannot refrain from writing to thank you very much for your kindness in placing one of your magnificent pianos at my disposal during my stay here. I have great pleasure in expressing my entire satisfaction with it. The wonderfully rich, full tone, the light elastic touch combined with the most sympathetic blending with the voice, are qualities which I consider your pianos to possess in an unrivalled degree, and which, I am sure, will ensure for them a most brilliant reputation. Wishing you A Happy New Year.

THE STEINWAY IS THE MOST POPULAR AMONG THE MUSIC LOVING PUBLIC

149 to 155 East Fourteenth Street.

HOW "THE MAGIC FLUTE" CAME TO BE WRITTEN.

THE PLAN of the "Zauberflöte" originated about May in the year 1791, with Schikaneder, Mozart's old acquaintance and the companion of his revels. The theatre of which this man was the manager was fast falling into a ruinous condition, partly from his own carelessness, partly from the absence of public patronage; and in a half-distracted state he came to Mozart, telling him he was the only man who could relieve him from his embarrassment. "I!" replied Mozart, "how can that be?" "By composing for me an opera to suit the taste of the description of people who attend my theatre. To a certain point you may consult that of the connoisseurs and your own glory; but have a particular regard to that class of persons who are not judges of good music. I will take care that you shall have the poem shortly and that the decorations shall be handsome; in a world, that everything shall be agreeable to the present mode."

Touched by the entreaties of Schikaneder Mozart promised to undertake the business for him.

"What remuneration do you require?" asked the manager.

"Why, it seems that you have nothing to give me," returned Mozart; "however, we will so arrange the matter that I may not quite lose my labor, and yet enable you to extricate yourself from your difficulties. You shall have the score and give me what you please for it, on condition that you will not allow any copies to be taken. If the opera succeeds, I will dispose of it to other theatres, and that will repay me."

The delighted manager closed this advantageous bargain with the most solemn assurances of good faith. Mozart soon set to work, and so far kindly consulted the taste, eg rather interest of Schikaneder, who was constantly with him during the progress of the "Zauberflote," as to strike out whole scenes that displeased him, and to compose one duet five times over in order to satisfy him. In a few weeks the opera was produced; its reputation spread throughout Germany and it was soon performed by several provincial companies; but, that not one of them received the score from Mozart! The cruelty which Schikaneder in this instances superadded to his black ingratitude was chiefly shown in his being fully aware of the necessitous condition of the man whom he thus basely defrauded. Mozart did not not permit conduct of his kind to ill turn his equanimity. When made fully aware of the manager's treachery he exclaimed "The wretch!" and dismissed the matter from his thoughts.

It was during the composition of the "Zauberflote" that the eruption of those symptoms which portend decay of the vital powers and a general breaking up of the constitution, first appeared. As usual he grew interested in his work, and wrote by day and night, but not, as formerly, with impunity. He sunk over his composition into frequent swoons, in which he remained for several minutes before consciousness returned. His health suffered so much that in the month of June he suspended for a time his labors on the "Zauberflote," and made a short excursion to Baden. There he produced his Ave verum corpus, a strain of such calm but exalted religious feeling as may well interpret his sensations in sickness—and solitude. The "Zauberflote" is entered in his catalogue as finished in July, though it was not performed till the 30th of September, after the composer's return from Prague. On the 28th of this month he composed the memorable overture and a priests' march, in which he seems to have cast a retrospective glance on a similar subject in "Idomeneo." The opera was produced on the 30th with a success which fully warranted the manager's prediction. [From "The Life of Mozart" by Edward Holmes.]

THE OVERTURE TO "THE MAGIC FLUTE."

ON THE occasion of a series of Summer Night Concerts in Cincinnati, in 1877, given by Mr. Thomas and his orchestra, Mr. H. E. Krehbiel wrote as follows of the overture to "The Magic Flute" in The Cincinnati Gazette: "In the catalogue which Mozart made of his compositions, the opera "Die Zauberflote" is entered under date of July, 1791. The overture, however, was not composed until his return from Prague in September of that year. It is his greatest orchestral composition, and despite the immense strides that have been made in the art of instrumentation since Mozart's time, and the widening of the capabilities of orchestral writing by the invention of new and the improvement of old instruments, this overture still ranks among the most marvelous of art creations. It has an unusual significance, too, as illustrating the effectiveness of an exceedingly old form of composition, and in this light can be viewed as a testimony by one who, like all great geniuses, seemed to be in advance of his time, in favor of a style of composition which had been voted out of fashion long before him. In none of his overtures had Mozart used the fugue form: for half a century the fugues had been monopolized by choral writers, yet now, with his powers already waning under the affliction which three months afterward brought him to the grave, he revived the style which the overture writers, such as Hasse and Graun had employed in the early part of the eighteenth century. Contrary to the design pursued in his other operas, contrary to the usuage prevalent among his contemporaries, he disregarded the subject matter of his opera and wrote an overture which is in no sense an introduction. But then the opera he wrote for was no drama that required introducing; its verbal or dramatic contents, to a great extent, precluded all serious, connected musical thought (witness the silly nonsense with which Papageno interrupts the sublimest moments), and an overture which should try to preserve a unity with, it would have been a thankless affair at best. In writing an instrumental fugue, therefore, he probably intended nothing else than to show how beautifully the form could be used in an overture when molded by such a genius as his. Or perhaps his aim was only to duplicate the great success that he had achieved in the finale to the great symphony in C. Be that as it may, he wrote the overture, and for eighty-six years it has been the delight of the adept as well as the tyro in music."

CHRISTINE DOSSERT.

THE WELL-KNOWN concert and oratorio soprano, who makes her first appearance with the American Opera Company this evening as Pamina, in the Magic Flute, was born in Buffalo, N. Y., Dec 15th, 1859. Her father occupied the position of organist at St. Joseph's Cathedral for over twenty-five years and was the first director of the Buffalo Liederafel Society. Christine Dossert received much of her early instructions in singing, from her father, and at the age of sixteen made her debut in concert. Her success was generally conceded and a bright future was predicted for her. After filling numerous concert engagements through the western part of New York State and Canada, she went to Europe, remaining there two years, studying under Mons. St. Yves Bax of the Paris Conservatoire. Since her return from Paris she has made her home in New York City and during the past five years has met with acknowledged success in concert and oratorio in nearly all the principal cities throughout the United States.

OTTO NICOLAI.

THE FAMILY name of the composer of "The Merry Wives of Windsor" figures extensively in the history of music. It occurs no less than fourteen times in Mendel's musical encyclopedia, and those who have borne it have been active in nearly every conceivable department of musical work.

Representatives of three generations of Nicolais were organists at Görlitz, in the eighteenth century: Friedrich Christoph, (1737—1811,) was a Berlin book dealer who wrote much on music, made a musical tour of Germany and wrote a sort of "Present State" which is particularly interesting because of its notices of Gluck; Gustav Alexander Wilhelm, born in 1795, was a critic, librettist and composer; Heinrich Gottfried was a musical professor in Hamburg, in the early part of this century; Johann, (1660—1708,) was philologist and antiquary who wrote Latin tracts containing interesting investigations of the musical past; Johann Georg was an admired organist in the second half of the 18th century; Johann Gottfried, the latter's son, was a virtuoso on the piano-forte; Johann Gottlieb, nephew of Johann Georg, (1744—1804,) was a popular organist and composer; Johann Michael was composer and court musician at Stuttgart, in the second half of the 17th century; Valentine was a pianist and composer of whom nothing is known except that his music was much in vogue in Paris toward the close of the 18th century; Wilhelm Frederick Gerhard is a pianist, organist and director in Holland.

Otto Nicolai's father was Karl Nicolai, a popular singer, who was born at Königsberg in 1785; the son was born on June 9, 1810, in the same city, and it is a coincidence worthy of notice, that Königsberg was also the birth-place of Hermann Goetz, whose "Taming of the Shrew" ranks with "The Merry Wives of Windsor" as a successful effort to give musical investiture to Shakespeare's plays. The domestic life of the Nicolai family was unhappy, and ended in legal separation of father and mother. Otto was the principal sufferer. He grew up under the care of his father whose severity was so great that the lad frequently remained away from home for weeks at a time, to escape punishment. Finally at 16 years of age, he decided to begin the battle of life on his own responsibility. He left home and set out on foot through West Prussia and Pommerania, intending to make his way by stage to Berlin. At Stargard he presented credentials to an official named Adler who was a great lover of music. Adler took an interest in the lad, and observing that he gave great promise in music, liberated him from the paternal tyranny and sent him to Berlin, to study under Klein and Zelter. His progress was exceedingly rapid, and he was already becoming himself one of the most popular teachers in Berlin, when in 1833, at the call of Chevalier Karl von Bunsen, Prussian Envoy at the Papal Court, he went to Rome to fill the post of organist in the chapel of the Embassy. He was persuaded to this step by his ardent desire to see Italy and its treasures of art. There he took up the study of the old Italian masters under Baini and also fell in love with Bellini and the modern opera composers whose footsteps he decided to follow though not without the hope of surpassing them because of his superior technical knowledge. In 1837 he resigned his post at Rome to become assistant conductor at the Kärnthaerthor theatre in Vienna. Here he remained a year or less spending the winter of 1838 in the companionship of Liszt in Rome Now he began to write Italian operas to suit the popular taste. "Enrico Secondo" and "Rosamonda d' Inghilterra" were produced in 1839. "Il Templario" in 1840. The latter was a decided success. It was performed throughout Europe and found its way to South America, though of this we have no evidence. Nicolai soon stood high in the favor of the Italians who judged by his name that he was of their nationality. He composed two more operas in Italy and then accepted the post of Hof-Capellmeister in Vienna. In this new sphere the better side of his artistic character was soon manifest. In 1843 he established the Philharmonic concerts which ever since have stood for the highest in Viennese music. While in Vienna he persuaded the poet Mosenthal to help him carry out a determination formed in Italy to make an opera out of Shakespeare's "Merry Wives of Windsor." Meanwhile he had composed a mass and dedicated it to Frederick William IV., who urged him strongly to return to Berlin to undertake the directorship of the recently established Domchor. He accepted the call in 1844, and was also appointed conductor of the royal opera. In Berlin, he completed his opera and brought it out on March 9, 1849. For four evenings Nicolai was privileged to see his master-piece received by the public with a crescendo of enthusiasm.

On May 11, a stroke of apoplexy carried him off. II. Mendel, the founder of the best and most comprehensive of German musical encyclopedias, became his biographer. His fine collection of scores he willed to the Imperial Library at Berlin. In 1851 the Tonkünstler-Verein erected a monument over his grave.

AN ENGLISH ESTIMATE OF "THE MERRY WIVES."

A MOST ENTERTAINING book which treats operatic criticism in a light, off-hand manner and enlivens it with many humorous touches, is "The Lyrical Drama" by H. Sutherland Edwards, published four years ago in London. In his chapter on Shakespearian Operas Mr. Edwards has this to say about "The Merry Wives of Windsor":

"The Merry Wives of Windsor" was taken by Balfe for the subject of an opera which he had engaged to write for Her Majesty's Theatre—of Mapleson's Theatre, as it was called in those distant days. Balfe's setting of "The Merry Wives of Windsor" was called "Falstaff" and the principal parts in the work were sustained by Grisi, Persiani, Ivanoff (the Russian tenor), and Lablache. The great, the enormous Italian basso impersonated Falstaff; and with such a cast as had been secured for it the opera could not but succeed. It does not seem, however, to have made any great impression; for it has never been revived.

Probably the "Falstaff" libretto was faulty —a charge which could not be brought against the "Merry Wives of Windsor" as handled by the German dramatist, Mosenthal, and the German composer, Nicolai. The libretto of "Die Lustigen Weiber" is, indeed, as clear as the music to which it has been set. It abounds in situations which invite musical treatment, and in each of the three acts the incidents are worked up to an effective dramatic finale.

No composer has been quite successful in treating Shakespeare's serious subjects. But Nicolai's light and joyous music is appropriate enough to the humorous incidents and lively dialogue of "The Merry Wives of Windsor." The final scene of the forest in which the unhappy Falstaff is terrified by demons, fascinated and frightened by wood-nymphs and bewildered by the beauty of Mrs. Ford, is in all respects effective. The "forest melody" is not such a melody as Wagner was dreaming of when he wrote his celebrated passage on the nature of tune. But it is a very pretty and inspiriting melody all the same; and, like the burlesonous sounds spoken of by Wagner, must, to be appreciated at its full value, be heard in the forest itself. Not, however, that it is useless in the overture, where, as final movement it also has its place.

MAJOR AND MINOR.

"MY HUSBAND I so poetic, and one day to surprise me a Second Avenue street car the other day. "Have you ever tried rubbin' his t'ums with hartshorn liniment, mum?" interrupted a beefy-looking woman with a market basket at her feet.

THE FOLLOWING amusing anecdote of Richard Wagner and Alexandre Dumas père is told by M. Ch. Monselet. The poet-composer (according to the narrator) generally received his visitors in medieval costume, such as he always wore when composing. Alexandre Dumas, calling on him one day, was highly amused at the consequence. "You are all dressed up to play Gessler," he said, with his good-natured laugh, which rather hurt the feelings of the author of "Tannhäuser," who nevertheless returned M. Dumas' visit when next he was at Paris. After some considerable delay, M. Dumas appeared at last dressed magnificently in a dressing-gown with a large flower pattern, a helmet with flying plumes, a life-belt round his waist, and enormous riding-boots. "Pardon me," said he, majestically, "for appearing in my working costume. I can do nothing without being dressed in this manner. Half my ideas live in this helmet, and the other half are lodged in my boots, which are indispensable to me when I write my love scenes." Se non è vero, è ben trovato!

FROM 1829 to 1860, with few exceptions, Meyerbeer passed the summer months every year at Spa. An eye-witness thus diserlies him as he appeared there: He was invariably dressed in an ill-fitting black frock coat, with a silk black neck-cloth wound several times round his throat, high and stiff shirt collars, and tight trousers with straps. His gloves were many sizes too large for him, and he wore a black hat falling not over-gracefully on the nape of his neck. He always carried a huge cotton umbrella under his left arm when he didn't use it for a walking-stick. When on foot he shambled along with a tottering step as if he were blind; but his usual mode of locomotion was an insecure seat on a donkey, his legs dangling almost on the ground. Among the composer's peculiarities was a horror of cats, the mere sight of one throwing him into a nervous fit.

MME. MARIO-CELLI, whose vocal training of some of the most prominent singers of the American Opera Company has received just recognition, has lately published three songs, named Etelka, Incantatrice, and Father's Tears. The first is written on waltz measure and will, no doubt, be often heard in the concert room. Incantatrice is a charming theme with variation, affording an excellent study for the voice; and the last mentioned song, Father's Tears, gives evidence of the lady composer's deep feeling and pathos. The compositions are for sale at Ditson.

THE FIRM of Messrs. Sohmer & Co. have achieved a most enviable position in the ranks of piano manufacturers; deservedly so, for the pianos turned out from the factory is indeed "a thing of beauty and a joy forever." The case exhibits the utmost care and skill in construction, while the internal mechanism convinces an intelligent person at once that more than ordinary talent must have directed the creation of those parts in which delicacy of appearance is united to greatest strength, and where the positive beauty of the inanimate essential only awakened into a thing of life, emitting exquisite in melody and harmony, convincing that the laws of acoustics, as adopted in piano making, have been fully understood and applied. The merits of these pianos are becoming universally recognized, and as a result the firm, through strenuous exertions, find it almost impossible to keep pace with the inpouring torrents of orders.

FRANZ LISZT.

Messrs. STEINWAY & SONS:

GENTS: The magnificent STEINWAY Grand Piano now stands in my music room, and presents a harmonic totality of admirable qualities, a detailed enumeration of which is the more superfluous as this instrument fully justifies the world-wide reputation that for years you have everywhere enjoyed.

After so much well-deserved praise, permit me also to add my homage, and the expression of my undisguised admiration, with which I remain,

Very sincerely yours,

FRANZ LISZT.

NEW YORK, May 24, 1873.

Messrs. STEINWAY & SONS:

GENTLEMEN: On the eve of returning to Europe, I deem it my pleasant duty to express to you my most heartfelt thanks for all the kindness and courtesy you have shown me during my stay in the United States; but also, and above all, for your unrivaled Piano-Fortes, which once more have done full justice to their world-wide reputation, both for excellence and capacity of enduring the severest trials. For during all my long and difficult journeys all over America, in a very inclement season, I used and have been enabled to use, your Pianos exclusively in my Two Hundred and Fifteen Concerts, and also in private, with the most eminent satisfaction and effect.

Yours very truly,

ANTON RUBINSTEIN.

HECTOR BERLIOZ.

PARIS, Sept. 25, 1867.

Messrs. STEINWAY & SONS:

I have heard the magnificent Pianos you brought from America, and which emanate from your factory. Permit me to compliment you upon the excellent and rare qualities which these instruments possess. Their sonority is splendid and essentially noble; moreover you have discovered the secret to lessen, to an imperceptible point, that unpleasant harmonic of the minor seventh, which heretofore made itself heard on the eighth or ninth node of the longer strings, to such a degree as to render some of the most simple and finest chords disagreeable (cacophonique). This improvement is a great progress among the various others you have introduced in the manufacture of your Pianos—a progress for which all artists and amateurs gifted with delicate perception, must be infinitely indebted to you.

Accept, I beg of you, with my compliments, my highest respects.

Your devoted

INTERIOR DECORATIONS.

Home Journal, Sept. 26.

The rapid improvement in interior decoration results largely from the system now in vogue of placing the treatment of important orders entirely in the hands of artists especially trained in this department, many of the more wealthy giving them carte blanche in the matter. Some of the most elegant and tasteful designs that have recently attracted our notice were shown at the house of CHARLES EATON, 46 W. 14th St., which presents an almost endless variety of rich and beautiful Upholstery Goods, Lace Curtains, Portieres, Upper Hangings, Shades, etc. Mr. Eaton has for twelve years been especially engaged in furnishing this class of goods for "the trade," and has during that period originated and introduced several of the now prevailing styles of interior decoration. The fact that several of the leading carpet and furniture houses have been placing their orders in his hands for execution, has earned him a reputation for good taste and skill in the department of house decoration. To those now engaged in refurnishing, we say that the establishment at 46 W. 14th St. is worth visiting.

Notice.—Some special bargains are to be obtained on account of a recent fire on premises.

Or those who hold it their supreme pleasure to be well posted concerning all that is new and fashionable, it may be said that their present delight is dining at the Hoffman House. The most lavish display of furnishings and decorations, elegant service, and the best cooking probably in the world, may be enjoyed, accompanied by the sweet strains of an orchestra between the hours of 5 and 8 p. m. With such surroundings "good digestion waits upon appetite and good health on both."

THE MASON & HAMLIN CO., whose organs are indisputably the best, having been so ranked at all the great world's expositions, are offering improved Upright Pianos, which excite much interest in musical circles. By a new method of stringing they produce the brightest, purest musical tones ever obtained in such instruments, with great durability. They will not fall from the pitch or require tuning one quarter as much as pianos on the old system. An improvement on the Prouch Repeating Action, gives them capacity for rapid repetition of tones, equal or superior to that of the very best Grand Pianos. Being manufactured by this company, they are of course unsurpassed in elegance and thorough excellence of material and workmanship. DEBUT OF SIGNOR DE ANNA IN LA TRAVIATA.

Signor De Anna, the Germ-an, is new to Col. Mapleson's company. He is a very capable and acceptable artist. His low notes are strong and firm, and he sings with considerable expression.

The interest of the performance was enhanced by Miss Cavazzi's artistic dancing in the incidental divertissement.—Sun, Nov. 16.

MME. ADELINA PATTI'S SAN FRANCISCO SEASON, MARCH, 1884.

The scene at the Grand Opera House yesterday showed that there had been no diminution in the popular desire to see and hear Patti. The farewell matinee performance was attended by as large a crowd as had congregated at the Mission Street Theatre on any of the nights when the noted diva sang. People who wished to secure a place near the box office began arriving there about 8 o'clock in the morning, and before noon the line of ticket-buyers extended out on Mission Street to Third, and from there to Market. Many had brought their lunch and partook with satisfaction as they kept their places in line. Boys sold tea boxes for from ten cents apiece, and disposed of all they could lay their hands on. Most of those seeking tickets were ladies, but there were far more males in line than usually attend matinees. People who possessed admission cards began to fill up the entrances at least an hour before 1 o'clock, when the doors were opened. Sixty policemen, under command of Captain Short and Sergeant Cullen, attempted to keep the passage-ways clear, and found it difficult to do so, on account of the whom they did not wish to be rough with. General admission tickets without seats, were sold by speculators at $3 to $5 apiece; family-circle seats, at from $10 to $15; and orchestra and dress-circle seats, at from $15 to $35. The speculators had much custom. About 1:30 o'clock, when a line of over 300 people waiting for tickets extended to Third Street and beyond, a writ was served on the box office, and it was announced that no more tickets would be sold. The Opera House inside was jammed. The aisles were filled, and Stools were rented at $3 each to those who could not obtain seats. People who had purchased reserved places, and who arrived a short while before the beginning of the performance, could not get to their seats through the dense crowd, and many ladies who were placed in this position returned home. The financial success of Her Majesty's Opera Company and the enthusiasm of the people over the great prima donna has dissipated all doubts as to the wisdom of taking whatever risks might attend an engagement in this city of a high-salaried Company. So highly is the season here appreciated by the impresario that he has concluded to again visit San Francisco, which has endeared him, and bring another Company. The brilliant singers who left here last night have been heralded as, and are supposed to be, the best collection of operatic voices at present on the globe, but Mapleson has promised to again company even a better Company on his next managerial trip to California. It is estimated that the gross receipts from all the performances at the Grand Opera House amounted to $190,000, including the regular premiums paid by some companies to say pronounce the engagement here the greatest achievement in opera in the United States.

LARGE NUMBER OF LADIES,

PATTI'S JEWELRY IN LA TRAVIATA.

Patti wears jewelry which is historical and intrinsically worth $150,000. Her splendid diamond necklace was presented to her in London eleven years ago by English ladies; Queen Victoria gave her a locket and BaronessBurdett Coutts a solitaire diamond ring. One of her twenty-three valuable bracelets was presented her by the committee of the Birmingham Festival, it is set with diamonds. Twenty-three diamonds are in a comb given her by the Empress Eugenie. Her brooch, earrings and one bracelet, all set with diamonds, were sent her by the Emperors of Germany, Austria and Russia after she had sang before them.

"RIGOLETTO."

ARGUMENT.

THE DUKE OF MANTOVA was no less celebrated for his personal bravery and beauty than for his systematic and profligate inconstancy. At the commencement of the Opera, he is troubled in spirit by a passionate love for two beautiful women, one the COUNTESS CEPRANO, the other an INCOGNITA. His JESTER, the humpbacked RIGOLETTO, suggests that he should steal the Countess away from her husband, and dispose of him by prison or otherwise. In the midst of this conversation the COUNT MONTERONE forcibly enters and confronts the KING, demanding reparation for the dishonor of his house through the shame and desertion of his daughter. The Jester, mimicking the voice of the King, scorns and insults the old Noble, who, repelling this insult by indignant words, is seized by order of the King and conveyed to prison. Ere he goes, he solemnly curses the heartless Jester, who could mock the sorrows of an agonized heart. The courtiers, even, with all their habitual moral indifference, were outraged at the insolence of the Jester. Each of them had some wrong to right, some bitter, pointed sarcasm to resent, and with one accord they vowed vengeance upon Rigoletto. One said that the humpbacked fiend had a mistress whom he loved, and it was determined that night to steal her from him.

Rigoletto, in the dusk of evening, with the cowl of the old Lord weighing heavily on his heart, goes towards his home; he is accosted by SPARAFUCILE, a brave by profession, who, seeing his troubled look, offers, for a small sum, to put any enemy out of his way,—saying that he keeps a retired Inn, and that his sister, who is very beautiful, lures the victim into the house where he is quietly made away with. Rigoletto refuses his assistance, but takes his address. He approaches his home and meets near by—not his mistress, but his daughter. He urges her to keep close within the house, and after a tender interview, he leaves her, when the Duke, who has tracked his Incognita from Church, steals in unperceived, and hears that she has observed him often and loves him. He makes himself known to her as a young student, and vows of mutual affection are exchanged. Hearing footsteps, he leaves, and she enters the house Maskers approach—they are the conspirators come to steal his supposed mistress; they are about placing the ladder against the terrace, when Rigoletto enters and discovers them. They pretend that they have taken his advice, and have come to steal the Countess Ceprano—that he must assist them. He agrees—they put a mask on him, and tying it with a handkerchief, literally blind him. While they unveil, he holds the ladder. They come forth, hearing away the Jester's daughter, who, screaming in despair, invokes her father's aid. The Jester, tearing off the handkerchief and bandage, beholds his daughter in the arms of the conspirators, who bear her away in triumph.

GILDA is borne by the conspirators to the Palace and placed in the apartment of the Duke, who is well aware of the unexpected consummation of his fondest wish. Rigoletto pursues his enemies, and at last tracks them to the Palace; he seeks the Duke, but the courtiers stop him.

They learn that they have mistaken the daughter for the mistress, and half regret the part they have played. Suddenly Gilda rushes from the chamber of the Duke into the arms of her father. They quit the Palace, Rigoletto vowing a terrible vengeance on the Duke.

The plan is laid and the scheme begins to work. The sister of the brave, MADDALEN, has been thrown in the way of the fickle Duke, who, quite forgetting Gilda, throws his whole soul into the pursuit of the new beauty. At last the end of the contemplated tragedy approaches. The Duke is to visit the house of Sparafucile, who agrees with Rigoletto to murder him, place his body in a sack, and deliver it to Rigoletto at one o'clock. The Duke, disguised, arrives, and becomes more wildly enamored of the beautiful Magdalen; Rigoletto and his daughter, Gilda, observe and hear him through the open window—Gilda is heartbroken at the falsehood of her lover, but Rigoletto bids her be comforted—she shall be avenged. He sends her home, swears himself that the brave is true to him, and then retires. A terrific storm has now set in—rain, hail, thunder and lightning—the Duke vows he must stay all night, and the bravo consents to let him have his bed. The Duke retires. In the meantime Gilda, disguised in man's attire, approaches the house stealthily—she could not rest—the fears for the life of her faithless lover. Trembling amidst the pitiless storm, she overhears the bravo agreeing to the murder of the life of the handsome stranger, whom she has learned to love. The bravo says his honor is concerned, and the man must die and be delivered at one o'clock. But he consents at last that if anybody else should arrive before that time, to make him the victim and save her lover. The clock strikes half-past twelve—Gilda determines to give her life to save his! She knocks at the door—it opens—she enters, it is closed. Rigoletto advances in the storm and darkness—knocks at the door—Sparafucile brings forth the sack—receives his pay and retires. Rigoletto gloating over the idea of his consummated revenge, before committing the body to the river, prepares to untie the sack that he may gaze upon his victim—when, from the house he hears a voice—a voice he knows—the voice of the Duke—whose body is contained within the sack!—his hands tremble—his heart beats, and with a cry of horror, by the aid of the flashing lightning, he discovers the features of his beloved child! She still breathes, and blessing her lover and her father, dies in his arms. The curse of MONTERONE is accomplished.

MME. CAVALAZZI IN LA TRAVIATA.

Adelina Patti sang the part of Violetta in The "Traviata" last night. It is one of her best known roles, and its last presentation suggests no new criticism. Mme. Cavelazzi appeared for the first time this season in the ballet last night, and was received with a welcome that unmistakably shows the admiration which this excellent artiste has awakened.—World, Nov. 15.

Signor Aiditi conducted his orchestra, with the skill for which he is famous, and the opera was further graced with the rhythmic steps of Mme. Malvina Cavalazzi the most poetic and graceful dancer of an age when the dance is passing out of vogue. —Herald, Nov. 15.

THE NEW TENOR.

The New York Herald says: "Colonel Mapleson has discovered a new tenor. A tenor for the ladies. A tenor handsome as Apollo. A tenor tall and straight, with coal black hair and steel blue eyes. A tenor in the prime of youth, full of warmth and emotion. A tenor who will catch the town. His name, Card-udi; his birthplace, Sicily. Referring to his appearance in Trovatore, it goes on to say: "His youth and passion carried all before it. People who have long regarded Manrico as a lay figure and wondered what was his relation to the plot were stirred by the earnestness of the new tenor, and for the first time interested in the story. To Cardinali belonged the credit of the night. At one stroke Cardinali has dethroned Campanini. Such are the mutations of opera."

One of the sensations of the season has been the opening of the new firm, White, Howard & Co., 25 W. 16th Street, formerly of A. L. Connelly's, their display of Costumes and Wraps being pronounced by the customers as the handsomest in the city.

SIGNOR DE ANNA IN LA FAVORITA.

A newcomer, Signor De Anna, was Fernond. That he is a valuable accession to Mr. Mapleson's forces is proved by the capital impression he produced in spite of extreme nervousness and the fact that he went through the part without having had a single rehearsal. Signor De Anna has a rich and powerful baritone voice, the tones of which roll round the house, the slight est effort on the part of the singer. His success was immediate, and it seems likely that it will be strengthened by further acquaintance with the artist. Times, Nov. 15.

MME. CAVALLAZZI IN LA FAVORITA.

A feature of the representation was the re-appearance of Mme. Cavallazzi, who was greeted with great cordiality. She had to repeat her general pas seul and returned again and again to the front to receive the customary and deserved tribute of plaudits and flowers. Times, Nov. 15.

MISS EMMA NEVADA.

At the twenty-first Triennial Festival at Norwich, England, last October, when Miss Emma Nevada sang the leading soprano rôles, the Prince and Princess of Wales attended for the first time in eighteen years, out of compliment to the American singer. That evening Sir Julius Benedict, who has conducted these Festivals for years past, with such stars as Grisi, Mario, Garcia, Alboni, Piccolomini, Titiens, etc., said: "There has never before been such a success in Norwich as that of to-day by Miss Nevada."

Throughout the festival her vocalization was most admirable, but above excellence of method and manner always appeared intelligence, and the feeling that marks an artistic organization.

The heir to the British throne and his wife were present at the performances on Friday evening. St. Andrew's Hall was packed with one of the finest audiences. Mlle. Nevada sang the air with flute accompaniment from "Lucia," and was encored so enthusiastically—the Prince and Princess leading the applause—that she gave the Mandi from the "Perle du Brasil." She also sang some selections from the "Rose of Sharon," and so ended the festival. While Miss Nevada was putting on her wraps Mr. Randegger stepped up to her and said:

"Their Royal Highnesses have asked me to press it on you to them. She took his arm and very soon found herself in front of the Princess of Wales, to whom she made humble courtesy, and who greeted her with a charming smile.

"Pray, how high can you sing, Miss Nevada?" was the first remark of her Royal Highness.

"I took E natural twice awhile ago, but I often go as high as F natural," was the reply.

"Isn't it wonderful? She can go as high as F natural," said the Princess, speaking to Lady Hastings and the others of her suite. "It was so bell-like, too, and so beautiful. I have often heard of you, and you have given me a great pleasure this evening, and for which I thank you very sincerely." Then the Prince of Wales came in from the smoking-room, and he, too, warmly congratulated Miss Nevada on her success.

The re-entrance of Mme Cavalazzi was an occurrence that gave unalloyed pleasure to the audience. Appreciation for her graceful dancing remains unrivalled as the season pass.—Tribune, Nov. 15.

HER MAJESTY'S OPERA CO.

Academy of Music, New York, Dec. 28, 1878.
Messrs. STEINWAY & SONS:

Gentlemen.—Having used your celebrated pianos in public and private during the present opera season, we desire to express our unqualified admiration of their sonority, evenness, richness and astonishing duration of tone, most beautifully blending with and supporting the voice. These matchless qualities for accompanying the voice, together with precision of action and unequaled capacity for remaining in tune for a great length of time, in our opinion render the Steinway Pianos, above all others, the most desirable of instruments for students of vocal music and the musical public generally.

THE FINEST. THE BEST.

Jacot, Juillerat & Co.,
No. 37 MAIDEN LANE, NEW YORK.

LAST night was Mme. Patti's night. A great audience gathered to hear the "Traviata." Every seat was taken, every coign of vantage occupied. Eager faces looked down over the heads of the trumpet-blowing cherubs of the proscenium. It was quite a memorable occasion.

Mme. Patti wore her very finest diamonds. Nothing sheds more light on the character of Violetta in the "Traviata" than a liberal display of diamonds. She is, as Col. Mapleson says in the argument so eloquently written by him on the programme—she is a young and beautiful creature, thrown by circumstances and the loss of her parents in childhood into a course of voluptuous living." Many prima donnas think that by waving a champagne glass in the air and singing "Libiamo" they indicate a course of voluptuous living. Not so Mme. Patti, who is an acknowledged mistress of the part. She appears in a blaze of jewelry, and thus gives peculiar significance of the moment when, to quote Colonel Mapleson again, she "becomes conscious of the misery of her position and of the hollowness of the pleasures in which she has basked."

In each succeeding act she wears more gems. In the country villa, where she is living in tranquillity with her lover, she puts on a panoply of amethysts and pearls. So when her lover's father calls on her, in his simple black, he is able to appeal to her in far more passionate music than if he had found her in virtuous muslin. In the ballroom scene it seems as if a swarm of fire-flies were gleaming round her neck; and then, by artistic touches, the pathos of her end is intensified. "The fragile flower," says Colonel Mapleson, poetically, "can never more raise its beauteous head. With a gentle sigh her soul parts from its fragile tenement of clay."

In the music Mme. Patti was as "faultly faultless" as ever.—Herald, Nov. 15.

FRANZ LISZT.

The magnificent Steinway Grand piano now stands in my music room, and represents a harmonic totality of admirable qualities, a detailed enumeration of which is the more superfluous, as the instrument fully justifies its world-wide reputation.

WHAT THE GREAT SINGERS & MUSICIANS SAY OF THEM.

NILSSON. I shall take every opportunity to recommend and praise your Instruments.

KELLOGG. For the last six years your Pianos have been my choice for the Concert Room and my own house

PATTI. I have used the Pianos of every celebrated maker, but give yours the preference over all.

CARY. I feel that every one is fortunate who owns a Weber Piano.

STRAUSS. Your Pianos astonish me; I assure you that I have never yet seen any Pianos which equal yours.

CAMPANINI. The Weber Pianos sustain the voice in a wonderful degree, and they have my unqualified admiration.

CAPOUL. I recommend the Weber Pianos in the highest terms and especially for the voice.

MUZIO. I consider the Weber Pianos the best Pianos in the world.

MILLS. Amongst the many excellent Pianos made in this city, the Weber ranks foremost.

LUCCA. Your Uprights are extraordinary Instruments and deserve their great success

MURSKA. Your Instruments surpass my expectations, and I rank you justly as the foremost manufacturer of the day.

TORRIANI. Yours is truly the Artists' Piano.

GODDARD. Your Instruments have no superior anywhere. I certainly have not seen any Pianos in America which approach them even.

CARRENO. I am not surprised that every great artist prefers the Weber Piano; they are truly noble Instruments, and meet every requirement of the most exacting artist.

MAUREL. I readily award the Weber Piano the title par excellence.

WEHLI. Madame Parepa called your Piano the finest in the United States. I fully endorse that opinion. They have no Rival anywhere.

DEL PUENTE. The tone of your Instruments is so pure and of such depth, I am charmed beyond measure.

BRISTOW. To me the Weber Piano contains everything that can be wished for in an Instrument.

TESTIMONIALS AND CERTIFICATES

FROM THE MOST DISTINGUISHED SCIENTISTS, ARTISTS, AND MUSICIANS.

Letter from the world-renowned Composer and Pianist, DR. FRANZ LISZT.

WEIMAR, September 3, 1873.

MESSRS. STEINWAY & SONS:

GENTS: The magnificent Steinway Grand Piano now stands in my music room, and presents a harmonic totality of admirable qualities, a detailed enumeration of which is the more superfluous, as this instrument fully justifies the world-wide reputation that for years you have everywhere enjoyed.

After so much well-deserved praise, permit me to also add my homage, and the expression of my undisguised admiration, with which I remain,

Very sincerely yours, FRANZ LISZT.

Extract from a letter from DR. FRANZ LISZT to the celebrated Composer, METTENIUS, which letter, dated Weimar, September 23, 1873, is now in possession of MESSRS. STEINWAY & SONS.

"Pray tell Mr. STEINWAY that his splendid Upright Piano shone to brilliant advantage at the festival performances at the Wartburg, where, last Tuesday, it served under my fingers as 'Vice-Orchestre,' exciting general admiration.

"Yours very truly, FRANZ LISZT."

From the new Leipzig Music Zeitung.

A new Grand Piano from STEINWAY & SONS, New-York, which we saw and heard in Dr. FRANZ LISZT'S music room, we must acknowledge as the grandest creation that Modern Science in Piano-building has produced.

Letter from the celebrated Pianist and Composer, ANTON RUBINSTEIN, being the only testimonial ever given by him to any Piano manufacturer

NEW-YORK, May 24, 1873.

MESSRS. STEINWAY & SONS:

GENTLEMEN: On the eve of returning to Europe, I deem it my pleasant duty to express to you my most heartfelt thanks for all the kindness and courtesy you have shown me during my stay in the United States; but also, and above all, for your unrivaled Piano-fortes, which once more have done full justice to their world-wide reputation, both for excellence and capacity of enduring the severest trials. For during all my long and difficult journeys all over America, in a very inclement season, I used, and have been enabled to use, your Pianos exclusively in my two hundred and fifteen concerts, and also in private, with the most eminent satisfaction and effect.

Yours very truly, ANTON RUBINSTEIN.

Two letters from PROF. H. HELMHOLTZ, who occupies the Chair of Acoustics in the University of Berlin, admitted to be the highest authority in the Science of Acoustics.

BERLIN, June 9, 1871.

MESSRS. STEINWAY & SONS:

Herewith I beg you to accept my very best thanks for the superb Grand Piano which you have sent me, and which has safely arrived. I am amazed at the prolonged vibration of its tones, by which the instrument becomes somewhat organ-like, by the lightness and delicacy of the touch (considering its great volume of tone), and by the precise and perfect cessation of the tone which the dampers effect—an element so essential to distinctness in playing. With such a perfect instrument as yours placed before me, I must modify many of my former expressed views regarding Pianos.

Once more, my very best thanks.

Yours, H. HELMHOLTZ.

BERLIN, August 13, 1873.

MESSRS. STEINWAY & SONS:

GENTLEMEN: I can only congratulate you on the great improvement you have achieved by the introduction of your Duplex Scale into your Piano-fortes. I have repeatedly and carefully studied the effects of the Duplex Scale just applied to my Steinway Grand Piano, and find the improvement most surprising and favorable, especially in the upper notes, for splendid as my Grand Piano was before, the Duplex Scale has rendered its tone even more liquid, singing, and harmonious. I deem this improvement very happy in its results, and, being based upon scientific principles, capable of still greater development.

Yours very truly, H. HELMHOLTZ.

Letter from FELICIEN DAVID, the eminent Composer of "Le Desert," "Herculaneum," "Lalla Rookh," etc., etc., and the recipient of the Grand Prize of 20,000 francs for the best Composition.

PARIS, June 28, 1867.

MESSRS. STEINWAY & SONS, New-York:

GENTLEMEN: I am only too happy to give you, in these lines, a very sincere testimonial of my admiration for the Pianos manufactured by your house.

In my idea, they are superior to all that I have heard or tried to the present day: and in giving you this certificate, I not only fulfill a duty of conscience, but at the same time render justice to the man and manufacturer who has realized in his productions the greatest progress in the art of Piano-making.

Accept, gentlemen, my best wishes for your well-merited success, and believe me,

Your devoted FELICIEN DAVID.

Letter from ADOLPHE HENSELT, the distinguished Composer and celebrated Pianist.

PARIS, September 2, 1867.

MESSRS. STEINWAY & SONS, New-York:

GENTLEMEN: It is with the greatest pleasure that I have just played upon your Pianos, and can not refrain from expressing to you, in writing, my admiration, and how much I was satisfied with them. I regret much not to have seen you personally in Paris.

Accept, I beg of you, the assurance of my distinguished regards.

ADOLPHE HENSELT.

Letter from HECTOR BERLIOZ, the celebrated French Composer, and acknowledged highest authority on Effects of Sound and Instrumentation.

PARIS, September 23, 1867.

MESSRS. STEINWAY & SONS, Piano Manufacturers, New-York:

I have heard the magnificent Pianos you brought from America, and which emanate from your factory. Permit me to compliment you upon the excellent and rare qualities which these instruments possess. Their sonority is splendid and essentially noble.

Accept, I beg of you, with my compliments, my highest respects.

Your devoted HECTOR BERLIOZ.

Letter from the celebrated Composer, FRANZ ABT.

NEW-YORK, July 6, 1872.

MESSRS. STEINWAY & SONS:

GENTLEMEN: Permit me to thank you for the magnificent Upright Piano which you kindly placed at my disposal during my brief sojourn in New-York, and I can only repeat what I have so often expressed verbally, that during my long career as Artist and Composer, I have met with many fine European and American Piano-fortes, but none that combine grandeur and poetry of tone, elasticity of touch—in short, every thing that renders a PIANO perfect, to such a high degree as your celebrated Piano-fortes.

Very truly yours, FRANZ ABT.

Letter from the celebrated Pianiste, MISS ANNA MEHLIG.

NEW-YORK, May 14, 1873.

MESSRS. STEINWAY & SONS:

GENTS: Your Piano-fortes, with their sympathetic and poetic tone, their glorious sonority, yet wonderful evenness throughout their scale, their perfect and responsive action, their capacity of remaining in perfect tune and order under the severest trials of travel, changes of atmosphere, and use—I prefer to all others.

When at times your Pianos could not be obtained, I have been compelled to use those of other makers, much against my inclination.

Very respectfully yours, ANNA MEHLIG.

Lyceum Theatre.

FRENCH COMEDY.

The present season of French Comedy which has been so successful at the Lyceum Theatre, is just drawing to a close. Mr. Fechter's performances in his native tongue have proved highly attractive, and before the termination of his engagement he will appear in several of those roles with which his name has been so long associated in the voice of fame. "Ruy Blas," a part in which he has won distinction in two languages and three countries, Frederic de Marsan in "on Demande, un Gouverneur," (The Bachelor of Arts,) and Desjeanis in "Les Filles de Marbre," (The Marble Heart,) are among the works he will immediately present to the public. On Monday, Wednesday and Friday evenings of the present week, and at the matinee Saturday afternoon, he will play his original character of Armand Duval in "La Dame aux Camellias," and Mlle. Juliette Clarence will, on these occasions, resume the role of Marguerite Gauthier. The off nights of Mr. Fechter's engagement will be given up to the comedy company and some of those delightful and entertaining works which have been so highly enjoyed by the public, since the arrival of these artists, will be produced. Two of those characteristic and amusing comedies are revived this week, and others new to this stage are in preparation. One of the most important events in what remains of the comedy season at the Lyceum, will be the benefit of Mons. Mezieres. This artist has proved himself to be an actor of great scope, intelligence and versatility. He has become through his remarkable delineations of various distinctly marked and opposed characters an established favorite, and there can be no doubt the public who have derived so much enjoyment from his performances will be glad of this opportunity to compliment an artist of so much merit. "Les Chevaliers du Pincenez" has been chosen by Mr. Mezieres for his benefit. The play is a very humorous one, and it has been said by accomplished critics that Mr. Mezieres' performance of the Chevalier Chabannais has never been approached. The piece will be placed upon the stage with that attention to detail and elaborateness of scenic display for which the management of the Lyceum Theatre is so justly celebrated.

Chas. Fechter.

Another of those splendid successes so long associated with the name of Chas. Fechter, has been attained by that masterly genius at the Lyceum Theatre. His French dramatic representations seem to possess an interest entirely their own, and to make demands upon the public attention similar to those stupendous effects which Mr. Fechter has so often produced by his English works. The Saturday nights during Mr. Fechter's engagement have been reserved by the management of the Theatre for the production of Comedies by the Parisian Company. The city's wealth, beauty and fashion sustain these performances and make them not only enjoyable, but instructive and entertaining. Saturday next, the 11th inst., Mlle. Juliette Clarence takes her first benefit in America, and will produce on that occasion "La mal tresse Legirime," for the first time in America.

Charity Benefit.

On Saturday evening, the 16th inst, a benefit performance in behalf of the "Free Medical College for Women," will be given at the Lyceum Theatre. The benefit will be given by the "Charity Amateur Dramatic Association," and they will perform for the first time Sheridans Great Comedy, "The School for Scandal." The characters in the piece will be assumed by Mrs. Sheridan Shook, Mrs. McKinley, Mrs. James Sykes, Mrs. B. Fox, Mr. John H. Bird, Mr. P. Coulter, Mr. A. De Cordova, Mr. Chas. Bamburgh, Mr. H. Leslie, Mr. R. Christie, and others.

The Benefit will be given under the auspices of the Trustees of the College.

Booth's Theatre.

For two weeks only, Mr. and Mrs. Barney Williams. These old established public favorites will play some of their most successful dramas, and the fortunes of the house where they sport must be always at the flood. Great preparations are going on for the production of Julius Cæsar, and the cast it is said will comprise some of our most prominent artists.

☞ Diagrams of the Theatres in book form, for the pocket. Price, 25 cents, at 33 Union Square.

Fifth Avenue Theatre.

That Mr. Augustin Daly's new drama is a success one fact alone would prove, that, notwithstanding the delays and waits which attended its first production last night, it had sufficient interest to keep a crowded audience until considerably after midnight. The late hour at which the curtain fell on the last act prevents as extended a notice as "Pique" is entitled to by its merit, which are many. No play that we have seen for a long While is so full of situation, and this is both its strength and its weakness.

It is absolutely crowded with events, and there is plot enough for three plays of the same length.

The story tells of a woman who marries from pique, is seperated from her husband, loses her son, who is stolen by tramps, and is finally restored to both her husband and her child

Union Square Theatre.

Rose Michel has made another of those sensation successes for which the Union Square Theatre is remarkable. The story of the play is highly interesting, and the acting of the title role by Miss Rose Eytinge has proved that lady's claim to stand in the foremost rank of her profession. The identity of the actress with her part is absolute, not a trace of any individuality existing but that of the forcibly delineated Rose Michel. Nothing could be more artistic, real, elaborate, natural and effective than the setting of the piece. Each scene is a marvel of stage dressing, and an accurateness of detail has been observed that makes the several pictures complete reproductions of the places in which the action of the drama is supposed to occur. Messrs. Shook and Palmer deserve the most distinguished credit for the judgment they have displayed in the production of Rose Michel.

Determined to be Honest.

The other day a man with a gaunt look halted before an eating stand at the Central Market and after a long survey of the viands he said to the woman:—

"I am a poor man, but I'll be honest if I have to be buried in pauper's field."

"What's the matter now?" asked the woman, regarding him with suspicion.

"No one saw me pick up a twenty-dollar bill here by this stand early this morning, but, as I said before, I'll be honest.

"A twenty-dollar bill—pick up?" she whispered, bringing a bland smile to her face.

"I suppose," he continued, "that some one passing along here could have dropped such a bill, but it seems more reasonable to think that the money was lost by you.

"Dont talk quite so loud" she said, as she leaned over the stand. "You are an honest man, and I'll have your name put in the papers so that all may know it. I'm a hard working widow, and if you hadn't brought back that money it would have gone hard with my poor little children!"

"If I pick up money by a stand I always give it up," he said, as he sat down on one of the stools.

"That's right—that's honest," she whispered. "Draw right up here and have some breakfast."

He needed no second invitation. The way he went for cold ham, fried sausage, biscuit and coffee was terrific to the woman.

"Yes—I—um—try—to—be honest," he remarked between bites.

"That's right. If I found any money belonging to you I'd give it up, you bet. Have another cup of coffee?"

"Don't—care—fidoo," he said, as he jammed more ham into his mouth.

Even courtships have an ending. The old chap finally began to breathe like a foundered horse, and pretty soon after that he rose from the table.

"You're a good man to bring my lost money back," said the woman, as she brushed away the crumbs

"Oh, I'm honest," he replied, "when I find any lost money I always give it up."

"Well, I'll take it now, please," she said, as he began to button his overcoat.

"Take what?" he asked.

"That lost money you found."

"I didn't find any! I'll be honest with you, however, if I ever do find any around here."

"You old liar! Didn't you say you found a twenty-dollar bill here?

"No ma'am. I said that no one saw me pick up such a bill here?"

"Pay me for them pervishuns?" she yelled, clutching at his throat.

"I'll be honest with you—I haven't a cent," he replied, as he held her off.

She tried to trip him over into a barrel of charcoal, but he broke loose, and before she recovered from her amazement he was a block away and galloping along like a stage horse.—From The Detroit Free Press.

BILL OF THE PLAY.

Chit-Chat.

Joseph wore the first pull-back. Mrs. Potiphar pulled it back.

"You're always off at night, Leander," said Mrs. Spilkins, reproachfully, the other evening. "Yes, my dear," replied Spilkins. "You'll remember even when I first proposed, you considered me a pretty good off-er.

A school mistress once asked a pupil to tell
What words the letters S double E spell.
The child was but dull, and so mistress cries,
"What is it, you dunce, I do with my eyes?"
"Oh, yes!" says the child, quickly taking the hint:
"I know the word now, ma'am. S double E, squint!"

Milkmen are spending their leisure hours at watering places.

If walls have ears, planks sometimes speak—did you ever hear a stage whisper.

A Wyoming husband has given full consent for his wife to run for office, but he didn't give it until after a conflict which broke every dish in the house.

A Patchogue woman kept her mouth pried open for six hours, in order to cure a gum boil, and she hasn't been able to shut it since. Her husband is a believer in special Providence.

Yesterday forenoon a very seedy chap jumped into the river foot of Third St., but was pulled out in three or four minutes none the worse for his bath. The crowd scattered, and after a few minutes, when in the sun drying his clothes, a hackmen asked:

"Don't you wish you hadn't?"

"This is no town, this isn't," replied the vagrant, elevating his nose. "I've jumped into the river at Toledo, and had more'n fifty men asked me to drink."

No matter how indifferent the rest of the world may prove to your goings and your comings, how careless of whether you remain away or come back, there is one person who will witness your departure with anxious heart, one pair of eyes that will grow brighter when you return. You know her, young man. It is—it is—be still, oh, beating heart! It is your washwoman.

Since the Cleveland woman sawed off the leg of her drunken husband, discontented and unhappy wives all over the land are anxiously waiting to see if their Cleveland sister will be punished to any severe extent, providing themselves with saws in the meantime.

Formerly the square piano was generally used, notwithstanding it was always cumbersome and inconvenient, as compared with the more elegant upright piano. Undoubtedly this was because the former was best as a musical instrument. Improvements in the Upright Piano have latterly given it the preference. One recently made by the MASON & HAMLIN Company is likely to give the upright still more acceptance. By an ingenious arrangement, they fasten the strings of the piano directly on the iron plate, dispensing with any intervention of wood. The result is more perfect vibration of the strings, producing more pure, refined musical tones, and much greater durability, including freedom from liability to get so easily out of tune.—Boston Journal.

ACROSTIC.

Melodious singer! borne from lands afar,
Art chose thee, gifted thee with wondrous power,
Raised thee above this world, and for thy dower
Crowned thee with love and song as with a star!
Ever to us bright song-bird thou wilt be Loveliest of women who have ever sung;
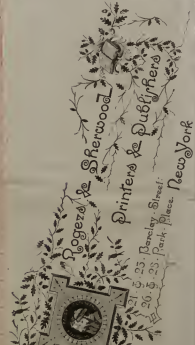
Loveliest of singers whose pure notes have rung
Across the earth and o'er the listening sea.

Sing on! sing on, O glorious queen of song!
Enthroned forever in our loving hearts.
Men pause amid the city's busy marts
Beguiled from toil and traffic by thy strong,
Rich tones so passing pure and sweet—
"In vain," they say, "our efforts to forget,
Charmed by the voice, the woman sweeter yet,
Here kneel we, loyal subjects, at thy feet."

—MARY T. PEET.



MASON & HAMLIN ORGANS

Are celebrated throughout the world. At every one of the GREAT WORLD'S EXHIBITIONS for SIXTEEN YEARS they have been awarded the HIGHEST HONORS. No other American organs having been found equal to them at any. A cable despatch announces that they are again awarded the highest honors at the World's Exhibition now in progress in Amsterdam, Netherlands.

The largest sizes, from $300 to $900 each, are not only UNEQUALLED but quite UNRIVALLED. NO ONE SHOULD JUDGE THE ORGAN AS AN INSTRUMENT UNTIL HE HAS SEEN AND HEARD THESE. They are of all single instruments, the very best interpreters of operatic and orchestral, as well as sacred music; and their sustained tones afford the best possible support to the voice. Popular styles are from $22 to $600 each. For cash, easy payments, or rental. Catalogues free. We usually have on hand at our own warerooms styles not on catalogue, and second-hand organs which can be offered at very low prices.

JANUARY 23, 1882.

MY DEAR MR. WEBER:

Allow me to express my appreciation of and astonishment at the wonderful Upright Piano which you make. I did not believe such perfection could be attained by any one. For sympathetic purity of tone, durability and extraordinary power, evenness of action and beauty of touch, the Weber Piano surpasses any piano I have ever seen, either in America or in Europe, and I have used the pianos of all reputed first-class makers. I am not surprised that great artists prefer them, as they are truly noble instruments.

Very sincerely yours,

GENTLEMEN: On the eve of returning to Europe, I deem it my pleasant duty to express to you my most heartfelt thanks for all the kindness and courtesy you have shown me during my stay in the United States; but also, and above all, for your unrivaled Piano-Fortes, which once more have done full justice to their world-wide reputation both for excellence and capacity of enduring the severest trials. For during all my long and difficult journeys all over America, in a very inclement season, I used and have been enabled to use your Pianos exclusively in my two hundred and fifteen concerts, and also in private, with the most eminent satisfaction and effect.

Yours very truly,

"CAMILLE."

An excellent house greeted Miss Coombs last evening, on the occasion of her benefit, when she appeared as "Camille," in a new and original version of the well-known play of that name. This version does not differ materially from the one usually presented. Perhaps it follows a trifle closer the younger Dumas' story of "The Lady of the Camelias," and is a shade more vigorous and effective.

As "Camille," Miss Coombs gave a most beautiful rendition of the part of that unfortunate woman—too beautiful, perhaps, to accord with the estimation in which the character—or, rather, such characters—are held by the world. Miss Coomb's instincts as a lady are too delicate to give those broad, effective touches which should characterize the reckless woman of the world. But in the more pathetic scenes, where her happiness is wrecked by the very love which she hoped would lift her from the slough in which she had been mired—where love and duty were struggling for the mastery—she is full of the tenderest, noblest emotion.

Mr. Whiting was excellent as "Armand," as also was Mr. Curran as "Monsi. Duval." Mr. Reed gave a very neat and gentlemanly representation as "St. Frivole." Mr. Fitzgerald as "Gustave," Mrs. Jordan as "Madame Babilliard," Miss Jordan as "Helene," Miss Hastings as "Nanette," and Miss Whiting as "Michette" were all excellent in their respective roles.

This afternoon the "Sphynx" will be repeated for the matinee, and in the evening Miss Coombs will close her present engagement by appearing as "Parthenia" in the romantic play of "Ingomar, the Barbarian."

This is a strange story, not to be used in Sunday-school. An Albany man out of work and nearly starving, turned for comfort in his extremity to his sainted mother's Bible for the first time since her death in 1867. To his surprise and delight he found a ten-dollar bill between the leaves and immediately fell on his knees for the first time since 1840. With a light heart and glittering eye he prayfully started for the baker's to obtain a loaf of bread. There he found that the bill was counterfeit, when he swore hitterly for the first time in three hours.

HUMOROUS.

The gallant secretary of a life insurance company, being in command of a platoon during the late unpleasantness, struck up the gun of one of his men about to fire on a staff officer with the exclamation, "Don't shoot at him, we've got a policy on him!" —New Orleans Republican.

Schuyler Colfax won't attend a circus, but he takes the children and paces slowly around the canvas that they may hear the songs of the clown and the glad voice of the trick mule.—Detroit Press.

The secret of Chicago's complacency over her desertion by the fire insurance companies, may be traced to the fact that any one of her girls could stamp out the next great conflagration that comes along.

The latest Sunday school prodigy, having listened to a discourse on the necessity of offering a firm front to the evil one, said he'd "he scared of the old devil, but if he came across one of the little ones he'd knock the stuffing out of him."

We don't want to kick up a great rumpus and be the means of bringing about a dozen libel suits; but right here and right now it may be well to remark that tobacco is not injurious to the human system. Now then, come on.—Detroit Press.

A young man in Fairfield, Iowa, received a letter from his girl last Sunday, and five minutes after reading it, shot himself dead. Every woman in the town would give ten years of her life to know what the letter contained that made the young man feel so.

The family of Mr. Shippen of Hoboken, will not have to endure the horrors of house cleaning this fall. Some thieves attended to some $3,000 worth of it while the family were at the seashore.

Lawyer—"How do you identify this handkerchief?" Witness—"By its general appearance, and the fact that I have others like it." Counsel (cutely)—"That's no proof, for I have got one just like it in my pocket." Witness (innocently)—"I don't doubt that, as I had more than one of the same sort stolen."

An American youth, while traveling in California, was ambitiously displaying a small pistol before a brawny miner, whose belt was weighed down with two heavy six shooters, when the miner asked what he had there. "Why," replied the youth, "that is a pistol." "Well," said the rough, "if you should shoot me with that, and I should find it out, I'd lick you like fun."

A Detroit young woman tried to be aristocratic and did not look at the money that she gave the horse-car conductor, but he meekly gave her back the lozenge on which was written, "I'll never cease to love thee," and said that he was an orphan with five little brothers to support and must be excused.

WOMAN AND HER WHIMS.

Ladies for hotel clerks is the latest and best idea.

Michigan has sixteen thousand women who pay taxes and have no representation.

Boston has just started a Ladies' Club, where the expensive creatures can get luncheon and talk scandal without fear of male intruders.

The ladies of Cincinnati are taking initial steps for having representation in the ladies' department of the Centennial Exposition.

Miss Honore, the fiancee of Colonel Fred. Grant, is described as having most beautiful eyes. "They are the eyes of a Mary Stuart," says a gushing writer, "and as such, are capable of winning the heart of a world."

Miss Martha Hempstead has just died at Cohanzie in Waterford, aged nearly ninety-one. She was a daughter of Mary Bill, of Groton, whom every school boy knows as the revolutionary heroine who said to her husband on his way to the war, "John, do not get shot in the back!"

Frankie Christie, the danseuse who married an Admiral's son in Washington few months ago and since submitted to the divorce exacted by his relatives, has been dancing in Indianapolis, and has been duly interviewed. She says in "elegant language" that "Pressly" writes her every day from the college at Bethlehem, in this State, where he now is.

Commend us to Mrs. Hurtel, of Ralston, Pa. She caught a thief in her bedroom last week, collared him, and shook him up so industriously that his hat fell off. Out of his hat fell her pocketbook which he had secreted. The brave lady in picking up her pocketbook was incautious enough to let go of her thief, who did not wait to recover his hat nor to make even the most limited inquiry as to what direction he should take.

"Linonsine" or "Oxford" stripe, as it is sometimes called, is a fashionable material for polonaises. It is a sort of large-meshed woolen towcling with a hair stripe in high colors crossing the invisible checked on mottled ground. Some of the colored stripes are made much wider than the technical "hair," but these are not approved. They are considered noisy and not good taste.

A school-boy being requested to write a composition upon the subject of "Pins," produced the following: "Pins are very useful. They have saved the lives of a great many men, women and children—in fact, whole families." How so?" asked the puzzled teacher; and the boy replied, "Why, by not swallowing them." This matches the story of the other boy who defined salt as the "stuff that makes potatoes taste bad when you don't put on any."

FASHION NOTES.

Gold arrows an inch long, are fashionable as Earrings.

A white bugle fringe has appeared for trimming ball dresses.

Black silk suits are trimmed with wide bands of black velvet down the front width and on the waist.

Irish plaid costumes are worn with stylish effect over underskirts of black velvet or even velveteen.

Sashes are not worn as long as they were. Much of the material is used to form a huge bow or loop at the side.

The tight-fitting basque waist with coat-tails, is most in favor for all indoor dresses of every material.

Street dresses—walking suits—should not touch the ground by two inches all round. This new fashion does away with the affectation of catching up the skirts on the left side to cross imaginary mud puddles.

Scarlet is one of the most fashionable of this season's colors. It is shown in the new bonnets and handsomely blended in many of the promenade costumes.

Feminine bonnets and hats are very similar. The hat has a long veil twisted around the crown and the two ends crossed at the back of the neck and tied in front like a scarf. White or blue are the colors in veils.

Waists were never worn so tight fitting as now. Corsets to a great extent are discarded by vulgar women for this new fashion of "glove-fitting waists."

Necklaces of both real and imitation jet retain their popularity exceedingly well. With a black silk dress these necklaces are particularly effective and showy.

Cloth suits trimmed with fur will be fashionable next winter—nearly all being made in the polonaise style. The cloth muff to correspond will also be in vogue.

Talle necktics made over light-colored silk or satin are very pretty and very fashionable. They are made in the old-fashioned bow style with moderately long ends.

Lace barbes are worn in the hair again as was the rage a few years ago, when real lace was cheaper than now.

There does not seem to be any particular style of arranging the hair just now. Some wear the queue, others the French braid, and a few wear it high in the neck. Generally it is dressed high in front, with puffs on top and "cat-paws" on either side.

For morning wear high standing English collars are the invariable rule, with the ends slightly broken in front. The Byron collar is affected by some would-be-conspicuous ladies and it makes them look very ridiculous.

THE OPERA LAST NIGHT.

The wonders of the toilet were exemplified last night by the magnificent audience present at the Academy. The fashion and elegance of the city were there, and the performance passed off with great eclat. The members of the cast were, of course, more perfectly familiar with their respective parts, and possibly the entertainment may have been a trifle smoother in its varied workings.

The regular Company will regale us this evening with some choice sensation, and will present that ever welome piece, "The Streets of New York."

PERFECTLY ENRAPTURED.

As we were coming along Bank street last night, on our return from the Academy, we overheard a gentleman expatiating to the beautiful young lady who accompanied him upon the grandeur of the German Opera, which they had just attended. The young man's joy seemed perfectly ecstatic, and it was with extreme difficulty that we could gather the following sentence from his somewhat disconnected yet enthusiastic peroration:

"Why, it seemed to me that the aroma of violets exuded from the opera as though every note were an odorous petal whose exquisite scent was carried to the finer nerves of the brain upon the balmy air of sound, dying away in melodious and evanescent falls, and swelling with the richness of perfumed life into being again, until the soul was wrapped in a mantle of sensuous delight that made it faint with rapture."

But it was too much for him! We knew he couldn't survive it. That man was borne home in an insensible condition. It was fitting that these should be his last words. What a proud monument to the departed eloquence.

For a fine pair of custom-made boots or shoes, go to W. N. Scott, 106 Ontario street, north side of the Public Square.

Miss Neilson is in St. Louis.

Lawrence Barrett is in Louisville.

Manager Ellsler is at home this week.

J. J. Wallace and troupe are at Reading, Pa.

The Katie Putnam Company is at Chattanooga this week.

The Kellogg Troupe will be in Dayton Thanksgiving Day.

Don't forget the special matinee Thanksgiving Day.

F. S. Chanfrau did a splendid business, last week, in St. Louis.

Sam Sharpley is making things lively this week over at the Opera House.

Wonder what will be played Thanksgiving evening? Something good, we assure you.

Carlotta Leclercq will join Augustin Daly's new theater in New York City.

Tom Badger, in "The Streets of New York," is a character we all love. Don't fail to see him.

J. W. McCullough opened at the Arch Street Theatre, Philadelphia, Monday evening, in Coriolanes.

M. W. Canning, late agent for Miss Leclercq, is to be business manager of the New National, at Washington City.

Lester Wallack pays the widow of the late T. W. Robertson three pounds each time one of his comedies are played at his theatre. This is honorable.

John Howson, of the Susan Galton Troupe, has created a furore at San Francisco by his wonderful comic ability as Baron Puck in the "Grand Duchess," and in eccentric character parts.

J. H. Chatterson, a young New York tenor, has stirred up England recently. He belongs to the Parepa-Rosa Opera Troupe, now performing in that country. A provincial paper says that William Castle has at length found a rival, and the lyric stage a vocal treasure.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND REVIEWS

"All the world's a stage,
And all the men and women merely players"

WILL P. GENTHER, - - - Editor.

THE GERMAN OPERA.

The musical culture of our people, we are pleased to note, is keeping pace with the æsthetic development of the times, and the appreciative audience at the Academy last night effectually demonstrates that even amateur talent can command intelligent and discriminating audiences when of a sufficiently excellent character. The performance of last evening was thoroughly enjoyable in all its details, every participant reflecting the utmost credit upon themselves. The orchestra was remarkable for its admirable adjustment and even balance, and our worthy local maestro has evidently done his best in providing an instrumental ensemble equal to the task of rendering the classical music of the programme in creditable style.

To-night is the last time of the grand opera.

To-morrow evening "Streets of New York."

For a fine pair of custom-made boots or shoes, go to W. N. Scott 106 Ontario street, north side of the Public Square

The latest announcement for new music is: "Hush, Sister's Dying with Piano Accompaniment."

A man who wanted to be a minister said he believed he had been called to labor in the Lord's barnyard.

AS YOU LIKE IT.

The Chinese laborers in Cuba object to being paid in paper. They say it's too thin.

"We are fearfully and wonderfully made," as the man, quoting Scripture, said to his friend, as they were looking at the skeleton of a donkey.

Cerebro-spinal-meningitis is a tough word for telegraphers to get hold of on the wires. A Sioux City lightning jerker wrote it out, Carabo Spencer's Menagerie.

A homesick San Franciscoan, who is visiting the East, finds occasional relief by having sand squirted in his face and down his back with a bellows.—Danbury News.

A man up on Garden street kicked another man, the other day, and was arrested for so doing. When brought before Justice Payne, he informed his Honor that the man he had kicked was a lightning-rod man. The justice at once discharged him with the remark: "The man who wouldn't kick a lightning-rod man wherever he finds one is unfit to enjoy the liberties for which Washington fought and Thomas Paine wrote."

Josh Billings gives the following advice to young men: Don't be discouraged if yer mustash don't grow. It sumtimes hapens that where a mustash duz the best nothing else duz so well.

Auxiliator for the Hair.
The difficulty which has been found heretofore in the manufacture of an auxiliator for the hair, on account of the impossibility of procuring through ordinary processes of manufacture a product that would remain perfectly fresh and unalterable and free from products of decomposition, has induced Mr. Westphal to cause investigation to be made in some of the foremost laboratories, with the purpose in view of procuring a pure article of this kind. He has succeeded, and his preparation has become very popular.

For the preservation and promotion of the beauty and growth and securing the restoration of the hair, keeping the head cool, allaying the itching and fever of the scalp, and giving a rich gloss to the hair, it has no equal. It will free the head from all dandruff immediately and is a perfect hair dressing for ladies and gentlemen. It is highly perfumed and free from oil. If your druggist or dealer does not keep Westphal's Auxiliator, write to him for it. Prices are 50c and $1.00 per bottle. Manufactured only by Paul Westphal, 325 West 38th st., New York.

John H. Murray's New and Best Circus.

The Aquarium after thorough and extensive alterations under the new management is again open to the Public. It is now in Holiday garb, with the famous John H. Murray Circus as the attraction. This excellent Company have just closed a successful traveling season, and have added a number of new attractions to their already brilliant array of talent, and will inaugurate their winter season at the Aquarium on the evening of Dec. 20th, giving two grand performances daily.

The pachymeter, lately patented in Vienna, which measures the thickness of paper to the one-thousandth part of an inch, is outdone by the micrometer caliper, now coming into use in this country, which determines the thickness of paper or anything else to the ten-thousandth part of an inch.

The names of many strangers who migrated to Russia have become so altered that scholars are unable to trace their original form. They have, however, discovered that the Russian Khomutof was once the English Hamilton.

Miss Lucy Larcom writes to the Marblehead (Mass.) Messenger that her poem, "Hannah Binding Shoes," had no real foundation in fact; that she knew many Hannahs in Beverly but none in Marblehead, and that the poem was suggested by the glimpse of a woman sitting at a window binding shoes, which she had on a drive through Swampscott, Marblehead and Salem.

City and Country Cousins.

The difference between "city" and their country cousins is more marked than most people believe. The first impression which a man has on finding himself for the first time in a great city is of vague excitement, accompanied by a sense of danger. The multiplicity of objects appear formidable to an eye accustomed to rural scenery; the uninterrupted noises, the entangled yet purposeful movements, and, above all, the shifting panorama of unfamiliar human faces, combine to throw the visitor into a state of mind totally strange to him. And amid so much tumultuous life he sees death everywhere on the lookout for a victim. But if the visitor to these strange regions looks at the faces of those he meets in search of some reflection of his own purturbation, he looks in vain. The countenance of the city man, as he treads his way along the street, is curiously impassive. At a first glance it appears also to be unobservant; but this it is not. For although he seems to look at nothing, it soon becomes evident that he sees everything. He mechanically informs himself, out of the corner of his eye, of everything that might tend to obstruct or threaten him; and though he passes through a thousand people without encountering the gaze or treading on the toes of any one of them he will recognize an acquaintance or calculate to an inch the rate of speed at which he must make the crossing in order to escape the omnibus from one direction and the truck from the other. Doubtless custom and memory will account for a large part of it; yet the impassive face would probably appear far less impassive than it does had not the contraction of the facial muscles brought about by the constant assaults of innumerable impressions and the impossibility of responding to them all, become in a manner fixed. The houses and the pavements, the vehicles and the hubbub, produce an effect on these muscles just the reverse of that exercised by the hills and dales of the country; they press them in instead of drawing them out—in other words, the mind resists them instead of sympathizing with them.

"Slept on their arms all night!" exclaimed good Mrs. Hickenlooper, looking up from the paper in which she had been reading of the English troops in Afghanistan, and beaming on her husband over its top; "why, only last night I slept on one of my arms only a few minutes, and it made it so numb I couldn't use it to get breakfast with. I slept on their arms all night, indeed!" And the good soul was so aroused that she quite forgot her coffee, until the cat called her attention to the matter by whisking across the table and upsetting the cup in her lap.—Rockland Courier.

"Pears to me your mill goes awful slow," said an impatient farmer boy to a miller; "I could eat that meal faster'n you grind it." "How long do you think you could do it, my lad?" quoth the miller. "Till I starved to death" answered the boy.

While a minister was conducting a funeral service at a cemetery in Pottsville, Pa., a snake came out of the grave, ragged its head and moved toward him. He kept his eye on it while going on with the ritual. The reptile was finally killed by a gentleman with his cane.

ENTHUSIASM.

"By JUPITER, BOYERS, YOUR PIANOFORTES are my HEART'S DELIGHT. They give me many HAPPY HOURS. IT'S an OUTBURST in such matters and your goods have a SOLID VOICE which should make them ALL THE RAGE. You ought to set the FASHION in your line and I prophesy a GREAT SUCCESS for you."

The above rhapsody was poured forth by a gentlemen, after being shown through the complete stock of cigars kept by Wm. C. Bowers & Co. wholesale dealers at No. 143 Duane street, New York City.

It provoked a hearty laugh from the senior partner, for the words emphasized were all names of stand and brands of cigars dealt in by this young and enterprising firm. And what is more, every word uttered was solid truth, as can be ascertained by any of those whose interests would be served by investigating the matter.

The Grand Opera House, New York City, is one of the most handsome buildings in this country, the 1st floor is occupied by elegant stores, foremost among which is that of Salzberger, the popular dry goods merchant, where the ladies of New York and the surrounding cities go for bargains in dress goods, cloaks, suits, silks, etc. Toys, Games, &c., for the holidays.

Society and the public demand, recreation for their children, and one of the most healthful, enjoyable and elevating amusements is dancing. Families are particularly invited to attend the select classes at Mr. Geo W. Wallace's Academy, Coleman's Hall 13th street and Eighth avenue, send for a circular (see adv. 3d page.)

Mr. C. C. Shayne, for a number of years the leading fashionable fur manufacturer, Broadway, cor. 10th, street, has removed to his factory, 103 Prince street. His specialties are Sealskin and Otter Sacques and Dolmans and fur-lined garments made up in the latest fashionable style from selected skins, so that every article can be relied upon as being first-class in every particular. Owing to cheap rent and small expenses, he is enabled to sell at low prices. Give him a call.

A Curious Will Case.

A very curious illustration of the chances of litigation is found in the Heedrs case. A colored woman of this name, by a long life of industry and thrift, accumulated a property estimated at $75,000. She left a husband, who claimed at least a part of the property, but offered to waive that claim on receipt of $5,000. This was refused by the other heirs, but while overhauling some papers the old man found a will by which the deceased bequeathed to him the entire amount. This will has just been approved, and the other heirs get nothing. How much they now regret they did not accept the old man's proposition.—New York Letter.

ALTHEA.

To take the place of water, soap and cosmetics.

A WASH FOR CLEANSING AND PRESERVING THE SKIN SOFT, FAIR AND FREE FROM WRINKLES.

Cosmetics ruin the complexion, as also do powder and all applications which fill the pores. A good complexion depends largely upon keeping the pores open and healthy. Good food and plenty of exercise are among the best skin beautifiers, but the changes from heat to cold, and vice versa, are so violent in our country that American women are subject to sallow, dry and unattractive complexions, when all conditions of health are observed, from CLIMATE ALONE. The skin requires to be treated with uniformity, and to keep soft, fair, delicate and without wrinkles, water absolutely must not touch the face unless distilled. Washing in hard water co-day and soft to-morrow is ruinous to face and neck. English women have beautiful complexions because the fog of their island acts uniformly upon the skin, softening and whitening it; but all of our climatic conditions are opposed to beauty of complexion.

The Althea is a strictly hygienic face wash, to take the place of the daily use of water. It is a tonic preparation for the preservation of the skin, and if the face and neck are wiped morning and evening with a soft linen, wet in Althea, and then carefully dried, the ugliest skin will improve and become soft, fair and delicate in time without the use of powders, creams or cosmetics of any kind, to hide blemishes that will ultimately ruin the complexion.

The formula was supplied by one who had made the complexion and its treatment a life-long study; and as every bottle is put up by us, no quack or injurious ingredients can find their way into the Althea, which is nothing but a cleansing and healing lotion which every woman should have on her toilet table.

Price of Bottle, - - - $1.00.

Gentlemen:—Twenty-five years I contracted rheumatism while serving in the Regular Army in Arizona and New Mexico. I have tried many remedies, and have received medical treatment from prominent physicians, but all failed to do me any good. I heard of your Mexican Rheumatism Remedy through a friend, who induced me to send for a bottle. I have now taken about half of the second bottle and am entirely cured. I take pleasure in recommending your remedy to all who are suffering from rheumatism in any form.

Synopsis of Scenery and Incidents.

ACT I. SCENE 1.—Market Place in Stamboul and Oriental Slave Bazaar, by J. Ward A. Thompson (head scenic artist of Corsair), and Thomas Grist (of the Standard Theatre). Arrival of Conrad of the Corsairs, disguised. Birdalia, a Greek of a more truculent nature, enters upon the scene and determines to strive (in more senses than one) for the favor of Conrad. Gulnare, Yusuf and the bevy of beautiful Circassian slaves. Seyd Pacha visits the Bazaar in quest of ladies for his Harem. He sees the beautiful Medora and determines to buy her. Her momentary uncle sells her for 2,000 sequins. Sudden appearance of Conrad and his band. Fight and general dodging. Return of the Pacha with reinforcements. Conrad declares himself. Rescue and escape of Medora. DEPARTURE IN CONRAD'S GOLDEN BARGE. SCENE 2.—On the Beach, (J. A. Thompson). Morlin, retreat of the corsairs. Barbarto meditates. He signals to the Corsairs and induces them to join in his plot to undermine Conrad. Yusuf also is approached and joins the conspiracy. The Pacha's Galley.—On board the "Dove of the Seas," by H. L. Reid). Conrad's magnificent barque. A life on the ocean wave." Sea-dog song and Birbanto, assisted by Yusuf, attempts to scuttle the ship. Retired. Pershoni. Terrible re-joicing and grand finale. "Take heed, beware."

ACT II. SCENE 1.—Pirate Grotto by the seashore, (by H. L. Reid). Joyous revelry of the lair of the Corsairs. Conrad at home with Gulnare, Birdalia and the band. Wine runs. The drugged wine. The abduction. SCENE 2.—The Pacha's Galley. The Pacha's Harem. Medora's captivity. The contrived plot. Her power to drown the cheerful Zuleima. "Mumm's the word." The Corsairs' convivial song and chorus. SCENE 3.—The beautiful Gardens of the Pacha, (by J. A. Thompson). THE PRISMATIC FOUNTAIN: a series of vivid rainbow effects embodying every color in the rainbow. Grand Sextet of the Amazons and Odalisques. Medora's despair. Her rescue and flight, and submerging arrest. The Harem back numbers must not be disposed of. Love and Dismay. The blind slaves. Wine enough for Zuleima to behead instead of Scheherazade.

Important Information Concerning Vaseline.

We are sorry to say that some druggists palm off on their customers a cheap imitation which they claim to be genuine, and some even go so far as to put up the imitation in bottles from junk-dealers, and fill them with the imitation. We have in a single instance got any benefit from such worthless stuff, and find it difficult for the public to tell the imitation from the real, the only safe-e lies in accepting only original bottles packed in our circulars and card-board boxes, refusing everything else, no matter what the druggist says, nor how persuasive he may be. DR. TALMAGE writes: "All my family, except myself, play on Bradbury Piano-Fortes, and if I find one of the instruments in Heaven (and why should they have trumpets there), I shall have to learn to play on one of them myself. Bradbury is there, and you are going, and I don't know what either of you would do without a piano to amuse yourselves with.

"I should have no faith in the sense or religion of a person who does not like the Bradbury. It is the pet of our household. It occupies but a small space in our room, but fills the whole house with music. It is adapted to morning prayers or the gayest parties that ever shook my parlors. F. G. Smith, the maker, is a Methodist, but his Bradbury Pianos are all orthodox. You ought to hear me talk and sing."

LETTER FROM THE WHITE HOUSE.

FREEBURN G. SMITH, Manufacturer of the Bradbury Piano.
EXECUTIVE MANSION
Washington, D. C., April 7th, 1877.

Warerooms and Office, 95 Fifth Avenue, New York.

DEAR SIR:—Mrs. President Hayes directs me to write you at once that the Bradbury Upright Piano which she ordered has been placed in the Executive Mansion in the private parlor—the best place in the house—where she receives and entertains her friends—here it is greatly admired by her and all her friends who see it. It is a remarkably fine instrument in quality of tone, finish and touch, and everything that goes to make up a truly first-class piano, and further, that it gives entire satisfaction in every respect. Very truly yours,

W. K. ROGERS, Private Secretary to the President.

OUR MANUFACTORY is the largest, most extensive in Brooklyn, and equal to any in the U. S. We manufacture only first-class Pianos, and have recently built a fine repair department where we refit, adjust and regulate Pianos. We employ none but the best and most experienced men, and when the Pianos, Organs, Melodeons are finished you can scarcely tell them from new instruments, many who have sent their instruments to us have supposed when they were sent home they were new; all this is done at the lowest rates. We also exchange old instruments for new ones, giving you the new ones at trade rates, very much lower than any dealers can furnish them. If you will call, or drop us a line, we will call and see you, and should you desire to have your Piano repaired or exchanged, we will name a price that will more than please you; or if you could spare the time to call and go through our manufactory and see some Pianos and Organs we have made almost new, we feel sure you will let us fix your Piano, or should you think of buying for cash or monthly payments, or renting and letting the rent apply on the purchase, we will give you low down factory prices. All our Pianos are warranted; a written guarantee goes with every Piano. Please drop us a line, or come and see us, should you have any idea of getting an instrument or having your old one repaired? Get out at Raymond Street and walk one block, the factory is foot of Fort Green.

CHARLES DICKENS CHAROZE WITH BEING A COUNTERFEITER.—A story is told that on one of his pedestrian "fits," Charles Dickens was taken for a "smasher." He had retired to rest at Gad's Hill, but he found he could not sleep, so he determined to turn out, dress, and walk up to London, some thirty miles. He reached the suburbs in the gray morning, and applied at an "early" coffee-house for some refreshment, tendering for the same a sovereign, the smallest change he happened to have about him.

"It's a bad 'un," said the man, biting at it, and trying to twist it in all directions, "and I shall give you in charge."

Sure enough, the coin did have a suspicious look. Mr. Dickens had carried some substance in his pocket which had oxydized it. Seeing that matters looked awkward, he at once said:

"But I am Charles Dickens."

"Come, that won't do: any man could say he was Charles Dickeus. How do I know?"

The man had been victimized only the week previously, but at length, at Mr. Dicken's suggestion, it was arranged that they should go to a chemist to have the coin tested with aquafortis. In due course, when the shops opened, a chemist was found, who immediately recognized the great novelist—notwithstanding his dusty appearance—and the coffee-house keeper was satisfactorily convinced that he had not been entertaining a "smasher."

A MAN went into the country last Sunday for a walk. He carried his overcoat on his arm, but finding it burdensome hung it on a fence. Taking a card from his pocket he wrote: "Do not touch this coat; infected with small pox." He came back two hours later and found the card, upon which was written underneath his warning: "Thanks for the coat; I've had the smallpox."

IMPORTANT TO SCHOOLS AND SEMINARIES.—The constant use of the HARDMAN PIANOS in hundreds of schools—public and private—throughout the United States and Canada, where they are subjected to from 8 to 10 hours use daily, has demonstrated the facts of their phenomenal durability, retention of tone and perfection of action. Warerooms, No. 146 Fifth Avenue.

C. C. SHAYNE, Furrier, 103 Prince Street, has the finest Sealskins in New York.

THE OTHER WAY ABOUT.—Beardless youth: "Miss Franklin, I love you." Blushing maiden: "Speak to your papa!"—Humoristische Blatter.

"You have a great many new buildings in Brooklyn," said a stranger to a citizen.

"What makes you think so?"

"Why, one-third of the men I meet are pointers, judging by the paint on their clothes."

"Thunder, mnn! That's no paint. It's the chalk that they sop off the floor of the Palace Skating Rink."

IT was the last act of a new comedy, and the house half empty at the start, was nearly deserted, only a few of the free list remaining. The curtain went up, and the leading man began with his line: "Are we alone?" The utility man glanced over the auditorium and answered, in tragic tones: "We are." For the first and last time the audience laughed.

IT seems to be the ambition of all young wives to look well when any one calls. A young bride heard a ring at the front door. The maid was out, and she rushed upstairs to "tidy" a little before admitting the caller. There was a moment of lightning work before the dress rig table. Quicker than it takes to tell it, a ribbon was fastened to her throat, a flower stabbed into her hair, a flash of powder on her face, and she was at the door—all smiles and blushes. The "gentleman" said he had the cheapest clothes-props that could be bought for money.

INTERESTING TO LADIES.—A Great Discovery—"Tricora." Unequalled as a Stay for Corsets. A material of South American growth, known as "Tricora." The best Corset Stay ever discovered. "Tricora," being very tough and pliable, conforms to every movement of the body, affording such a delightfully comfortable and healthy support, as to leave the wearer almost unconscious of the presence of a corset.

The New Style Sealskin Garments introduced by C. C. SHAYNE, 103 Prince Street, are very popular.

SOHMER & CO., PIANOS.

From FARM LIFE, a Diseased Newspaper.

Sohmer & Co., ranking among the foremost of our first class Piano Manufacturers, have lately again been obliged to enlarge their facilities for the manufacture of their instruments.

Our representative, on his recent visit to their Warerooms, was astonished to see so many customers, contrasting the Sohmer Pianos, in spite of the general dull times. Mr. Chas Fahr, with Sohmer & Co., is showing this round, stating that the demand for their Pianos is quite unprecedented, and are especially sought for by the musical profession for their own private use. Their "Bijou" Grand, in particular, (French named for "Gem", and intended for music-ic their great attraction, it being the smallest Grand Piano ever manufactured to date). For fullness of tone, it rivals the largest Concert Grand piano now in use.

In conclusion, we wish to state that, when ever a piano is desired of unexcelled excellence and progress is due at all, it certainly should be awarded to the firm of Sohmer & Co.

"YES, Brethren," says the clergyman who is preaching the funeral sermon, "our deceased brother was cut down in a single night—torn from the arms of his loving wife, who is thus left a disconsolate widow at the early age of twenty-four years." "Twenty-two, if you please," sobs the widow, emerging from her handkerchief for an instant.

AN unsympathetic surgeon smiles when he sees an orange peel on the pavement in front of his house.

ATTRACTIVE.—The following notice appeared in a shop window of a tailor at Cork: "Wanted, two apprentices, who ill he treated as one of the family."

THE YOUNG HOUSEWIFE.—Husband: Haida, dear, as I was passing through our garden, I saw some asparagus ready for cooking; perhaps you would like to go and gather the first of the season yourself?

Young wife (anxious to conceal her ignorance in the vegetable department): "I tell you what, Adolphus, we will go together; you shall pluck it, and I will hold the ladder!"—

The American debut of the Great Parisian Artiste, JUDIC, will transpire at Wallack's Theatre, on Thursday, October 1st, and gives promise of being a brilliant epoch in the annals of New York amusements. The Subscription Sale is very large. Judic will open in "M'lle Nitouche," which was written expressly for her. Her creation of the rôle set Paris in a wild delirium of delight. She played in this whirlwind of fun and music over 300 times. Mr. Grau, under whose management this Queen of Comedy will appear, has engaged one of the best supporting companies to be found in Europe. The principals are all noted artists, and nearly all of them are new to the theatre goers of this country. Judic's repertoire will embrace "Lili," "La Femme a Papa," "Ninichc," "Les Cosaque," "La Rousselle," "Le Grand Casimir," "Divorcons," "Les Charbonniers," and probably "La Grande Duchesse."

THE new, large and excellently arranged factory of Messrs. J. & C. FISHER is now complete in all details and is in every respect a model factory. A visit to this immense institution was well repaid in noting the thorough system prevalent, and the admirable perfection to which all details had been brought. The structure is as near fire-proof as possible, and due regard has been paid to securing the greatest convenience and the best light. The producing capacity is about one hundred and twenty-five pianos per week. The annual production of Messrs. J. & C. FISHER'S establishment is greater than that of any other factory in the world, and their instruments sell readily and have an excellent reputation. The best agencies in the country handle these pianos, and find them very satisfactory. They are making some new style cases with carved panels, very ornamental, that take well with the trade.

GENTLEMEN will find it a great advantage to buy their Fashionable Ties down town. You get a more stylish and finer material in a hat, and at a lower price, at C. SIMS', 32 Broadway, than elsewhere in this city. These are facts. You can save one dollar and over on every purchase.

A REVEREND sportsman was one day boasting of his infallible skill in finding a hare. "If I were a hare," said a Quaker who was present, "I would take my seat in a place where I should be sure of not being disturbed by thee, from the first of January to the last day of December." "Why" where would you go?" asked the sportsman. "Into thy study!" replied the Quaker. "For it seems to me that thy brain is not overworked, and it seems most fitting that thou shouldst protect instead of destroy.

A dash, a crash, 'twas awful rash,
But the roller skates upset her.
A slip, a rip, she cut her lip,
But the next time she'll do better.
A slide she tried, the skates were slide:
They proved to be a fetter.
No more she'll soar the rink all o'er,
Because her ma won't let her.

HOWARD PAUL relates that in a moment of wild forgetfulness, he asked a well-known London actress, who makes up skilfully, her age. Her reply was frank. "I have four ages," she replied, with animation; "the family archives unfortunately proclaim that I am fifty; by daylight I pass for thirty-six; by gaslight not more than thirty; and with all my war-paint on in a soft light, and no rude glare, I pass for five-and-twenty."

He had just gone down and purchased two tickets for the opera, and grasping the two halves of his week's salary he hastened to the house and was ushered into her presence. "Ah, Miss De Smith, a very cold day, is it not? Will you not allow me the pleasure of being your escort to the opera to-night?" "Oh thank you so much but Mr. Crankycurler Jones has asked me Mr. Brown, and I am afraid I shall have to refuse you; I am so sorry. Yes, indeed, it is a verry, very cold day."

SHAKESPEARE'S WIFE.—Shakespeare's marriage with the placid and commonplace Ann Hathaway, and she was several years older than himself to boot, seems at first sight as unsuitable as that of Burns with his "Bonny Jean." Ann was "sonsy," as they say in Scotland, and good-natured; and the union was for from an unhappy one for the poet, as it was probably a very fortunate match for posterity. Had he been caught by some rustic siren, who could have made eages as well as nets, he might never have come to trouble with his Justice Shallow, and might have realized a decent competency in the Stratford wool trade. As it was, he had broken bounds for a time before his genius rose soaring into the infinite. But few men have apparently been more indifferent to fame, although it is conceivable that the seeming indifference may have been born of serene self-assurance. Certain it is that he scarcely gave a thought to the offspring of his brain when they had rapidly taken shape under his flying fingers; he left the capital, when in the full flush of his fame, to come back contentedly to comparative obscurity in Stratford. And if his wife had something to forgive she forgave it very freely, and we have no doubt made him very comfortable in his maturity. William Howitt has read in the Sonnets a pretty and poetical story of Shakespeare's vie intime and conjugal relations. How far it may be fanciful we cannot say; but we are inclined to think there must have been more in Ann Hathaway than most of her husband's biographers have believed. It is unlikely on the face of it that Shakespeare should have married a woman whose soul did not ring responsively to some of the finer chords of his own. We suspect that in her fresh bloom and simple modesty, as in the sweetness of the homely fragrance she diffused, she resembled one of those old-fashioned garden flowers the dreamer of the "Midsummer Night's Dream" loved so dearly. And if it were so, the happiest evenings of his life may have been those he passed with Ann at Shottery.

A PARIS NEWSPAPER.—The Figaro, a journal established thirty years ago, on a capital of 1,800 francs, now pays yearly dividends amounting to more than 2,500,000. Hippolyte de Villemessant came to Paris from the little village of Bicis, in 1849, and two years later entered upon journalism as a reporter on the Press, signing his articles as "Louis de Saint Loup," the name of his grandmother. There were then, as now, an advertising agency, Dollingen & Co., and it was the head of this firm who, in 1854, in partnership with de Villemessent, established the journal which has since become a power throughout the world. No newspaper is bolder; no editorial staff comprises more talent; no paper is oftener quoted; none is more frequently prised or more oftener blamed than this same great daily of the Rue Drouout. It had its early struggles, its years of poverty, before it became rich and powerful. In 1871, during the Commune, de Villemessent was forced to leave Paris. He took refuge in Switzerland, and one day finding his finances growing short, paid off his valet de chambre with four shares of the stock of the Figaro. The par value of each share was 500 francs, but they were then not worth the one-half of that sum. Well, those four shares are still in the family of the ex-valet de chambre, and they are now worth 4,000 francs apiece, and for a good many years past they have been paying twelve per cent. per annum on that sum. As soon as things got settled down once more after the war with Germany and the Commune, the paper began to pay handsomely.

A BASHFUL BEAU.—"Your hean seems very hashful," said a mamma to her daughter.

"Bashful!" echoed the daughter, "Bashful's no name for it."

"Why don't you encourage him a little more? Some men have to be taught how to do their courting. He's a good catch."

"Encourage him!" said the daughter, "he cannot take the most palpable hint. Why, only last night, when I sat all alone on the sofa, and he perched up in a chair as far away as he could get, I asked him if he didn't think it strange that a man's arm and a woman's waist seemed always to be the same length, and what do you think he did?"

"Why, what any sensible man would have done—tried it."

"He asked me if I could find a piece of string so that we could measure and see if it was so. Isn't he horrid?"

THE POLICEMAN'S PARADISE.—The police system of Mexico is admirable. At every street corner there is a patrolman, night and day—not a patrolman either, for he never moves. He stands like a statue during the day, occasionally leaning against the lamb-post, and answers inquiries with the greatest urbanity. Whenever there is a row, two or three policeman are insantly present, and if their clubs cannot suppress it they use revolvers. At night the policeman brings a lantern and a blanket. He sets the lantern in the middle of the street, and all carriages are compelled to keep to the right of the row of lanterns, which can be seen glimmering from one end of the street to the other. As long as people are passing he stands at the corner, but when things quiet down he retires to a neighboring doorway, wraps his blanket around him and lies down to pleasant dreams. As all the windows of the City of Mexico have heavy prison-like gratings before them, and all the doors are great oaken affairs, that could not be knocked in without a small cannon, as there are never any fires, and everybody goes to bed early, the policeman's lot is usually a happy one. He is numerous because of revolutions, and because the Government always wants to know what is going on.

CHARLES DICKENS CHARGED WITH BEING A COUNTERFEITER.—A story is told that on one of his pedestrian "fits," Charles Dickens was taken for a "smasher." He had retired to rest at Gad's Hill, but he found he could not sleep, so he determined to turn out, dress, and walk up to London, some thirty miles. He reached the suburbs in the gray morning, and applied at an "early" coffee-house for some refreshment, tendering for the same a sovereign, the smallest change he happened to have about him.

"It's a bad 'un," said the man, biting at it, and trying to twist it in all directions, "and I shall give you in charge."

Sure enough, the coin did have a suspicious look. Mr. Dickens had carried some substance in his pocket which had oxydized it. Seeing that matters looked awkward, he at once said:

"But I am Charles Dickens."

"Come, that won't do; any man could say he was Charles Dickens. How do I know?"

The man had been victimized only the week previously, but at length, at Mr. Dicken's suggestion, it was arranged that they should go to a chemist to have the coin tested with aquafortis. In due course, when the shops opened, a chemist was found, who immediately recognized the great novelist—notwithstanding his dusty appearance—and the coffee-house keeper was satisfactorily convinced that he had not been entertaining a "smasher."

A MAN went into the country last Sunday for a walk. He carried his overcoat on his arm, but finding it burdensome hung it on a fence. Taking a card from his pocket he wrote: "Do not touch this coat; infected with small pox." He came back two hours later and found the card, upon which was written underneath his warning: "Thanks for the coat; I've had the smallpox."

IMPORTANT TO SCHOOLS AND SEMINARIES.—The constant use of the HARRIMAN PIANOS in hundreds of schools—public and private—throughout the United States and Canada, where they are subjected to from 8 to 10 hours use daily, has demonstrated the facts of their phenomenal durability, retention of tone and perfection of action. Warerooms, No. 146 Fifth Avenue.

C. C. SHAYNE, Furrier, 103 Prince Street, has the finest Sealskins in New York.

THE OTHER WAY ABOUT.—Beardless youth: "Mein Fraulein, I love you!" Eligible maiden: "Speak to your papa!"—Humoristische Blatter.

"You have a great many new buildings in Brooklyn," said a stranger to a citizen.

"What makes you think so?"

"Why, one-third of the men I meet are painters, judging by the paint on their clothes."

"Thunder, man! That's no paint. It's the chalk that they sop off the floor of the Palace Skating Rink."

Engravings in Foyer, are from the House of FAERBICK KEPPEL & Co., No. 23 East 16th Street, New York.

☞ SOHMER PIANOS USED BY ALL FIRST-CLASS ARTISTS.

All the music performed in this theatre can be had (if published) of WM. A. POND & CO., 25 Union Square, N.Y.

It was the last act of a new comedy, and the house half empty at the start, was nearly deserted, only a few of the free list remaining. The curtain went up, and the leading man began with his line: "Are we alone?" The utility man glanced over the auditorium and answered, in tragic tones: "We are." For the first and last time the audience laughed.

It seems to be the ambition of all young wives to look well when any one calls. A young bride bought a ring at the front door. The maid was out, and she rushed upstairs to "tidy" a little before admitting the caller. There was a moment of lightning work before the dress rig table. Quicker than it takes to tell it, a ribbon was fastened to her throat, a flower stabbed into her hair, a flash of powder on her face, and she was at the door—all smiles and blushes. The gentleman said he had the cheapest clothes-props that could be bought for money.

CHILDREN ARE DELIGHTED with the Seliate Book States because they are light, noiseless, and durable; have a fine smooth even surface, easily erased; bound in fine black cloth; attractive in appearance; will wear for years. All the Children in the Public Schools of New York City and Philadelphia have them. Parents make a mistake in allowing their children to carry a heavy stone slate. See card on 1st page.

Youman's Fall Styles of Gentlemen's Silk and Derby Hats; styles correct, quality unequaled. 1107, 719, 180 Broadway.

Interesting to Ladies.—A Great Discovery—"Tricora." Unequaled as a Stay for Corsets. A material of South American growth, known as "Tricora." The best Corset Stay ever discovered. "Tricora," being very tough and pliable, conforms to every movement of the body, affording such a delightfully comfortable and healthy support, as to leave the wearer almost unconscious of the presence of a corset.

The New Style Sealskin Garments introduced by C. C. Shayne, 103 Prince Street, are very popular.

SOHMER & CO., PIANOS.
From Park Lantern, Illustrated Newspaper.

Sohmer & Co., ranking among the foremost of our first class Piano Manufactories, have lately again been obliged to enlarge their facilities for the manufacture of their Pianos.

Our representative, on his recent visit to their Warerooms, was astonished to see so many customers, contracting for Sohmer Pianos in spite of the general dull times. Mr. Chas Fahr, with Sohmer & Co., is showing him around, states that the demand for their Pianos is quite extraordinary and are especially sought for by the musical profession for their own private use. Their "Bijou" Grand is a pet piano, (recently named for "Gem"), and patented for them by their great attraction, it being the smallest Grand Piano ever manufactured (five feet) and fullness of tone. It rivals the largest sized Grand piano now in use.

We cheerfully add to the fame that, when over a centennial five years' existence and progress is displayed, it certainly bound to be awarded to the firm of Sohmer & Co.

"Yes, Brethren," says the clergyman who is preaching the funeral sermon, "our deceased brother was cut down in a single night—torn from the arms of his loving wife, who is thus left a discousolate widow at the early age of twenty-four years." "Twenty-two, if you please, sah; she's the widow, emerging from her handkerchief for an instant.

An unsympathetic surgeon smiles when he sees an orange peel on the pavement in front of his house.

Attractive.—The following notice appeared in a shop window of a tailor at Cork: "Wanted, two apprentices, who ill be treated as one of the family."

The Young Housewife.—Husband 'Hulda, dear, as I was passing through our garden, I saw some asparagus ready for conking; perhaps you would like to go and gather the first of the season yourself?

Young wife (anxious to conceal her ignorance in the vegetable department): "I tell you what, Adolphus, we will go together; you shall pluck it, and I will hold the ladder!"—

The American debut of the Great Parisian Artiste, JUDIC, will transpire at Wallack's Theatre, on Thursday, October 1st, and gives promise of being a brilliant epoch in the annals of New York amusements. The Subscription Sale is very large. Judic will open in "M'lle Nitouche," which was written expressly for her. Her creation of the role set Paris in a wild delirium of delight. She played in this whirlwind of fun and mute over 300 times. Mr. Grau, under whose management this Queen of Comedy will appear, has engaged one of the best supporting companies to be found in Europe. The principals are all noted artists, and nearly all of them are new to the theatre goers of this country. Judic's repertoire will embrace "Lili," "La Femme a Papa," "Nitouche," "La Cosque," "Le Rousette," "Le Grand Casimir," "Divorcons," "Les Charbonniers," and probably "La Grande Duchesse."

The new, large and excellently arranged factory of Messrs. J. & C. Fisher is now complete in all details and is in every respect a model factory. A visit to this immense institution was well repaid in noting the thorough system prevalent, and the admirable perfection to which all details had been brought. The structure is as near fire-proof as possible, and due regard has been paid to securing the greatest convenience and the best light. The producing capacity is about one hundred and twenty-five pianos per week. The annual production of Messrs. J. & C. Fisher's establishment is greater than that of any other factory in the world, and their instruments sell readily and have an excellent reputation. The best agencies in the country handle these pianos, and find them very satisfactory. They are making some new style cases with carved panels, very ornamental, that take well with the trade.

Gentlemen will find it a great advantage to buy their Fashionable Ties down town. You get a more stylish and finer material in a hat, and at a lower price, at C. Sims', 32 Broadway, than elsewhere in this city. These are facts. You can save one dollar and over on every purchase.

A Reverend sportsman was one day boasting of his infallible skill in finding a hare. "If I were a hare," said a Quaker who was present, "I would take my seat in a place where I should be sure of not being disturbed by thee, from the first of January to the last day of December." "Why? where would you go?" asked the sportsman. "Into thy study!" replied the Quaker. "For it seems to me that thy brain is not overworked, and it seems most fitting that thou shouldst protect instead of destroy.

HOWARD PAUL relates that in a moment of wild forgetfulness, he asked a well-known London actress, who makes up skilfully, her age. Her reply was frank. "I have four ages," she replied, with animation; "the family archives unfortunately proclaim that I am fifty; by daylight I pass for thirty-six; by gaslight not more than thirty; and with all my war paint on in a soft light, and no rude glare, I pass for five-and-twenty."

He had just gone down and purchased two tickets for the opera, and grasping the two halves of his week's salary he hastened to the house and was ushered into her presence. "Ah, Miss De Smith, a very cold day, is it not? Will you not allow me the pleasure of being your escort to the opera to-night?" "Oh thank you so much but Mr. Crankycurler Jones has asked me Mr. Brown, and I am afraid I shall have to refuse you: I am so sorry. Yes, indeed, it is a very, very cold day."

SHAKESPEARE'S WIFE.—Shakespeare's marriage with the placid and commonplace Ann Hathaway, and she was several years older than himself to boot, seems at first sight as unsuitable as that of Burns with his "Bonny Jean." Ann was "sonsy," as they say in Scotland, and good-natured; and the union was far from an unhappy one for the poet, as it was probably a very fortunate match for posterity. Had he been caught by some rustic siren, who could have made cages as well as nets, he might never have come to trouble with his Justice Shallow, and might have realized a decent competency in the Stratford wool trade. As it was, he had broken bounds for a time before his genius rose soaring into the infinite. But few men have apparently been more indifferent to fame, although it is conceivable that the seeming indifference may have been part of secret self-assurance. Certain it is that he scarcely gave a thought to the offspring of his brain when they had rapidly taken shape under his flying fingers; he left the capital, when in the full flush of his fame, to come back contentedly to comparative obscurity in Stratford. And if his wife had something to forgive she forgave it very freely, and we have no doubt made him very comfortable in his maturity. William Howitt has read in the Sonnets a pretty and poetical story of Shakespeare's vie intime and conjugal relations. How far it may be fanciful we cannot say; but we are inclined to think there must have been more in Ann Hathaway than most of her husband's biographers have believed. It is unlikely on the face of it that Shakespeare should have married a woman whose soul did not ring responsively to some of the finer chords of his own. We suspect that in her fresh bloom and simple modesty, as in the sweetness of the homely fragrance she diffused, she resembled one of those old-fashioned garden flowers the dreamer of the "Midsummer Night's Dream" loved so dearly. And if it were so, the happiest evenings of his life may have been those he passed with Ann at Shottery.

A PARIS NEWSPAPER.—The Figaro, a journal established thirty years ago, on a capital of 1,800 francs, now pays yearly dividends amounting to more than 2,500,000. Hippolyte de Villemessant came to Paris from the little village of Block, in 1840, and two years later entered upon journalism as a reporter on the Press, signing his articles as "Louis de Saint Loup," the name of his grandmother. There was then, as now, an advertising agency, Dollingen & Co., and it was the head of this firm who, in 1854, in partnership with de Villemessent, established the journal which has since become a power throughout the world. No newspaper is bolder; no editorial staff comprises more talent; no paper is oftener quoted; none is more frequently praised or more oftener blamed than this same great daily of the Rue Drouout. It had its early struggles, its years of poverty, before it became rich and powerful. In 1871, during the Commune, de Villemessent was forced to leave Paris. He took refuge in Switzerland, and one day finding his finances growing short, paid off his valet de chambre with four shares of the stock of the Figaro. The par value of each share was 500 francs, but they were then not worth the one-half of that sum. Well, those four shares are still in the family of the ex-valet de chambre, and they are now worth 8,000 francs apiece, and for a good many years past they have been paying twelve per cent. per annum on that sum. As soon as things got settled down once more after the war with Germany and the Commune, the paper began to pay handsomely.

A BASHFUL BEAU.—"Your bean seems very bashful," said a mamma to her daughter.

"Bashful!" echoed the daughter, "Bashful's no name for it."

"Why don't you encourage him a little more? Some men have to be taught how to do their courting. He's a good catch."

"Encourage him!" said the daughter, "he cannot take the most palpable hint. Why, only last night, when I sat all alone on the sofa, and he perched up in a chair as far away as he could get, I asked him if he didn't think it strange that a man's arm and a woman's waist seemed always to be the same length, and what do you think he did?"

"Why, what any sensible man would have done—tried it."

"He asked me if I could find a piece of string so that we could measure and see if it was so. Isn't he horrid?"

THE POLICEMAN'S PARADISE.—The police system of Mexico is admirable. At every street corner there is a patrolman, night and day—not a patrolman either, for he never moves. He stands like a statue during the day, occasionally leaning against the lamb-post, and answers inquiries with the greatest urbanity. Whenever there is a row, two or three policeman are instantly present, and if their clubs cannot suppress it they use revolvers. At night the policeman brings a lantern and a blanket. He sets the lantern in the middle of the street, and all carriages are compelled to keep to the right of the row of lanterns, which can be seen glimmering from one end of the street to the other. As long as people are passing he stands at the corner, but when things quiet down he retires to a neighboring doorway, wraps his blanket around him and lies down to pleasant dreams. As all the windows of the City of Mexico have heavy prison-like gratings before them, and all the doors are great oaken affairs, that could not be knocked in without a small cannon, as there are never any fires, and everybody goes to bed early, the policeman's lot is usually a happy one. He is numerous because of revolutions, and because the Government always wants to know what is going on.

ADONIS.

THE ARGUMENT.

Talamea, a sculptress, has fashioned a tinted statue of Adonis for the Duchess of Arca, with the beauty of which she falls deeply in love. Not wishing her noble patroness to possess it, she calls upon the Goddess, Artea, to help her out of the difficulty. After some persuasion Artea agrees to gift the marble with life and let it decide to which it shall own allegiance,—its maker, or its purchaser. The trial takes place, the statue is appealed to by the artist and the Duchess and Adonis decides in favor of the latter, her wealth possessing more for him than the honest love of the poor sculptress. Artea then declares that he shall be punished for his ingratitude, before she finally restores him to Talamea. Under the fostering care of the Duchess' four daughters—professional beauties—Adonis becomes highly accomplished and all the ladies are crazy over him. The Marquis De Baccarat, a polished villain, who aspires to the hand of the Duchess, jealous of Adonis' influence, conceives a violent hatred for him and swears to be revenged. Adonis meets Rosetta, a village beauty, and at once becomes deeply enamored of her, the passion is reciprocated, and gaining the consent of her father, an old miller, to the marriage, Adonis flies with Rosetta from the attention of the noble ladies and the vengeance of the Marquis who, in addition to being a suitor for the Duchess' hand, is villainously inclined toward Rosetta. Determined not to relinquish her without a struggle, the four daughters, disguised as Opera Bouffes, track Adonis to his hiding place and worry him. The Duchess, attired as the Fairy Queen in Iolanthe, also discovers his whereabouts and endeavors to persuade him to her love.

The Marquis fills Rosetta's ears with venomous inuendoes directed against her promised husband and alienates her affections and holds her secretly. Adonis, deserted by his friends, adopts a variety of expedients by means of which he tries to escape from his persecutors, but all in vain; they stick as closely to his heels as misfortune to an unlucky man; and when Artea, taking pity on Talamea's despair and Adonis' woes, lets the latter choose between his peaceful life as a statue and his feverish existence as a mortal, Adonis gladly decides to return to his marble state and seek the seclusion which the pedestal grants.

They will produce the elegant Souvenir of the 300th Performance of "Adonis" at the Bijou Opera House to be given away June 25th.

Look to Your Health.
There is one thing in cities and malarial districts that cannot be poisoned, and that is the matter of obtaining pure water. Disease is due largely to impure water, and it is vitally important that water should be purified before use in cities and unhealthy districts. This can be done by the GATE CITY STONE FILTER.

TRAINOR'S HOTEL.—This admirable as well as comfortable Hotel, situated on Broadway and 33d Street, in the very centre of the uptown part of the city, is a "veritable snuggery" for gentlemen, who will find here all the refined accommodation of a perfect clubhouse and a home combined. The rooms in the Hotel are beautifully furnished, while the RESTAURANT and BAR are simply superb; in fact, with regard to artistic magnificence, TRAINOR'S BAR is acknowledged to be second only to that at the famous Hoffman House.

ADONIS ON CANVASS.—Adorning the lobby of this theatre is a handsome portrait in oil of Mr. Henry E. Dixey as "Adonis," in the "directoire" costume. The picture was presented by a few of his friends to commemorate the 150th performance. It is the work of Mr C. E. Proctor, whose studio is at 42 West 23rd street. Mr. Proctor's specialty is picturesque portrait painting, and he has produced some excellent work.

Why pay nearly double its intrinsic value for a Piano? THE HARDMAN PIANO, notwithstanding its recent novel improvements, is sold at far less than any other first-class instrument. Warerooms, 146 Fifth Ave., Wm. D. Dunton, Manager. Hardman, Dowling & Peck, Manufacturers.

Messrs. McBride & Co., 14 East 14th Street, New York.
We have examined your Gate City Stone Filter, and have made practical experiments with it, applying some very severe tests, and pronounce it the best and most convenient filter we have ever seen for water or other fluids.
CLAYTON & WEBB, Recifiers.

C. C. SHAYNE, 103 Prince Street, the well-known wholesale manufacturer of reliable and elegant Furs, Sealskin Garments, etc., will retail this season at lowest wholesale cash prices. This will afford a splendid opportunity to purchase a Fashionable Fur Wrap direct from a reliable manufacturer, thereby saving the profits made by retailers. Mr. SHAYNE is the recognized leading Furrier of New York, and the reputation of the house the highest to be obtained.—Tribune.

Huber's Prospect Garden, Fourteenth Street, opposite the Academy of Music, is the popular resort of all theatre parties, both matinee and night. The reputation attained by Mr. Huber as host is second to none in this city, and any of our readers who doubt this, will do well to visit him and test the fact. Best of food, polite attendance, and popular prices, is his motto.

Swift's Specific for Cancer.

NOSE EATEN OFF.—John Naves, a young man near here, had a cancer on his face which had eaten away his nose and part of his cheek, and was extending np to his eyes. As a last resort he was put on Swift's Specific, and it has entirely cured him. His face is healed over with new flesh and his general health is excellent. His recovery was wonderful. M. F. CRUMLEY, M.D. Oglethorpe, Ga., August 16, '84.

The Bayberry Glycerine Soap is fast gaining popularity for its unexceptionable qualities.

Mr. Charles Fahr, of Sohmer & Co., feels particularly gratified at the great advances that the firm are making in the sale of their instruments. He has worked faithfully for their interests for many years, and a great deal of their success is due to his untiring efforts in their behalf. Mr. Fahr is well liked by all who have dealings with the firm, and in placing Messrs. Sohmer's advertising before the public he has shown wonderful discernment, judgment and taste.

Note.—If you want Shirts, Collars, Cuffs, Neckwear, Gloves, Jewelry, Suspenders, Underwear, Hosiery, Umbrellas, Canes, Hats, Traveling Bags, or Steamer Rugs, you can find them in great variety at Keef's. (See other page). Keef Manufacturing Co., Broadway and Bleecker St.

Notice.—The season has come for families and friends to form Theatre Parties, and in conjunction therewith, an Oyster Supper will be in order to finish the evening's amusement. We know of no better place for this purpose than Clark Brothers and Co., Ladies' and Gent's Oyster Parlor's, 502 and 504 6th Avenue, cor. 30th Street. Branch of 120 Fulton Street, 332 Canal Street, and 39 and 41 Lispenard Street. The largest consumers of Oysters in the world.

LOST TO SHAME

is that woman who takes no pride in her reputation—who does not care to earn a good name for thrift and cleanliness. If love for others did not prompt a wife and mother to keep a tidy house and a bright clean kitchen, a regard for her social standing in society ought to teach her to use

SAPOLIO

In all her house cleaning work. Shame will give way to justifiable pride, and her whole house will respect her if she uses Sapolio wisely.

COUNTING THE DAYS.—"I am lonely, my darling, without you," wrote Smith to his absent wife. "Oh, so lonely, and I count the days until you return."

Several hours later Smith met Jones, another grass Widower.

"Well, old boy," observed Jones, "let's go down to the Island to-night and have a quiet little time."

"All right," replied Smith, I've only got five more days before the old hen gets back."

TRAINOR'S HOTEL.—This admirable as well as comfortable Hotel, situated on Broadway and 33d Street, in the very centre of the up-town part of the city, is a "veritable snuggery" for gentlemen, who will find here all the refined accommodation of a perfect club-house and a home combined. The rooms in the Hotel are beautifully furnished, while the RESTAURANT and BAR are simply superb; in fact, with regard to artistic magnificence, TRAINOR'S BAR is acknowledged to be second only to that at the famous Hoffman House.

One can hardly go into a first-class shoe store without seeing Button's Raven Gloss Shoe Dressing on the shelf. It is more economical than other dressings. Makes shoes wear longer.

THE OCEAN GREYHOUNDS.—The fastest steamships afloat, the Oregon (Cunard Line) and Alaska. (Guion Line) have each on board a HARDMAN UPRIGHT because, as the Guion Line writes, "the changing temperature seems to have no effect upon it." Absolute durability, modest prices. Warerooms, 146 Fifth Ave. Wm. D. Dutton, Manager. Hardman Dowling & Peck, Manufacturers.

"Not all on hooks, their criticism waste,
The genius of a dish some justly taste;
And eat their way to fame."

Joseph W. Boyle's New Oyster and Chop House, located at 1257 Broadway, bet. 32d and 33d Streets, is the most beautifully furnished Restaurant in the World, and is especially adapted for Opera and Theatre Parties.

C. C. SHAYNE, 103 Prince Street, the well-known wholesale manufacturers of reliable and elegant Furs, Sealskin Garments, etc., will retail this season at lowest wholesale cash prices. This will afford a splendid opportunity to purchase a Fashionable Fur Wrap direct from a reliable manufacturer, thereby saving the profits made by retailers. Mr. SHAYNE is the recognized leading Furrier of New York, and the reputation of the house the highest to be obtained.—Tribune.

KRAKAUER BROS. have been awarded the Medal of Excellence at the American Institute, 1884, for the superiority of their Pianos. Warerooms, 40 Union Square, N. Y.

DURING this month, city people having returned from the country, will be forming their theatre parties, and in conjunction therewith, a good supper will be in order to finish the evening's amusement. We know of no better place for this purpose than the PROSPECT OYSTER HOUSE AND RESTAURANT, 106 and 108 East 14th Street, near Fourth Avenue, New York.

ONE HUNDRED AND THIRTEEN MILES OF ORGANS.—In numbering the organs of their manufacture, Mason & Hamlin have reached No. 150,000. Arranged in a line these would reach one hundred and thirteen miles, or would fence the railroad on one side from the Grand Central Station in New York, to within twenty miles of Springfield, Mass. Not only does this show the great popularity of American organs, but it illustrates what was declared by James Parton to be a general fact that he who makes the best article in his line always has the greatest success. We understand that the Mason & Hamlin Company's new Upright Piano is now commanding a large sale, and is, in every way up to the standard of their unrivalled organs. We predict a large success for this piano, which is constructed on a new system, said to be a decided advance over the prevailing wrest-pin system.—Boston Journal.

ADONIS.

THE ARGUMENT.

Talamea, a sculptress, has fashioned a tinted statue of Adonis for the Duchess of Area, with the beauty of which she falls deeply in love. Not wishing her noble patroness to possess it, she calls upon the Goddess, Artea, to help her out of the difficulty. After some persuasion Artea agrees to gift the marble with life and let it decide to which it shall own allegiance,—its maker, or its purchaser. The trial takes place, the statue is appealed to by the artist and the Duchess and Adonis decides in favor of the latter, her wealth possessing more for him than the honest love of the poor sculptress. Artea then declares that he shall be punished for his ingratitude, before she finally restores him to Talamea. Under the fostering care of the Duchess' four daughters—professional beauties—Adonis becomes highly accomplished and all the ladies are crazy over him. The Marquis De Baccarat, a polished villain, also aspires to the hand of the Duchess, jealous of Adonis' influence, conceives a violent hatred for him and swears to be revenged. Adonis meets Rosetta, a village beauty, and at once becomes deeply enamored of her, the passion is reciprocated, and gaining the consent of her father, an old miller, to the marriage, Adonis flies with Rosetta from the attention of the noble ladies and the vengence of the Marquis who, in addition to being a suitor for the Duchess' hand, is villainously inclined toward Rosetta. Determined not to relinquish him without a struggle, the four daughters, disguised as Opera Bouffes, track Adonis to his hiding place and worry him. The Duchess, attired as the Fairy Queen in Iolanthe, also discovers his whereabouts and endeavors to persuade him to her love.

The Marquis fills Rosetta's ears with venomous inuendoes directed against her promised husband and alienates her affections and holds her secretly. Adonis, deserted by his friends, adopts a variety of expedients by means of which he tries to escape from his persecutors, but all in vain; they stick as closely to his heels as misfortune to an unlucky man; and when Artea, taking pity on Talamea's despair and Adonis' woes, lets the latter choose between his peaceful life as a statue and his feverish existence as a mortal. Adonis gladly decides to return to his marble state and seek the seclusion which the pedestal grants.

The Bayberry Glycerine Soap is fast gaining popularity for its unexceptionable qualities.

The fashionable prejudice of paying for a first-class Piano double its intrinsic value bas been destroyed by the Hardman Pianos, which are faultless and can be bougbt at a reasonable and modest price. The New Hardman Upright is the acme of modern piano manufacturing. New Warerooms, 146 Fifth Avenue, above 19th Street.

Fully nine-tenths of all the leading Shoe stores throughout the United States and Canada, sell and recommend "Button's Raven Gloss Shoe Dressing." Softens and preserves leather.

C. C. SHAYNE, 103 Prince Street, the well-known wholesale manufacturer of reliable and elegant Furs, Sealskin Garments, etc., will retail this season at lowest wholesale cash prices. This will afford a splendid opportunity to purchase a Fashionable Fur Wrap direct from a reliable manufacturer, thereby saving the profits made by retailers. Mr. SHAYNE is the recognized leading Furrier of New York, and the reputation of the house the highest to be obtained.—Tribune.

DURING this month, city people having returned from the country, will be forming their theatre parties, and in conjunction therewith, a good supper will be in order to finish the evening's amusement. We know of no better place for this purpose than the PROSPECT OYSTER HOUSE AND RESTAURANT, 106 and 108 East 14th Street, near Fourth Avenue, New York.

OF those who hold it their supreme pleasure to be well posted concerning all that is new and fashionable, it may be said that their present delight is dining at the Hoffman House. The most lavish display of furnishings and decorations, elegant service, and the best cooking probably in the world, may be enjoyed accompanied by the sweet strains of an orchestra between the hours of 6 and 8 P. M. With such surroundings "good digestion waits upon appetite and good health on both."

Chaps are not unfrequently the origin of kisses. The kisses of rude Boreas produce chaps. The use of L'ANTI Toilet Soap prevents the latter; but renders the cheek of beauty more liable, thro' its increased attractiveness to the former.

NOTICE.—The season has come for families and friends to form Theatre Parties, and in conjunction therewith, an Oyster Supperwill be in order to finish the evening's amusement. We know of no better place for this purpose than Clark Brothers and Co., Ladies' and Gent's Oyster Parlor's, 502 and 504 6th Avenue, cor. 30th Street. CROSS-CUT CIGARETTES.
THE BEST IN THE WORLD.

Why? Because our Factory is located immediately at the doors of the farmers in the golden belt of North Carolina, (acknowledged to be the finest Tobacco growing section in the world), which enables us always to get the pick of the Crop direct from the planters, at the very lowest price, and we are thus enabled to save the profits of the Leaf dealers and speculators to which our Northern competitors have to submit. Therefore, with our thorough knowledge of the art of manufacturing Cigarettes, and superior facilities for getting the pick of the very best raw material, we are enabled to offer you better goods for the same or less money than any factory in the world. We ask that you compare both the style and quality of Cross-Cut Cigarettes, with any brand on the market, and we are confident you will decide, as many thousand Cigarette smokers have done, that they are the very best.

THE SUCCESS OF "THE ROMANY RYE."

This most positive success of the season, is "The Romany Rye," and it is with much pleasure that the management announce its repetition for some time to come.

It is now in its second month at Booth's, its sixth month at the Princess' Theatre, London, and in both Capitals of the world, the theatres are nightly packed with enthusiastic audiences, to witness this admirable acting and unrivaled scenery exhibited there.

MME. MODJESKA'S RETURN.

Mme. Helena Modjeska, who has lately been acting upon the London stage, returned to New York, September 18th, by the steamer Arizona, after an absence of nearly two years and a half. A party of friends who went down the bay to meet the well-known actress boarded the Arizona at quarantine, and Mme. Modjeska and her party were transferred to a tug in waiting, and were soon at the Clarendon Hotel, where she was called upon later by a representative of the Herald. Mme. Modjeska was in the drawing-room, the smiling and laughing centre of a merry group, who were chatting with her about her absence and return when the Herald representative was presented to her.

"Thanks; I am very glad myself to be back in New York, and it seems an age since I left the city, she said. I am holding a reception already, you see, although I am hardly in reception toilet. About my stay in England? Let me see—what can I tell you? I went away in May, 78—it seems a long while ago—and I went to London as you know. First I was at the Court Theatre with Mr. Barrett, who was very kind and obliging and did everything he could for me. You know I was not known in London—that is, they knew my standing as a Polish actress, but they had not seen me and did not know that I spoke English well enough to play in their language. They were inclined to think me rather presumptuous, don't you know, and were inclined to be amused at my temerity in giving morning performances at the Court. How did I come to play Odette at the Haymarket? Well, it was by way of Edinburgh. After my London engagement I returned to Poland, where I met with a more than kind welcome home, and when I had made arrangements to return to America Mr. Bancroft asked me to play in 'Odette' in London. He urged me so, and offered to cast it so strongly with himself and his charming wife and Mr. Hare in the play that I gladly accepted.

"I thought you would ask me that; the additions to my repertoire during my American tour will be Rosalind in 'As You Like It,' Nina in 'The Hunchback,' and Beatrice in 'The Lady of Lyons.' Then I have a new play by a Norwegian novelist, which I think will be as great a success as was 'From Frou.' And now I have told you, I believe, all that I can think of about my English trip.

SALVINI.

The farewell tour of Salvini in the United States will begin at the Fifth Avenue Theatre, on Thursday, October 30th. It is now two years since the great Italian actor has been seen in this country, and it is certainly matter for congratulation that there will be another opportunity of witnessing his magnificent performances of "Othello," "Macbeth," "The Gladiator," and other plays. The coming season he promises to add "King Lear" to his repertoire. This role he has been studying for the past nine years, but has never as yet appeared in it.

The company engaged to support Salvini includes Miss Marie Prescott and Mr. Louis Morrison.

FIFTH AVENUE THEATRE.

The French Opera Co. appear at the Fifth Avenue Theatre every night this week, except Thursday and Saturday, on which evenings Salvini will appear as "Othello." Theo and Capoul will sing in a round of their favorite roles, and on Friday night, Theo will receive a benefit, when La Jolie Parfumeuse will be given.

CHARLES WYNDHAM.

This artist, with a company selected from the Criterion Theatre, London, will make a brief tour of this country, under the direction of Messrs. Brooks and Dickson, commencing Tuesday, Oct. 31st, at the Union Square Theatre.

Mr. Wyndham's first appearance will be made in R. J. Byron's new comedy, adapted from the French, and called "Fourteen Days."

The principal character, Peregrine Forster, is in Wyndham's special vein, and shows his appreciation of merry works. The following is a condensed story of the play:

Mr. Peregrine Porter, a retired gentleman, has, in a moment of irritation, assaulted a police officer, and been condemned to fourteen days' incarceration in consequence. Peregrine it becomes necessary for him to deceive his wife during his enforced absence, and he resolves, assisted by a number of conspiring friends, to make an imaginary journey to Italy with the pretended view of breaking off the marriage of his ward, Miss Sampson, who is engaged to a photographer named Spoonbill. Mr. Gibbon, Spoonbill's rival, engineers this scheme, and, as he knows where Mr. Porter is compelled to remain, as the prize for his services gains that lady's promise his own courtship. The second act takes place in the private room of the Governor of the Prison. This functionary is in private life a devotee of arts—a musician and a painter—and he is also a great admirer of female beauty. He, in some way, gets hold of a photograph of Mrs. Porter, and, falling in love with the pretty face, transfers it to canvas. Learning from Gibbon who Porter is (who is now known as prisoner No. 20), he entertains him in his apartments. The Governor is intrusted by Porter with a letter to his wife, and in his absence Gibbon, who has called to see Porter, dons the prison dress, and the two amuse themselves by smoking and drinking. The high jinks in the prison are finally stopped by the dismissal of the old and the appointment of a new Governor, who packs Porter and Gibbon off to cells in spite of the latter's protestations that he is only a visitor. In the last act, after many amusing complications, matters are explained, and the piece comes to a happy conclusion.

The undersigned, who has been practically connected with some of the leading Furriers in the City of New York for a number of years, takes the occasion to announce to Ladies who desire to have alterations or renovations made in their Fur Garments that he will execute all orders promptly and at reasonable prices. A call is solicited. M. Hillas, 2 Clinton Place, near Broadway.

FASHIONS FOR YOUNG MEN.

Ulsters will not be much worn.

Tight-fitting trousers are the rage.

Very little jewelry is the correct thing.

Pointed shoes are going out of fashion.

Neckwear in very "loud" patterns will be much worn.

The "Chadenet," "Crasis" and the "Crasis" scarfs will be the favorites for the fall and winter.

Silk hats, with bell crowns and very wide rolling brims, are the correct thing.

In overcoating, the Elysians, fur beaver, Shetlands, Montaignacs and similar fabrics will be most in use.

The present style of cutaway is becoming the favorite garment for short men as well as slim ones, and will continue to be the favorite for the fall. It is a very fashionable outfit.

The plain white shirt and white collar will be the rage, and fancy shirts will not be worn.

The single-breasted fly-front sack and the double-breasted sack and the surtout high roll will be the prevailing overgarments, the fly-front overcoat being generally patronized.

Ladies' Cloth and Woolen Walking Suits, Jackets, Carriage Costumes and Riding Habits made in the most artistic manner and in the best workmanship, at reasonable prices and at short notice.

Your patronage is solicited with the full sense of my ability to satisfy the most fastidious. Fred. Knoebel, Merchant Tailor. 12 University Place, near Clinton Place.

A. F. Mueller, Tailor, 31 Union Square, corner of 16th Street, begs to tender his compliments and inform his Lady patrons that during his sojourn in Europe the past summer, he secured samples of Cloth Costume and Riding Habits of the latest styles, shown by the leading London and Paris Establishments, and respectfully solicits an inspection.

POPULAR ADVERTISING

The following are some of the merits of this programme as an advertising medium:

An advertisement is not lost to sight as in large newspapers; it is sure to be seen.

It catches the eye of the public at a time when they have leisure to read it, viz., between the acts.

Most theatre-goers carry the programmes home with them in order to more readily recall the names of actors who assumed certain parts in explaining scenes from the play to members of their family who did not witness the play.

It is a well-known fact that the theatre-going public are the most liberal in expenditures, and, as a rule have the money to buy what they want.

Again, an advertisement in this programme will catch the eye of almost every stranger visiting the city, as every one knows that about the first resolve of a visitor, after registering at a hotel, is to go to the theatre.

Finally, I invite you to read my advertising rates (at the head of the column on the second page), which are trifling compared with the benefits you are likely to receive, and either send me an advertisement, or a postal inviting me to come and treat with you in regard to one.

THE OLD AND THE NEW.

THE growing prosperity of the country cannot be more fully appreciated than in noticing the better taste displayed and more sensible expenditure of money in adorning the homes and firesides of our people.

The old mantle mantel is almost a thing of the past, and its black and cheerless grate seems to shame us for ever having so rude an apology for comfort in our homes. The open fire with its pleasant flame and bright adornments is fast driving out the old style of grate, and it needs but a visit to the old house of J. S. Conover & Co., now in their new establishment at 30 W. 23d St., to completely eradicate the ancient idea in favor of the new.

But a step from Broadway, a call will well repay you, and the fine display of all kinds of brass goods for the fire-place, tiling for hearths, etc., together with their beautiful show-rooms, you can almost imagine yourself in Aladdin's palace. Visitors are welcome and will be cordially received.

FASHIONABLE fur garments this season are Otter and seal-skin Dolmans, Paletots and Cloaks as to fit, unbending, and deep, close lining, 30 to 42 inches long, all beautifully trimmed. Also a massive, wholesale manufacturer, 105 Prince St. (formerly of Broadway), the recognized leading furrier, will offer goods at retail this season. This affords a splendid opportunity for ladies to order goods direct from the manufacturer and save the profit of middle-men. All goods produced by this house are standard styles, and every garment is made from selected skins properly cured and dressed and thoroughly reliable.—Harper's Weekly.

TO SAUSAGE MANUFACTURERS.

A Learned Pig to be disposed of. This unique and accomplished creature, that has been for many years perseveringly trained by an eccentric Jerseyman, as a personal relaxation from the duties and cares of life, having unfortunately been severely shaken in a Railway Collision, that has somewhat impaired its intellectual powers, will be parted with by the present proprietor on very liberal terms. Can still go through the Alphabet if the consonants are omitted, and tell fortunes fairly on a pack of cards, when assisted by onions. Has been taught to leave the room on being called "Moses," but since the accident has, when reminded with a pair of pincers, answered more easily to the name of "Cayuse." Having in its best days appeared in a Music Steeple Chase at a Circus, it could, with a monkey on its back, admirably supply the place of a Carrigee Dog to any turn on the career of which happened to be anxious to create an entirely new and startling sensation in the park. Would not object to act as permanent advertisement in office window of a S. P. C. A. Society, and be eaten by the Committee at Christmas. Apply to the Editor of [illegible]

Lord Burleigh—"Then grant authority at large to pursue and to chase, even to the death, all rebels." See Lord Burleigh's reply appended to this article, one number cannot be saved when the number exceeds two. Burleigh should have written one unruly and not all rebels, unless he meant to advise that the Commons had only two great authors, which is not probable.—Verbatim, passim.

"No," said the bank cashier, "I didn't need the money. I wasn't speculating. I had no necessity for stealing it. But, hang it, I didn't want to be called eccentric."

GENTLEMAN.—Few things are in worse taste than to use the term gentleman, whether in the singular or plural, to designate the sex. "If I was a gentleman," says Miss Snooks. "Gentlemen have just as much curiosity as ladies," says Mrs. Jenkins. "Gentlemen have so much more liberty than we ladies have," says Mrs. Parvenue. Now, if these ladies were ladies, they would in each of these cases use the word man instead of gentleman, and woman instead of lady; further, Miss Snooks would say, "If I were a Well-bred men, men of culture and refinement—gentlemen, in short—use the terms lady and gentleman comparatively little, and they are especially careful not to call themselves gentlemen when they can avoid it. A gentleman, for example, does not say, "I, with some other gentlemen went," etc.; he is careful to leave out the word other. The men who use these terms most, and especially those who lose no opportunity to proclaim themselves gentlemen, belong to that class of men who rock their hats on one side of their heads, and often wear them when and where gentlemen would remove them; who pride themselves on their familiarity with the latest slang; who proclaim their independence by showing the least possible consideration for others; who laugh long and loud at their own wit; who wear a profusion of cheap finery, such as outlandish watch-chains hooked in the lowest button-hole of their vests, Brazilian diamonds in their shirt-bosoms, and big seal-rings on their little fingers; who use bar-l...mour and interlard their conversation with big oaths. In business correspondence Smith is addressed as Sir, while Smith & Brown are often addressed as Gentlemen—or, vulgarly, as Gents. Better, much, is it to address them as Sirs.—Ayres' "Verbalist," page 67.

LADY.—T...

EACH OTHER...

...use the term lady, whether in the singular or in the plural, simply to designate the sex, is in the worst possible taste. There is a kind of pin-feather gentility which seems to have a settled aversion to using the terms man and woman. Gentlemen and ladies establish their claims to being called such by their bearing, and not by arrogating to themselves, even indirectly, the titles. In England, the title lady is properly correlative to lord; but there, as in this country, it is used as a term of complaisance, and is appropriately applied to women whose lives are exemplary, and who have received that school and home education which enables them to appear to advantage in the better circles of society. Such expressions as "She is a fine lady, a clever lady, a well-dressed lady, a good lady, a neat lady, a charitable lady, an amiable lady, a handsome lady, a fascinating lady," and the like, are studiously avoided by persons of refinement. Ladies say, "we women, the women of America, women's apparel," and so on; vulgar women talk about "us ladies, the ladies of America, ladies' apparel," and so on. A woman of culture and refinement—in short, a lady—is compelled from any cause soever to work in a store, she is quite content to be called a sales-woman; if so, however, with your young wo... who, being in a store, is in a better po... it than ever before. Mdlle RHEA.

The above-named artiste arrived from Europe by the City of Rome, and will appear at Booth's Theatre, Monday, Nov. 29th. Speaking of her abilities, the London Times says:

"Mdlle. Rhea's success is so complete as to be beyond all cavil or dispute. It is given but to few, even amongst the most talented, to leap into popularity at a single bound, and while Mdlle. Rhea may be fairly congratulated on the appreciation she has met with, the stage is yet more to be congratulated on such an undoubted acquisition to its strength.

"Gifted with an exuberant vivacity, and a most charming manner, she attracts as soon as seen. Her fine commanding figure is graceful as that of a Grecian statue, while her well-shaped head, and more than ordinarily handsome face, eloquent with an expression of singular intelligence, show her physically gifted to excel in the profession she has chosen. Her voice is powerful and, at the same time, delightfully melodious, and the easy grace of her poses adds to the fascination of her features and makes her incontestably one of the most charming actresses now adorning the boards.

"Still it must not be supposed that Mdlle. Rhea's claim to distinction rests upon her natural advantages alone, or that her charms of face and figure are supposed to compensate for mediocre talent; on the contrary, in France, Russia, and England she has justly been decorated with the laurels of her profession, and has shown that she is endowed with the genuine dramatic fire, and while evidently imbued with the traditions of her art is eminently natural and unstagey. The drama has been a passion with her from her childhood. From her youth the instinct of the true artist has been strong within her; she is one of those few gifted actresses who, like true poets, are born, not made."

Unlike most foreign artists who visit this country, Mdlle. Rhea has the advantage of being able to appear in the English language, having studied incessantly for the past few years with a view to that end.

Mr. Maurice Grau's great French Opera Company, after a most triumphant tour of the South American cities, will make their re-entree before a New York audience, at the Park Theatre, on Monday evening, November 29th, for a short season. Mr. Grau's Company is the very best that has ever interpreted the French Operas, and with a repertoire that will include many novelties: among others Paul et Virginie, Carmen, Conte D'Hoffman, Piccolino, Petits Rien, Mascotte, Olivette, Belle Loretto, Fatinitza.

The Management takes pleasure in announcing the coming engagement of the ever popular comedians,

Mr. and Mrs. W. J. FLORENCE,

Who will appear at this theatre for a limited season of two weeks, commencing

MONDAY, DECEMBER 5th, in their wonderfully successful comedy drama entitled

Madame Modjeska.
Madame Modjeska is going to act in America next year, as the action brought by her former agent has been abandoned. After her successful reception in England, this graceful actress will, no doubt, be more warmly welcomed than ever on her return to America. Madame Modjeska is at present fulfilling her engagements in the provinces, where she seems to be a great favorite.—London World.

The Liverpool Albion, speaking of Madame Modjeska's performance of Adrienne Lecouvreur, says: "A more intensely realistic and magnificent piece of acting we venture to say was never seen on the stage of this or any other country."

A Birmingham, Eng., critic, speaking of her performance of Camille, says: "Madame Modjeska will well sustain a comparison with the great Sarah Bernhardt in this, one of the greatest successes of the latter. Madame Modjeska has the advantage of personal beauty and charming figure and of great grace of movement and action generally, but in addition to and above all these she possesses great intellectual gifts, which, combined with them, make her an actress of the greatest order."

Some recent compiled statistics show that the total number of letters sent by mail in all parts of the world in 1865 was 2,300,000,000. In 1877 the number was increased to 4,200,000,000, an average of 11,000,000 a day, or 127 each second. Of these Europe contributed 3,036,000,000. America 760,000,000, Asia 150,000,000. Africa 23,000,000, and Australia 50,000,000. If the present estimate of the world's population (1,400,000,000,) is correct, the number of letters sent in 1877 by mail to each person in the world, was three.

The envelope manufacturers of the country turn out about 4,000,000 envelopes a day.

Shayne's Sealskin Sacques and Dolmans, fur-lined Circulars and Wraps are the recognized leading styles this season. They are made from selected skins thoroughly deodorized and properly cured and are sold before being used, so that every article can be relied upon as being strictly first-class in every particular. MY HELLA JANE.

Vere the 'owling Mississippi rolls
Along New Jer-cy's shore,
And palm-trees and banana vines
Grows vild in Baltimore;
Vere fair Rhode Hisland's horange-groves
Perfume the western plain,
I met and loved a pretty gal,
Whose name vas Hella Jane!

CHORUS.

Pretty Hella Jane!
Witty Hella Jane!
It fills my hacking 'cart with pain
To think of Hella Jane!

'Er father vos a nobleman
Of hancient fami-lee;
Lord Mayor 'e'd been a dozen time
Of proud Milwau-kee.
'Er huncle vos a 'aughty look,
Vot 'ad been President;
'Twas in 'is gorgeous pal-ace
Ve met by haccident!

CHORUS.

Pretty Hella Jane!
Witty Hella Jane!
'Twas there we met by haccident,
Both me and Hella Jane!

I 'ad been born in servi-tude
Hon Vermont's tropic shore,
Vere Haleghany's Mountain 'eights
Hobservers fills with hawe!
Lake Herie's salt sea-waves I swam,
My liberty to gain;
And then it vos I come across
My pretty Hella Jane.

CHORUS.

My pretty Hella Jane!
My witty Hella Jane!
'Twas then I first did come across
My beautchus Hella Jane!

I harsked 'er father for 'er 'and (A puss-proud cove vos 'e),
'E cursed me for a negrow coon
Escaped from slayveree!
'E called 'is fierce retainers raound
'Oo beat me long and vell,
Hand then they put me hunder ground
Hin a dismal dungun cell.

CHORUS.

My pretty Hella Jane!
My witty Hella Jane!
They put me in a dungun cell
On account of Hella Jane!

She was marri-ed in New Ham-sheer
To a Mormon Sena-tor,
'Oo already 'ad ten vives aud so
'E didn't mind vun more.
But she, poor gal, soon pined and died,
(Hour true love vos in vain,)
And then I got my liber-tee—
But not my Hella Jane.

CHORUS.

My soulful Hella Jane!
My dolcful Hella Jane!
They did us part, and broke 'er 'eart,
My long lost Hella Jane!

—Dramatic Times.

Two Philadelphia twin sisters looked so much alike that when one was vaccinated it took on the other one.

A long felt desideratum has at last been accomplished in the introduction of an opera-glass of high power and large field within smallest possible compass, thus avoiding the encumbrance of bulk heretofore experienced. Combining this with uniqueness of design and ingenuity of mechanism, it is offered at a wonderfully moderate price. See Prentice's advertisement, 1st page.

MADAME MODJESKA.

The provincial tour of the great Polish actress has been highly successful. In Dublin enormous enthusiasm, and crowds turned away nightly. The Liverpool Daily Post thus speaks of her performance:

"A year's absence has not obliterated the deep traces which the first visit of Madame Modjeska left upon the memories of Liverpool play-goers, and a large audience again welcomed her on her return to the Alexandra Theatre last evening. Of her most touching assumption of the character of Adrienne Lecouvreur nothing can be said. The dramatic gems with which her impersonation sparkles remain the same, and the artistic skill with which she develops the tragic story of the hapless actress is as powerful in its hold upon the interest of her hearers.

"Madame Modjeska possesses what is in this part an advantage which she shares with her great French rival, an appearance of physical frailty that emphasizes the effect both of her passion and her pathos, and is not an unimportant factor in the artistic web which she weaves around the feelings of her audience. The statuesque calm which conceals the bitter hatred in Adrienne's heart as she flings at her rival the burning lines of Phedre is doubly effective in one so slight and spirituelle, and in the death scene, where Madame Modjeska outdistances all competitors, the quality is of still more value. It is not necessary to repeat the eulogies already passed upon so wonderful a piece of realistic grace and power. The lines in which the dying woman prays for a day of life to enjoy her new-born happiness were given with thrilling intensity, and the quiet death as the curtain descended—as truthful as dreadful—still maintained the classic grace which pervaded the whole of the splendid impersonation."

A traveler out West saw an Indian maiden who talked English beautifully and "chewed gum just like any white girl." She had been educated.

"No," said the prominent member of a Vermont parish, "Jackson will never do for deacon. He hain't got the qualification I. Why, darn it, I've cheated him on a horse trade, myself."

A. T. Stewart used to say that it is easy to make money after the first million. Remember that, all ye who would be rich, and profit by it. Henceforth let us hear no man complain of being poor.

Young Vicar (facetiously): "Well, John, how smart you are this morning; who gave you the new clothes I?" John (laughing): "Eez, sir, the same as gave you yourn—the parish, sir."

An old bachelor, who particularly hated literary women, asked the authoress if she could throw any light on kissing. "I could," said she, looking archly at him, "but I think it's better in the dark."

In England it has been proven by a series of careful examinations that country hoys of fourteen years average an inch and a quarter more in height, and seven pounds more in weight than city boys of the same age.

Why is the letter S like a sewing machine? It makes needles needless.

A picture by Sir Edwin Landseer recently sold in London for $14,750.

India has five paper mills that are built and managed on English models.

A shower of spider webs lasting two hours astonished the natives of Green Bay, Wis.

Philadelphia has the politest man. He apologized to a locomotive for stepping on its train.

An index and classified abridgment of all the United States Patents is to be issued at a cost of $10,000.

"How," asks an anxious mother, "shall we bring up our girls?" Well, if they are playing in the cellar, shout "rats!" That will bring them up.

A French chemist can take sugar, flour, and other substances and make a nicer egg than a hen ever laid, and the hens must feel fearfully ashamed of themselves.

Entirely unintentional: Fair umpire at lawn tennis—"Only keep your head, Mr. Jones, and you are sure to have a soft thing."

The first daily paper published in London was The Daily Courant, which appeared in 1709, during the reign of Queen Anne.

Prepaid reply postal cards have been introduced in France. The price is four cents for any part of France, and six cents for foreign countries.

The Roman soldiers carried in their military baggage chains for prisoners of war—iron for common and of gold and silver for rich prisoners and princes.

A French family named Millard, at Avon, Fulton county, Ill., own a genuine painting by Raphael, about eight inches square and nearly 400 years old.

Host: "Why, you are surely not going to bed yet, captain? We are going to have prayers presently." Captain: "Aw, yes, thanks, I never take anything after dinner."

A preacher in Louisville has been ruined by poker. Poor man! he probably spent too much time preaching. A man must devote himself to the game alone to play it well.

"There are two occasions when I indulge in lager beer—when I have salt fish for dinner, and when I don't," said a moderate temperance man to a prohibitionist.

The Marquise de Rochambeau is much struck with the beauty of American women and with the taste displayed in this country in the arrangement of flowers.

The largest photographic pictures in the world are said to have been taken by Herr Holtermann, of Sydney, Australia. They are nearly 100 feet in length and are mounted on an endless band of paper, strengthened by linen. Among them are two immense panoramas of the cities of Sydney and Melbourne.

THE THEATRES.

"Esmeralda" at the Madison Square Theatre will hold public attention all winter.

"Deacon Crankett" remains the attraction at Haverly's Fourteenth Street Theatre.

The Hanlon-Lees are drawing great audiences to the Park Theatre.

Mr. John McCullough has begun a six weeks' engagement at Haverly's Fifth Avenue Theatre, opening in Sheridan Knowles' tragedy "Virginius." The costumes, armor, &c., made for his use at the Theatre Royal, London, will be used during his present engagement.

"Standing room only" at the San Francisco Minstrels.

"The Passing Regiment" at Daly's Theatre has made a hit.

At the Bijou Opera House "The Snake Charmer" has proved successful. Scenes are in great demand, and the house has been crowded nightly since the production of the opera. It bids fair to rival "The Mascotte" and "Olivette" in popularity, and may be the reigning attraction at this house all winter. The management has done all that could be done to insure its success.

The regular season opened at the Union Square Theatre on Monday night. "Daniel Rochat" was reproduced by the stock company, and everything done to make it as attractive as it was when first it was given at this theatre last fall. The management has in preparation now the latest English sensation, entitled "The Lights O' London," the work of Mr. Sims. It has had a long run in the British capital, and Mr. A. M. Palmer believes that it will become very popular in this city.

Mr. Joseph Jefferson has begun an engagement at the Grand Opera House. Mr. Jefferson's return to New York is a delightful dramatic event, though he has decided to open in the well worn play of "Rip Van Winkle."

AIMEE'S FAREWELL.

A few more performances, and the American public will have seen and heard the last, on this side of the Atlantic, of their favorite Opera Bouffe Queen. It is to be regretted that Mlle. Aimee has not determined to take up a permanent residence in the United States. Opera Bouffe needs an exponent of the vivacious French operettas, and no one that has ever appeared in these plays in this country has been so universally admired, and enthusiastically applauded, as the little lady who now bids us a long farewell.

Mlle. Aimee arrived in this country in December, 1871, and, with the exception of the season of '75–76, has remained continually with us; she has sung in all the principal cities and towns in this country, and has everywhere given more than complete satisfaction,—she has produced unbounded enthusiasm; and it is an undeniable fact that she has everywhere drawn crowded houses when other dramatic ventures have signally failed.

Mme. Aimee has created many of the leading roles in French Opera Bouffe. "La Marjolaine," "La Jolie Parfumeuse," "La Reine Indigo," "La Timbale d'Argent," and lastly, "Les Cloches de Corneville," have received from her an interpretation that will ever associate her name with their success.

Mlle. Aimee, on her return to France, will take a respite from her labors here, and will probably appear next season at "Les Bouffes," in Paris, where she will undoubtedly receive that welcome that is so deservedly hers.

Peralto's great feat of endurance in riding 305 miles in 14 hours and 31 minutes was accomplished by using the Coca Tonic Bitters. This great sovereign nerve and power sustainer can be obtained of the Quichua Coca Company, 72 William St.—New York Express.

When a married man learns that a young lady with a fortune of $150,000 has fallen in love with him, and he goes home and sees a squealing baby in the cradle and the butcher's bill on the table, he feels—he thinks—well, he feels like kicking over the cradle and murdering the butcher, we've been told.—Norristown Herald.

A new resident of our town, who subscribed for a Texas paper last January, ordered it discontinued a week ago. He says the editor has no enterprise; that a single issue of the paper never contained more than three murders and five lynchings; that he used to live in Texas, and wants a paper from there that gives all the news.—Norristown Herald.

A. M. Lesley, well known to the public as the manufacturer of the celebrated "Zero Refrigerator," has now on exhibition and sale an entire new stock of his desirable goods, which he offers at reasonable prices. His new place of business is now at 372 Sixth Avenue. He invites his old friends and customers, and the public generally, to visit him at his new establishment in Booth's Theatre Building.

The playful college student purchases a ticket to Count Joannes' Richard III. and goes in pursuit of a defunct rat. This he secretes about his person until he has opportunity to cast it at the feet of Richard. The Count gathers up his shekels and hies himself to a distant city, leaving the student engaged in a vain attempt to deodorize his garments. And yet the student affects to regard Joannes as the bigger ass of the two.—Worcester Press.

Leona Moss, at the Union Square Theatre, Monday, June 10, supported by Joseph W. Wheelock, Miss Mary Wells, and a select company. This lady, who has been playing (incognita) a leading role in one of the best traveling companies, for the purpose of perfecting herself in stage business, belongs to one of the wealthiest and best families in Philadelphia, and has selected the theatrical profession purely from a love for the stage. She possesses all the requirements necessary to a successful career—beauty, a fine voice, and a perfect stage presence. The initial performance will be the Lady of Lyons. We predict for the management a successful season.

HUMORS OF THE DAY.

An indiscreet man confided a secret to another, and begged him not to repeat it. "Its all right," was the reply; "I'll be as close as you were."

A religious weekly published an article on "How to take a missionary collection." Show us the collection and we will find some way to take it.

A young lady in the city says the reason she carries a parasol is, the sun is a masculine gender, nnd she cannot withstand his ardent glances.

A New York editor heads an article "What we Drink." As he names nothing but water, we suspect he has been refused trust at the beer saloons.

"I say, Pat, what are you writing there in such a large hand?" "Arrah, honey, an' isn't it to my mother, who is very deaf, that I'm writing a long letther."

Talmage last Sunday announced his belief in a real old-fashioned red hot place of future punishment, and as his hearers gazed at his antics they all hoped he was right.

Many men who have smoked ten cents cigars every day of the year, are studying how they can practice economy in the purchase of Christmas gifts for their children.

"My gracious," said an urchin of New York, on beholding an English carriage with three footman in livery, "well, if it does not take three Britishers to make a niggar."

Dave Smith was going down Broadway with an umbrella marked "Stolen from Dave Smith." "There," said a man in front of St. Nicholas, "I always thought that fellow looked like a thief."

A word spoken pleasantly is a large spot of sunshine on the sad heart—and who has not seen the effects? A smile is like the bursting out of sun from behind a cloud, to him who thinks he has no friend in the world.

Now does the bad little boy go fishing on Sundny and catch a nice string of suckers, while the good little boy goes to Sunday school to catch the measles and run his chance of becoming an early spring angel.

Now does the wily bank director find a deficit ten thousand dollars, and exclaim: "This comes of supporting men in idleness: ordered that a reduction of ten per cent on the salary of the night watchman.

A face that is full of the expression of amiability is always beautiful. It needs no paint and no powder. Cosmetics are superfluous for it. Rouge cannot improve its cheeks, or lilywhite mend its complexion.

The man who thought he would present his wife with material for a new dress, was somewhat surprised to see the dealer slip the cloth into an envelope and say he would have the buttons sent right home in a dray.

A Burlington preacher, discoursing about Peter and Paul, remarked a few days since that they were a "good pair." Without opening his eyes the deacon in the first pew remarked: "Take the pot; ace's high all I've got."

"I was born in Bath," said a dirty-looking customer, as he harangued a crowd at a political meeting, "and I love my native place." "You don't look like if you had ever been there since," said one of his hearers, as he proceeded to laud an opposition candidate.

When the deacon of a country church announced, with many signs of sorrow, the death of his wife's mother, and immediately gave out the hymn commencing, "Praise God, from whom all blessings flow," there was a perceptible titter among the congregated worshippers.

Half the grocers in the city sell various sorts of poor milk, but it is surprising they all agree in spelling it "pure."

Somebody advertises for a servant girl who would not be above placing herself on an equality with the rest of the family.

Three are a mob according to law. That is what a young fellow thinks when he and another chap are courting the same girl.

"Did you ever know of a crack that was too small for a spying old woman to peep through?"—"Yes, John, the crack of the whip."

Chicago passengers now go to Galveston without change, according to railroad time-table. That is the way tramps go—without change: but they make it very unhealthy for poultry on the route.

One of the gratifying results of hard times seems to be that a man can wear a shirt for two days without being accused of being a prominent lecturer or a person with a tendency toward spiritualism.

Many clergyman do not yet know where their spring overcoats are to come from, but they feel a sweet and solemn faith they will get 17 pair of slippers each about 4th of July time, and that none of them will fit.

At a public contest lately held the following was the prize conundrum: What is the difference between a tenant and the son of a widow? The tenant has to pay rents; but the son of a widow has not two parents.

A Wisconsin man put his arm around a girl while they were out riding together and within a few minutes it was paralyzed. Paralysis is a bad thing, but around here it is considered a pretty mean sort of a man who isn't willing to risk both arms if necessary.

THE MAID AVENGED.

The maid was in the garden
Hanging out the clothes,
And there came a blackbird
And bit off her nose.

This little example of domestic savagery has been sung in every nursery of every generation, but it has been reserved for these days of reparation to see that the maid had her revenge. Thus it happens that a wonderful operation recently performed has historic as well as scientific interest. A house maid had her nose knocked off by a hotel lift, and that organ has been satisfactorily replaced by the surgical affixment of the breastbone of a blackbird, over which the nasal skin was defty drawn. Thus is an historical outrage avenged.

When her mother read from the letter that Uncle John, who lives in England, had lost £300, little Alice, who had never seen her distant relative, exclaimed:

"Why! what a fat man uncle must have been!"—Philadelphia Times.

The Sage—Of course I do. That is my business.

The Youth—Well, I wanted to ask you what relation there is, if any, between this unusually windy session of the Senate and Mr. Peffer's whiskers?—(Indianapolis Journal.)

"Johnny," said a playmate to the boy who is always losing things, "is that watch your father gave you going yet?" "No," replied Johnny, ruefully, "it's gone."

Mrs. Nouveau-Riche—What a handsome house your father has built! Such beautiful balconies!

Miss Juliet (with a sigh)—Yes, plenty of balcony, but, alas, no Romeo.

Mrs. Nouveau-Riche—Is Romeo the name of that material the Tomkinses have their new awnings made of?—(Boston Transcript.)

"Mrs. Smith's daughter is singing her new song now."

"I can't hear a sound, and I don't believe you can, with the house two blocks away."

"I didn't say I could, but I see the company all leaving."—(Chicago Inter Ocean.)

White Magic.—He—I often think—at least I sometimes wonder—I mean I wish I knew if you cared for me, don't you know.

She—Oh, but they've got a clairvoyant in the room. Could'nt you ynd out?—(Punch.

"Over by the Anthropological Building," says a Chicago paper, "there is a highly educated Indian who speaks in a very quiet way about the uncivilized whites." The other day while he was making his toilet the curtain to his tent was lifted, and two women wearing badges—and from Boston—stood there and watched him go on with his dressing. He finally turned around and said to the one holding the curtain:

"Madam, how would you like to have me walk into your private dressing-room and watch you make your toilet?"

"She looked astonished at his pure English, blushed and walked away. That Indian is called the handsomest man at the World's Fair."

THE

Prodigal Daughter

Forgetting Himself.—An elderly gentleman, who knew something of law, lived in an Irish village where no lawyer had ever penetrated and was in the habit of making the wills of his neighbors.

At an early hour one morning he was aroused from his slumbers by a knocking at his gate and, putting his head out of the window, he asked who was there,

"It's me, your honor—Paddy Flaherty. I could not get a wink of sleep thinking of the will I have made."

"What's the matter with the will?" asked the amateur lawyer.

"Matter, indeed!" replied Pat; "shure I've not left myself a three-legged stool to sit upon.—[Spare Momen's.

When you see an old man amiable, mild, equable, content and good humored, be sure that in his youth he has been just, generous, and forbearing. In his old age he does not lament the past nor dread the future. He is like the evening of a fine day.

We always find a thousand excellent excuses for our gravest faults, but if anyone wrongs us in the least, the offence is unpardonable. We have a thousand reasons wherewith to condemn our neighbor, but not one wherewith to excuse him.

MANIFESTATIONS OF FASHIONS.

"House Jacket" is the appellation bestowed upon exquisite commingings of silk and lace pretty enough for the ball room. The newest wrinkle in modeling is to reinforce the front below the belt to the depth of perhaps sixteen inches with a skirt of fine side pleats, the back cut in a continuous piece, showing a cluster of fine pleats down the centre.

In one, such, model, the material is exquisite pale blue satin surah, a fichu like draping falling over the shoulders, the neck and the sleeves all being finished with wide frills of beautifully fine nainsook embroidery.

A decidedly new feature in a delicate pink crepon house jacket was the disposition of pointed capes falling in jabot effect from each side of the neck over the shoulder and sleeve. These were finished with a narrow frill of guipure lace, and fastened in place with pink satin ribbons.

Pearls, and a touch of gold and silver tinsel in combination, indicate one of the most beautiful styles in headgear for evening wear. An extremely becoming French creation seen the other day showed a three inch band of pearls supporting a loose crown of shaded petunia colored velvet caught against the frame at one side and toward the back with wings of ecru lace closely run with gold tinsel. Bright hued roses to match the velvet were disfustered in front to almost touch the hair.

For the above Fashion Notes, thanks are due Messrs. B. ALTMAN & Co.

SUMMER DRINKS.

LEMON BARLEY WATER.—2 oz. sugar, 1 lemon, 1 quart barley water. Take 2 oz pearl barley, wash it well, and boil for ten minutes in a little water to clear it, pour off the water; when drained put 4 pints water to it, and let it boil till reduced to 1 quart, add the juice of 1 lemon, and the sugar rubbed on the rind, strain, and stand aside to cool.

AMERICAN ICE DRINK.—1 bottle cider, 1½ pint lemonade, 2 glasses sherry, a teaspoonful of orange-flower water, 2 or 3 sprigs of mint, ¼ lb. lump sugar, 1 lb. ice finely flaked. Put the cider into a bowl or jug, and add other ingredients; stir well together and serve.

Mrs. Kindly—Now, I'll give you a dime, poor man. But I hope you will not go and get drunk with it.

The Poor Man (much hurt)—Lady, you do me a gr'at wrong to suggest such a thing.

Mrs. Kindly—I didn't mean to accuse—

The Poor Man—I'm glad of it, lady. Do I look like a man who could get drunk on a dime?—(New York Weekly.

There was one hymn of which Parson Black was especially fond, and which so accurately expressed his sentiments that he made use of it on all possible occasions. One of these was the funeral of his most prominent deacon, who, though active in the affairs of the church, had, in the business world, a reputation for sharpness and closeness that was not wholly enviable.

The services were drawing to a close, Parson Black rose slowly from his chair, and, in a voice of sepulchral sadness, said:

"Friends: Before removing the remains of our dearly beloved brother from this house to the house app'inted for all the livin', let us join in singin' the 247th hymn—

'Believin', we rejoice
To see the curse removed,'"

—Boston Budget.

"Now James," said the school teacher, "remember that the secret of good reading is to read exactly as you would talk. Stand up straight and try and read your lesson just as you would speak it." James dutifully arose. The first sentence in his lesson was—"William, please to let me take your kite for a few minutes," James looked at it thoughtfully, and then exclaimed: "Hi, dere, Bill, gimme dat kite o' yours a minute or I'll break your face. See?" And then he added before the astonished teacher had time to interrupt—"Dat's de way I'd talk it," James's teacher has decided that some new principles of instruction are needed in her school.—Buffalo Express.

It was like her.—"I see you have another piece of classic statuary, Alicia," said Harold McGiven, as he followed his betrothed into the parlor and minutely inspected the new statue.

"No, Harold, dear; this is my cousin from Boston," explained Alicia, and the girl from the east nearly moved a muscle at Harold's appreciation.—Detroit Free Press.

Josephine—See those poor lambs crowded together in that freight car!

Amy—Yes. It reminds one of the elevated trains during the rush hours, doesn't it?

Playwright: "From the nature of my play, you see, it ought to close with some line or significant act from the hero in perfect accord with the feelings of an audience."—Critic: "Why not let him heave a sigh of relief, then?"

A Weak Argument. — Watts—I hope the women of this country will not get to smoking cigarettes. Our girls are already too mannish.

Potts—You don't call smoking cigarettes "mannish," do you?—(Indianapolis Journal.

"The Rochester Democrat" says that bicyclists stoop when riding because they are "on pleasure bent."

SUMMER DRINKS.

CIDER CUP.—6 oz. loaf-sugar, 1½ lemon, 1 bottle cider, grated nutmeg. Rub the rinds of the lemon on some of the sugar, squeeze the juice on to it, and put in a jug; add the cider, grate a little nutmeg over, and set on ice for half an hour.

SHERRY COBBLER.—Ice, 2 teaspoonfuls powdered sugar, the rind of ½ lemon, 2 glasses of sherry. Half fill a tumbler with flakes of ice, add the sugar, lemon rind, and sherry; stir well together, and drink through a straw.

CHERRY WATER.—1 lb. Kentish cherries, 1 pint syrup, 3 lemons, 2 quarts water. Pulp the cherries in a mortar, bruising the kernels as well as the fruit, turn the mass into a basin, add the syrup, juice of the lemons, and water; pass through a hair sieve, and it will be ready for use.

HADN'T THE NERVE.

Young Ruffin's mother-in-law was sick,
Her health had struck a flaw—
And with the kind concern that moves
The average son-in-law
He straightway to the settlement
On double quick did chase,
And brought a doctor back with him
To diagnose the case.

With anxious mien he waited then
Until the doctor grave
Had seen the patient, and in turn
This honest verdict gave:
"She needs no medicine young man,
There'll be no help for her,
Unless you forthwith send her to
A warmer climate, sir."

No word young Ruffin spoke, but to
The woodshed he made tracks,
And straightway coming back did bring
A newly sharpened axe.
This handing to the man who did
All human ailments serve,
"You do it Doctor, dear," said he,
"I haven't got the nerve."

—Boston Courier.

The Democrats of Dallas, N. C., want the Republican postmaster removed, not because he is an offensive partisian, but because he goes barefooted in business hours. Paradoxical as it may seem, a Democrat wants to stand in his shoes.—(Ecs ton Transcript

The Time He Likes Best.—"Ah," she said in an enraptured manner, "don't you welcome the golden, glorious sunset?"

"Y-a-a-s," replied Reginald, "you know it's about at sunset that a fellow can put on a dress suit and feel like a gentleman."

First Moth—Are you going fur? Second Moth—I intend to spend the summer on the cape.

"What is a house without a baby?" asked a lady writer, and an old bachelor editor replied: "It is comparatively quiet."

There is nothing a man hates worse than to have his wife call him into her room and say she wants to have a private talk with him.

EVERYBODY.

A pretty young girl went into a music store, and, rushing up to a new clerk, said breathlessly, "Have you a heart that loves me only?" The young man blushed, and began to stammer unintelligibly, when an experienced clerk brought the song by that name, which the new clerk rolled up and gave to the girl; she took it and started for the door, but came back hastily and said, "Oh! I forgot—one sweet kiss before we part." The modest young man was so embarrassed by these experiences that he resolved to go into another business.

THE ARGUMENT
—OF—
"PANJANDRUM."

The story of "Panjandrum" begins in Subaya, a suburb of Manilla, the principal seaport of Luzon, one of the Philippine Islands. The village inn is kept by Paquita, a young and pretty senorita, with whom Pedro is infatuated. At this inn arrive Don Rosolio, a Spanish grandee and butterfly collector, with his wife, Donna Maria, his son, Don Jose, and his ward, Donna Inez. During the day a bull fight is to take place, at which Pedro is to make his debut as an espada. Paquita having promised to bestow her hand upon him should he win glory. It appears that Donna Inez, whose marriage to Don Jose is contemplated by her guardians, has fallen in love with Luiz, the driver of the diligence on which the travellers arrive. His suit is promptly repulsed by her guardians however; and after the bull fight has resulted in Pedro's overthrow, and as a consequence of Paquita's reproaches, and her feigned infatuation for Don Jose, he has vowed to run away to sea, he is enlisted by Luiz to promote the latter's elopement with Inez, before her guardians can carry out their threat of an immediate return with her to Spain. Paquita also aids in promoting the elopement, but it proves an attempt a failure. Luiz is placed under arrest for seeking to run away with a ward in chancery, and the lovers are disconsolate, when Pedro volunteers to take Luiz on the diligence, and drive the party in such a manner that they will miss the steamer from Manilla, thereby giving Luiz time to gain freedom and arrange further plans.

The departure from Manilla of the vessel in which Donna Maria, Donna Inez and Don Jose return to Spain, is shown panoramically. Pedro has shipped as a sailor and has also Luiz, in order to be near his sweetheart. Paquita, unknown to Pedro, ships on the same vessel as a cabin boy, and Don Rosolio alone is left behind. During a furious storm, the vessel is wrecked on the coast of Borneo, and after a series of hardships the passengers reach the shore in safety, only to be captured by natives and carried through the jungles to Kutching, where King Panjandrum holds sway. The prisoners are taken before Ro ago, the Grand Vizier, who, it ap ars, is in a most delicate position. Pan jandrum having died six months before, and the Bornese law requiring the death of not only Rotomago, but the King's wives and numerous slaves, at the royal obsequies, and in consequence, the wily Vizier artfully conceals the King's death, and causes an effigy to be made which is displayed on the few occasions when the monarch is compelled to make a public appearance; old age and infirmity accounting for his essential retirement. The day is the annual Feast of the Sun, when the king must appear and witness the sacrifice of numerous victims. Indra, one of these, has been promised by the Vizier that she shall escape the others' fate, by being chosen as the King's fortieth wife; but upon arrival of the captives, his fancy turns to Donna Inez, and Indra's jealousy is aroused. The captives are condemned to be sacrificed, but upon arrival of Pedro and Paquita, disguised as fakirs, the former plots the rescue of all. After attempting to mystify Rotomago with his supernatural powers, he proves to him that the secret of Panjandrum's death is known to himself and Paquita, and while the Vizier is negotiating with the pretended fakirs for their silence, an escaped pet orangoutang carries off and destroys the King's effigy, which gives Pedro an opportunity he is not slow to seize, and he offers to personate the King until a new effigy can be constructed, which offer is eagerly accepted by Rotomago. When seated on the throne, Paquita transforms Pedro from an aged to a youthful monarch, to the people's delight. Pedro determines to retain possession of the throne and promises pardon to Rotomago upon condition that Donna Maria and the other captives are returned in security to their native country.

Where goest thou with air so gay,
With bright eyes and smiles profuse?
Why, I'm going to the ball to-day,
To the levee of Hilton Hughes.

To Hilton Hughes you say, my dear?
But why so pressed for time?
My ticket entitles me to rare batistes,
And I must get in line.

For if one wears a dandy shirt,
To wear with last year's blazer,
It behooveth one to strive apace,
For they are all the rage, sir.

Well we think we'll turn with you,
And take a look cutout,
For if there's a thing to describe
They'll not rest long on the shelves.

So to Hilton Hughes, to Hilton Hughes,
To the levee of the fair,
And when they bought I can't describe,
But I'll leave you to go there.

"THE LION TAMER."

The management announce the last nights of "The Merry Monarch" and on Wednesday, December 30th, Mr. Francis Wilson and his popular company will produce for the first time in the new comic opera entitled "The Lion Tamer," the libretto of which has been written by Mr. J. Cheever Goodwin and the music composed by Mr. Richard Stahl. In this production Mr. Wilson intends to present a work that seems to contain a strong element of novelty and one that will be in marked contrast to the subject and character of both "The Oolah" and "The Merry Monarch." It is needless to say, however, that the same careful and artistic attention to detail which won so much admiration in these other performances will be maintained in the manner in which "The Lion Tamer" is placed before the public. The cast will include Mr. Francis Wilson, Mr. Charles Plunkett, Mr. Gilbert Clayton, Mr. Fred. Lenox, Mr. William Steiger, Miss Laura Moore, Miss Nettie Lyford, Miss Marie Jansen, and Messrs. William Pruette, Stuart Harold and Mr. Dudley, three new and valued acquisitions to the company.

The sale of seats for "The Lion Tamer" will be opened on Monday, December 21st.

"THE LION TAMER."

The management announce the last nights of "The Merry Monarch" and on Wednesday, December 30th, Mr. Francis Wilson and his popular company will produce for the first time the new comic opera entitled "The Lion Tamer," the libretto of which has been written by Mr. J. Cheever Goodwin and the music composed by Mr. Richard Stahler. In this production Mr. Wilson intends to present a work that seems to contain a strong element of novelty and one that will be in marked contrast to the subject and character of both "The Oolah" and "The Merry Monarch." It is needless to say, however, that the same careful and artistic attention to detail which won so much admiration in these other performances will be maintained in the manner in which "The Lion Tamer" is placed before the public. The cast will include Mr. Francis Wilson, Mr. Charles Plunkett, Mr. Gilbert Clayton, Mr. Fred. Lewis, Mr. William Steiger, Miss Laura Moore, Miss Nettie Lyford, Miss Marie Jansen, and Messrs. William Pruette, Stuart Harold and Mr. Dudley, three new and valued acquisitions to the company.

The sale of seats for "The Lion Tamer" will be opened on Monday, December 21st.

ON TUNES.

On music of all kinds I dote,
From the jaybird's song to the robin's note;
I deeply love all sorts of tunes,
From negro hymns to mystic runes;
The gentle warble of the flute,
The tinkle of the minstrel's lute,
A wake sweet thoughts within my breast—
But ah! I love a for-tune best.

Camel Hair Cloths and Cheviots are to be extensively worn for walking costumes. These are to be found both in plain and fancy effects and in all colors, but quite contrary to the predictions of those who do not like black, it is to be a favorite color for the street. B. Priestley & Co., whose name guarantees satisfactory wear, offer Cheviots in a variety of designs both in black and grey, and their black Camel Hair Cloths are unsurpassed in beauty of texture. The Priestley fabrics are all stamped every few yards, on the under side of the selvedge, with the name B. Priestley & Co. in gilt letters.

FRANCIS WILSON
—IN—
"THE MERRY MONARCH."
FALL SEASON
COMMENCING OCTOBER 5th, 1891.

Seats Ready Tues. September 29th.

The regular season at the Broadway Theatre will begin Monday, October 5th, with the appearance of Mr. Francis Wilson and his Company in their very successful production of "The Merry Monarch" which was seen here for a too brief term a year ago. On this occasion the Broadway Theatre will undergo a complete transformation in its interior furnishings and decorations. The summer chairs of rattan, the light and cool hangings and draperies which have contributed so much to maintain the reputation which this house has always enjoyed of being the coolest and most comfortable summer theatre in America, will all be removed and replaced by new velvet winter chairs and other upholstery appropriate to the cooler weather.

"The Merry Monarch" will be mounted in the same gorgeous style which excited so much admiration during its first run.

The company will comprise all the favorites of former season. Besides Mr. Wilson, the cast will include Miss Laura Moore, Miss Nettie Lyford, Miss Celie Essing, Miss Marie Jansen, Mr. Charles Plunkett, Mr. Gilbert Clayton, Mr. Fred. Lenox, Mr. W. Stieger, and the orchestra will be under the direction of Signor A. DeNovellis as before.

The sale of seats will begin at the box office on Tuesday, Sept. 29th.

YE STICKER AND YE STUCK.

God made two classes of mankind,
Ye sticker and ye stuck;
Ye first is made of finest clay,
Ye last is made of muck.
Ye sticker hath ye royal shine,
And hath ye untoho board;
But ye poorer little one he stuck
Hath no more "tick" for board.
Right jolly is ye sticker man,
He beeth broad and stout;
He liveth on ye fattest things,
And driveth round about.
But ye po rer stuck doth never laugh,
He groweth lean and lank;
And seeth all his pennies fade,
In yonder falling bank.
God made ye classes as they are,
I doubt not He knows best;
But still ye sticker man gets all
And pulleth down ye vest.

SMOKE HALL'S "BETWEEN THE ACTS," NOTED FOR THEIR PURITY AND CLEANLINESS OF MANUFACTURE For Sale Everywhere ALL-TOBACCO CIGARETTES

THE ARGUMENT —OF— THE BURLETTA.

The theme of "Wang," is an oriental one, and its scenes are located in Siam, that mysterious empire, aptly termed by writers, "The Land of the White Elephant," whose obscure history has proved a source of constant interest to the reader, the student, and the traveler. The plot is based upon a series of amusing incidents and humorous situations, which afford abundant opportunity for the display of Mr. Hopper's recognized abilities as a comedian. The story of the burletta may be thus summarized:

"Wang" the Regent of Siam, is uncle and guardian of Mataya, the Crown Prince, not yet of age, who has imbibed European notions, and, who is far from amenable to his uncle's rule. For six years, the Regent has ruled in a most poverty stricken state, owing to the fact that the treasure of his brother, the former King, (Mataya's father,) has never been discovered. By the interception of a letter intended for Mataya, the Regent discovers that a treasure chest is in the custody of the widow of the late French Consul, Frimousse, to whom it had been confided by the young Prince's father, to be delivered to him after his coronation. The action of the Burletta, in part, hinges upon the efforts of the Regent to obtain possession of this chest, and as a last resort, he secures the doubtful prize, by marrying the widow, and assuming the care of her large family of daughters, one of whom has captured the heart of the young Prince. After a series of complications, the chest is delivered to the Regent. The treasure, finally reaches its rightful owner, Mataya, who to partially console his uncle, resigns all claim to the throne to him, preferring love to royalty.

She—So she married for love, did she?,

He—Yes—love of money.—The Epoch.

Maud—Ethel, dear, how old will you be on your next birthday?

Guard (closing the door)—Thirty-four next.

Maud—Dear me! How did he know?—N. Y. Sun.

The massive gates of circumstance
Are turned upon the smallest hinge,
And thus some seeming pettiest chance
Oft gives our life its after tinge.
"The trifles of our daily lives,
The common things scarce worth recall,
Whereof no visible trace remains,
These are the main-springs after all."

Warden (of insane asylum)—This poor woman imagines she is shopping all the time. Sometimes she sits in silence for whole weeks.

Visitor—What is she doing then?

Warden—It is supposed that she imagines she is waiting for change —Cloak Review.

A NEW WAY TO COOK EGGS.

Boil for three minutes, drop in cold water, and peel without breaking the whites. Roll thin some good puff-paste, dust each egg lightly with salt and pepper, wrap it in a bit of the paste, and fry in sweet butter to a crisp light brown. Drain on blotting paper, wrap in a napkin, and serve very hot.

A TRUST SONG.

Better a smile than a sigh, dear,
Better a kiss than a frown;
Better a look toward the sky, dear,
Than always be looking down.

Better, in time of trouble,
A song of hope and cheer,
Than a heart that broods o'er sorrow,
And makes that sorrow dear.

The joys we find to-day, dear,
Perhaps seem poor and small;
But better a little sun, dear,
Than to have no sun at all.

Then make the most of the present,
And its little joys, I say,
For what is here, we have, dear,
But to-morrow is far away.

ONE OF SWEET WOMAN'S LATEST FADS.

"That is a pretty little Satsuma potpourri on your mantel." I said to a woman friend the other day.

"It is not a potpourri; it is a memory jar."

"A memory jar? I repeated after her, forgetting my manners.

"Yes, it is a real clever idea, but it is not original with me. The jar is intended to hold souvenirs, especially flowers, though it is perfectly proper to drop in anything that is very precious. I have just begun mine.

"This goldenrod is part of a bunch that he picked for me one royal day last September when we were in the country. This faded maple leaf was picked up in Longfellow's yard. The pansies are some that Belle sent me commencement day; the freshest ones came from mamma a few weeks ago. That autumnnic looking twig came from a tree that Edgar A. Poe planted. I got in Fordham one day when I made a pilgrimage there. The four leaved clover was put in one of my favorite books by a friend who is dead. Everybody ought to keep a memory jar. Mine is becoming very interesting already. And as she carefully put the cover on she said softly Jean Ingelow's words: "For memory is possession."

You can get them of the Japanese Trading Co., 18 and 20 East 18th St.

Successis full of promise till men get it, and then it is a last year's nest from which the birds have flown.—Beecher.

Camel Hair Cloths and Cheviots are to be extensively worn for walking costumes. These are to be found both in plain and fancy effects and in all colors, but quite contrary to the predictions of those who do not like black, it is to be a favorite color for the street. B. Priestley & Co., whose name guarantees satisfactory wear, offer Cheviots in a variety of designs both in black and gray, and their black Camel Hair Cloths are unsurpassed in beauty of texture. The Priestley fabrics are all stamped every five yards, on the under side of the selvedge, with the name B. Prestley & Co. in gilt letters.

Fashions for Fall and Winter. A handsome exhibit of this season's importations in materials for Ladies' Wear, Costumes, Hats, Bonnets, Toques, &c., &c., may be seen at B. Altman & Co.'s establishment. All the highest and extreme novelties are shown. In the Imported Costumes for House, Street and reception wear, there are many new effects.

The Marvellous Royal Success of the Hardman Piano in England.

Messrs. Hardman, Peck & Co. are to be congratulated upon the unrivalled success which the Hardman Piano has attained abroad. In addition to the Grand Piano, which we mentioned recently as having been purchased by Her Majesty the Queen, it has been announced that three other Hardman Grands have been purchased by members of the nobility. Up to the present time the royal and noble person who has hitherto selected Hardman Grands for their use are Her Majesty the Queen, Her Royal Highness the Duchess of Albany, Her Royal Highness the Countess of Montrose, and His Grace the Duke of Portland—all of whom, this is a showing of which the firm may well feel proud, and Mr. Peck does feel proud of it, and gladly shows to those interested the original document signed by Kramer, Chamberlain of the Household, appointing Mr. Addington their agent for Great Britain, Piano Maker to Her Majesty the Queen.—Texas Siftings.

Special Notice.

SPECIAL ATTENTION is called to the safety of the Broadway Theatre, it being the only Theatre that stands alone and has exits on all four sides. The first theatre constructed under the new law, being thoroughly fire-proof. Main Auditorium on ground floor, thirty-six feet of exits to Broadway, thirty-six feet of exits to Forty-first Street; twenty-five feet of exits to Seventh Avenue, making passage running entire depth of building from Broadway to Seventh Avenue. The doors to all above referred exits open outwards by electricity. There are six different places in the theatre from which these doors can be controlled.

ALL SCENERY, Curtains and Draperies on the stage of this theatre have been made non-combustible by a system of fire-proofing which was approved by the Superintendent of Buildings, the Fire Commissioners and Chief Shay. No gas used except in case of emergency. Illuminated throughout by the electric light.

AN ASBESTOS CURTAIN is hung to cover entire proscenium opening, so that in case of fire on stage, it would be impossible to communicate to auditorium.

PARTICULAR ATTENTION has been paid to ventilation, the air being drawn from above the roof and circulated through air chambers by approved machinery placed under the orchestra and orchestra circle.

THE LOBBIES of this theatre are more than sufficiently large to contain the entire audience, allowing two and one-half feet for each person. The second balcony is entirely disconnected from balance of building, having separate fire-proof staircases to Broadway, Forty-first Street and Seventh Avenue.

THE STAGE is equipped with Automatic Sprinkler System, which has been approved by the Fire Commissioners, Superintendent of Buildings, and the Board of Fire Underwriters. All seats twenty-two inches wide. Making the Broadway Theatre fire-proof, thoroughly comfortable, perfectly ventilated, the best constructed and safest theatre in the world.

Second Annual Engagement

Commencing Monday, May 4th,

DE WOLF HOPPER

AND

The Hopper Opera Company, presenting the new operatic burletta

WANG.

On Monday evening, May 4th, the well-known and popular comic opera comedian, De Wolf Hopper, assisted by an admirable ensemble of comedians and singers, will inaugurate his second annual engagement at this house, and will present for the first time on any stage, an operatic burletta, entitled "Wang," written and composed by J. Cheever Goodwin and Woolson Morse. The principals of the Hopper organization include, Della Fox, Samuel Reed, Jeanette St. Henry, Anna O'Keefe, Marion Singer, Edmund Stanley, Alfred Klein, Herbert Gresham, Capps, George Wade, Louis Strader and other well-known favorites. The production promises to be a most elaborate one, and, among its features will be a large and well drilled chorus, composed of handsome young ladies, with attractive faces and tuneful voices. There is every prospect that the coming engagement of the De Wolf Hopper Opera Company, will be a notable one, and that the comedian and his merry crew will be awarded a royal welcome on their return to the metropolis.

A New York reporter happened to be at the menagerie in Central park when the animals were being fed. He saw the keeper give the tiger a large piece of meat.

"Does he get that often?" asked the reporter.

"He is fed regularly every day," replied the keeper.

"Great heavens! why was I not born a tiger?" said the reporter, clasping his hands.—Texas Siftings.

She—So she married for love, did she?

He—Yes—love of money.—The Epoch.

I wandered lonely as a cloud
That floats high o'er vales and hills,
When all at once I saw a crowd,
A host of golden daffodils.
I gazed, and gazed, but little thought
What wealth that show to me had brought:
For oft when on my couch I lie,
In vacant or in pensive mood,
They flash upon that inward eye
Which is the bliss of solitude;
And then my heart with pleasure fills
And dances with the daffodils.

The Marvellous Royal Success of the Hardman Piano in England.

Messrs. Hardman, Peck & Co. are very much elated upon the many leading causes which the Hardman Piano has attained abroad. In all the Courts of Europe this Piano still continues to be more or less a favorite, and recently Her Majesty the Queen of England has honored that firm with Royal Warrants, which have been granted to no other piano manufacturer up to this present time (the others named in connection with them are Erard and Broadwood). Besides these, one are Her Majesty the Queen, The King of Norway, The Prince of Wales, The Duke of Edinburgh, The Duke of Montrose, and His Grace the Duke of Sutherland and Gordon. Hardman, Peck & Co. are also supplying very well for ground, and Mr. Hardman, Peck & Co. have been appointed Pianoforte Manufacturers to the Royal Family, and have supplied the Royal Household with their instruments. Mr. Addington Peck, manager of Messrs. Hardman, Peck & Co.'s (Her Majesty the Queen's) Piano Warerooms.

SEATS ON SALE AT

Box Office, Broadway Theatre.

On March 3rd, Fanny Davenport will open her engagement in this theatre. The Broadway Theatre will be remarkably strong in personnel and scenic and Mortem's now famous "Cleopatra." Miss Davenport, like the other American stars, has redoubled all her former efforts to make this great play a marked success, and in spite of the many difficulties which beset her, first by the fire which interrupted one of the greatest productions ever seen on the stage, and also by the difficulty and labor of replacing the beautiful wardrobe, scenes and accoutrements, she has, both in an artistic sense and from a business point of view, achieved the greatest success of her life. Of course the appreciation shown by the American theatrical public has done much to encourage Miss Davenport in her performance of the role of Cleopatra, which is without doubt the most artistic and strongest characterization that has marked the career of this painstaking actress. Under the able management of Mr. Meyer's "Cleopatra" has moved such a success as has never been known in the annals of the American stage.

The New Metropolitan Success.

"MR. POTTER OF TEXAS."

STAR THEATRE, NEW YORK.

One of the most distinct and popular successes in the Metropolis this season is Mr. Augustus Thomas's comedy of "Mr. Potter of Texas." It is a bright, sparkling comedy drama, closely following the lines of the novel and is destined to exceed in popularity any of the favorite modern successes.

The only thing to be regretted is its limited engagement at the Star Theatre, where it is now playing to the capacity of the house.

Humor and pathos change places at intervals most pleasant to the auditor; hence interest in every line is retained until the fall of the curtain.

The setting is far above the average, which is not surprising, as Mr. Frank W. Sanger, Manager of the handsome Broadway Theatre, personally selected each member of the cast with the greatest care and directed the production; that he succeeded in securing one of the strongest companies now playing in the city, can be seen from the following list of metropolitan favorites: Frank Mordaunt, Minnie Seligman, Sidney Drew, Louis Massen and Henry Holland. And in evidence of the high estimation placed on the play by the city press, we quote the comment of several of the papers the day after the production: "Mr. Sanger will never regret making the acquaintance of Mr. Potter of Texas."

The Marvellous Royal Success of the Hardman Piano in England.
Messrs. Hardman, Peck & Co are the acknowledged leaders in the manufacture of the Grand Piano, has attained abroad. In all quarters the famed Piano, which so astonished the world at the Centennial, has been purchased by His Majesty the Queen of Spain, has been announced that there is no Piano which has been purchased for the Royal Family of England by the present Queen, and the Royal Family of England, who have selected Hardman Grand Pianos for use at Buckingham Palace, the Royal Residences of Balmoral and Osborne House, and the Royal Residences of Buckingham Palace, Her Majesty the Empress of Germany, and H.I.H. Grand Duke of Hesse, and many other Royal Personages. This is a showing of which the firm may well feel proud, and which will gratify their friends and gladly advertise them in a position unequalled by any manufacturer in the world. Pianos of this make are for sale, approximating Six Hundred Dollars, by Chickering & Sons, Steinway & Sons, Decker Bros., Weber, Hardman, Peck & Co., Knabe & Co., Vose & Sons, Behning & Son, Fischer, Kranich & Bach, Hazelton Bros., Wheelock & Co., Ivers & Pond, Emerson, Cable Co., Conover Piano Co., Bradbury, Sterling & Co., Hallet & Davis, Estey, Cornish & Co., Mason & Hamlin Co., Shoninger Co., Ludwig & Co., Fischer, Starr, Kingsbury, Story & Clark,

TICKETS ON SALE AT

Box Office Broadway Theatre.

On March 30th, Fanny Davenport will open her engagement in this theatre (The Broadway Theatre) with her remarkably strong impersonation of Sardou and Moreau's famous "Cleopatra." Miss Davenport, like the true American she is, has redoubled all her former efforts to make this great play a marked success, and in spite of the many difficulties which beset her, first by the fire which interrupted one of the grandest productions ever seen on the stage, and also by the difficulty and labor of replacing the beautiful scenery, costumes, and accoutrements, she has, both in an artistic sense and from a business point of view, achieved the greatest hour of her life. Of course the appreciation shown by the American theatrical public has done much to encourage Miss Davenport in her performance of the role of Cleopatra, which it is without doubt the most artistic and strongest characterization that has marked the career of this painstaking actress. Under the management of Mr. Marcus R. Mayer "Cleopatra" has achieved such a success as has never been known in the annals of the American stage.

The New Metropolitan Success.

"MR. POTTER OF TEXAS."

STAR THEATRE, NEW YORK.

One of the most distinct and popular successes in the Metropolis this season is Mr. Gaylord's dramatization of "Mr. Potter of Texas." It is a bright, sparkling comedy drama, closely following the lines of the novel, and is destined to increase in popularity any of the favorite modern successes.

The only thing to be regretted is its limited engagement at the Star Theatre, where it is now playing to the capacity of the house.

Humor and pathos change places at intervals most pleasant to the auditor; hence interest in every line is retained until the fall of the curtain.

The acting is far above the average, which is not surprising, as Mr. Frank W. Sanger, Manager of the handsome Broadway Theatre, personally selected each member of the cast with the greatest care, and directed the production that he succeeded in securing one of the strongest companies now playing in the city, can be seen from the following list of metropolitan favorites: Frank Mordaunt, Minnie Seligman, Sydney Drew, Louis Massen and Henry Holland. And as evidence of the high estimation placed on the play by the city press, we quote the comment of several of the papers the day after the production: "Mr. Sanger will never regret making the acquaintance of Mr. Potter of Texas."

The Marvellous Royal Success of the Hardman Piano in England.

Messrs. Hardman, Peck & Co. are to be congratulated upon the success which, in Hardman Pianos, has attended their exhibits at the Crystal Palace. Two years in succession a Grand has been purchased by Her Majesty the Queen, and has been announced that three other Hardman Grands have been purchased by members of the royal family. In the present year the same compliment has been paid by those who have selected Hardman Grand Pianos for their use at Her Majesty the Queen, H.R.H. Royal Highness the Duchess of Fife, Her Grace the Duchess of Montrose, and His Grace the Duke of Richmond and Gordon. This is a showing of which it is thus may well feel proud, and Mr. Peck does well to point to it, and gladly shows to those interested the original document signed by Kennaire, Chamberlain, for Her Majesty, appointing Mr. Addington their agent for Great Britain, Piano Maker to Her Majesty the Queen.—Dorset Saturday.

The New Metropolitan Success.

"MR. POTTER OF TEXAS."

STAR THEATRE, NEW YORK.

One of the most distinct and popular successes in the Metropolis this season is Mr. Gunter's dramatization of "Mr. Potter of Texas." It is a bright, sparkling comedy drama, closely following the lines of the novel, and is destined to exceed in popularity any of the favorite modern successes.

The only thing to be regretted is its limited engagement at the Star Theatre, where it is now playing to the capacity of the house.

Humor and pathos change places at intervals most pleasant to the auditor; hence interest in every line is retained until the fall of the curtain.

The acting is far above the average, which is not surprising, as Mr. Frank W. Sanger, Manager of the handsome Broadway Theatre, personally selected each member of the cast with the greatest care, and directed the production; that he succeeded in securing one of the strongest companies now playing in the city, can be seen from the following list of metropolitan favorites: Frank Mordaunt, Minnie Seligman, Sydney Drew, Louis Massen and Henry Holland. And as evidence of the high estimation placed on the play by the city press, we quote the comment of several of the papers the day after the production: "Mr. Sanger will never regret making the acquaintance of Mr. Potter of Texas."

The Marvellous Royal Success of the Hardman Piano in England.

Messrs. Hardman, Peck & Co. are the newest, the latest upon this side of the Atlantic, which the Hardman Piano has attained abroad. In addition to their Royal Warrants, mentioned some time since as having been granted to Her Majesty the Queen, it has been announced that three other Hardman Grands have been purchased by command, and will be sent to the present time the finest and most famous persons who have ordered Hardman Grand Pianos. In use are Her Majesty the Queen, Her Royal Highness the Duchess of Fife, Her Grace the Duchess of Montrose, and His Grace the Duke of Devonshire and Clonmel. This is a showing of which the firm may well feel proud, and Mr. Peck during the past month has been busily engaged in completing the new Agreement signed by Kenmare, Chamberlain to the Household, appointing Mr. J. Arthur Hardman, Piano Maker to Her Majesty the Queen. (See Catalogue.)

On March 30th, Fanny Davenport will open her engagement in this theatre. The Broadway Theatre with her remarkable strong impersonation of Sardou and Moreau's now famous "Cleopatra." Miss Davenport, like the true American she is, has redoubled all her former efforts to make this great play a marked success, and in spite of the many difficulties which beset her, first by the fire which interrupted one of the grandest productions ever seen on the stage, and also by the difficulty and labor of replacing its bountiful scenery, costumes and accoutrements, she has, both in an artistic sense and from a business point of view, achieved the greatest hit of her life. Of course the opportunity is where is the American theatrical public has now more to encourage Miss Davenport in her performance of the role of Cleopatra, which is without doubt the most intense and strongest characterization that has marked the career of this painstaking actress. Under the management of Mr. Lucius R. Mayer "Cleopatra" will no doubt mark a success as has been known, in the annals of the American stage.

Park Place, New York, runs out of Broadway opposite the Post Office. Among its features is the largest lamp store in the world, that of the Rochester Lamp Company. Ladies often like to go down among the large wholesale houses, and buy of first hands. They will find at 42 Park Place the largest and most artistic display of lamps ever shown—over 2,000 varieties. This house sells at right prices.

Nothing aids digestion better than a fine cordial taken after a heavy meal, and as there are many inferior brands, some of which have no honest merit at all, it will always be well to order from your grocer or wine merchant the MARIE BRIZARD & ROGER brand. This house stands unexcelled for their CREME DE MENTHE, ANISETTE, MARASQUIN and CURAÇOA, etc. American House, T. W. Stemmler, Union Square, New York City.

A Treat for Artists.

The varied beauty of the scenery along the Hudson and through the Mohawk Valley, touched by the soft autumnal tints, invites a journey by the New York Central with a peculiar charm to persons of artistic temperament.

Eight magnificently appointed passenger trains leave Grand Central Station, daily, for the North and West.

All our operations guaranteed the best high-class work Don't have your Teeth extracted.

New process. No pain. Comfortable. Firm. Durable. Don't have your teeth extracted. Call upon us first. We make artificial teeth without a plate.

If you have but three firm roots or teeth in EITHER JAW, we can attach to them a full set of teeth, which, being cemented solidly to the teeth or roots, are immovable, and you can eat with them as with the natural teeth. Our bridge work is even more rapid and solid than the natural teeth, for the bridges, being made of a solid bar of gold, fasten the teeth upon which they are attached, and prevent lateral pressure or strain.

We prefer, of course, that ALL of the natural roots should be left in the jaw, that we may build upon solid roots, as far as it is possible to do so, and thus we can the more nearly imitate the natural teeth in feeling, in appearance, CROWNS affixed to single roots or upon a BRIDGE, are a perfect imitation of the natural teeth in COLOR, FORM, SOLIDITY and COMFORT.

Our operations are not an experiment. We have been doing this work for ten years, during which time we have inserted over 50,000 crowns and bridges. If you have not heard of it before it is because your friends who see our work do not care to tell you that they have artificial teeth, and our operations are so perfect that you would never dream that your friends' teeth are artificial.

We make no charge for consultation, and would be happy to show our work on models and discuss it carefully to any who may call, or send learn of it. Or, if not convenient to call, or who are so placed we will gladly send a pamphlet descriptive of the work, mailed free.

Terms invariably cash, half in advance, balance when work is completed. We always make an estimate before beginning an operation, that no misunderstanding can occur.

SEND FOR PAMPHLET. MAILED FREE.

WHEN LOVE IS DONE.

And what is life when love is gone?
A rose with all the perfume flown;
A strong tree withered to the root,
A fair vine swept of bud and fruit,
An anthem never sung—
A harp with all its music mute,
And every chord unstrung!
A sea whose current might have swept the world from shore to shore,
But now—whose waves can only moan and ebb forevermore!—H. F., In Munsey's Weekly.

Binkles—This paper tells a story about a man who is so strong he can hold a horse by the tail.

Twinkles—That story must be a sort of tail of whoa!

Special Notice.

SPECIAL ATTENTION is called to the safety of the Broadway Theatre, it being the only Theatre that stands alone and has exits on all four sides. The first theatre constructed under the new law, being thoroughly fire-proof. Main Auditorium on ground floor; thirty-six feet of exits to Broadway, thirty-six feet of exits to Forty-first Street; twenty-five feet of exits to Seventh Avenue, besides passage running entire depth of building from Broadway to Seventh Avenue. The doors to all above referred exits open outwards by electricity. There are six different places in the theatre from which these doors can be controlled.

ALL SCENERY, Curtains and Draperies on the stage of this theatre have been made non-combustible; by a process of fire-proofing which was approved by the Superintendent of Buildings, the Fire Commissioners and Chief Shea. No gas used except in case of emergency. Illuminated throughout by the electric light.

AN ASBESTOS CURTAIN is used over entire proscenium opening, so that in case of fire on stage, it would be impossible to communicate to auditorium.

PARTICULAR ATTENTION has been paid to ventilation, the air being taken from above the roof and circulated through air chambers by approved machinery placed under the orchestra and dress circle floor.

THE LOBBIES of this theatre are more than sufficiently large to empty the entire audience, allowing two and one-half feet for each person. The second balcony is entirely disconnected from balance of building, having separate fire-proof staircases to Broadway, Forty-first Street and Seventh Avenue.

THE STAGE is equipped with Automatic Sprinkler System, which has been approved by the Fire Commissioners, Superintendent of Buildings, and the Board of Fire Underwriters, it sends forty-two inches wide. Making the Broadway Theatre fire-proof, thoroughly comfortable, perfectly ventilated, the best constructed and safest theatre in the world.

FOR THE MEN IN THE BOX-OFFICE.

Those pet ent, gentle young men who always select the best seats in the house for you when you buy theatre tickets, have recently organized themselves into a mutual benefit association, called THE TREASURERS' CLUB OF AMERICA.

On the 20th of April next, a big benefit is to be given them by their brother professionals at the Broadway Theatre, for the purpose of creating a Sinking Fund to be drawn upon when any member becomes ill or requires assistance.

A number of prominent stage favorites have already offered their services and careful preparations are being made to give an entertainment equal to anything of a like nature that has ever been seen in New York.

It is a worthy cause and should be largely patronized not only by theatrical people, but also by the general public who owe so much to the politeness and geniality of the "men in the box-office."

The following is a condensed synopsis of the story of M'LLE RHÉ's new play.

"JOSEPHINE."

EMPRESS OF THE FRENCH.

The play is a succession of striking scenes. In the first act—the ball at the Tuileries—the love of Josephine and the plots of the court which seeks perpetuity by divorcing the empress in the hope of an heir to the throne before the new marriage are brought out. The scene closes with the news of the death of Napoleon's brother, the King of Holland, who was to have been his heir.

The second act is the divorce. Josephine in imperial robes and wearing a magnificent coronet of diamonds, is a memorable picture. The pathos of this scene is something hardly to be surpassed, unless it I by the next, in which Josephine steals to Napoleon's room to bid him farewell. While they are in tender parting, the hoofs of Talleyrand's horse, bearing him off on a journey to Vienna to demand the hand of the Princess Marie Louise for Napoleon, is heard. In the next act the heir to the throne is born. Josephine, at Malmaison, awaits the news. Loving Napoleon more than she hates her rival, she is eager for news that the heir is a boy, and the booming of the guns announcing the birth of "the King of Rome" brings a thrilling climax in which Josephine portrays the mingled joy and pain of the cast-off wife, who is still empress in her soul.

In the fifth act Napoleon has been overthrown and sent to Elba. His Austrain wife deserts him. Josephine would go to him. The women meet and a stormy scene ensues, in which Josephine curses the false wife. In the sixth act Josephine dies, but lives long enough to see Napoleon a return from Elba at the head of a conquering army.

HARDMAN HALL, Fifth Avenue and 19th Street, can be engaged for concerts, select entertainments, meetings, rehearsals &c. &c., by application to Hardman, Peck & Co., Proprietors, 138 Fifth Ave. Seating capacity 600. Terms moderate.

On Monday May 5th, the inauguration of THE DEWOLF HOPPER OPERA BOUFFE CO. will occur. They will produce at this theatre for the first time the new and original comic opera, entitled, "CASTLES IN THE AIR;" libretto by Charles Alfred Byrne and music by Gustave Kerker. Besides DeWolf Hopper, the following particular star of this great musical organization, will be Marion Manola, Della Fox, Thos. Q. Seabrooke, Edmund Stanley, Elvia Crox, Rose Leighton, Herbert Cripps, Alfred Klein, Emma Hanley, and a number of other prominent comic opera favorites. This attraction promises to be one of the very best that has ever been seen here in comic opera.

"VAN HOUTEN'S COCOA,

BEST & GOES FARTHEST."

The ORIGINAL and, ever since its invention, BEST of all Cocoas.

HIGHEST AWARDS in the PRINCIPAL EXHIBITIONS.

Being very strong and nutritious, this cocoa is cheaper and more satisfying than tea.

Tea and coffee it is now certain, cannot be considered as articles of food.

Cocoa, however, is both a stimulant and a nourisher and has the great advantage of having no injurious effects on the nervous system.

Raw cocoa, it is true, and all cocoas and chocolate manufactured in the ordinary way are difficult of digestion, their flavor and aroma also being very imperfect.

But these defects were obviated by the invention of the "Pure Soluble Cocoa" as possible by the founder of this firm.

It is acknowledged by the most eminent doctors and analysts that by the special treatment which Van Houten's Cocoa has undergone, the nutriment of the flesh-forming constituents is increased by fifty per cent., while the whole of the tissues are softened and rendered more palatable and digestible.

The consequence is that the most valuable elements—which otherwise are largely wasted may be easily assimilated by the most delicate invalids or children; the delicious flavor and aroma natural to cocoa—but which, without this treatment, are not perceptible—are most highly developed, and the great solubility renders the making of the cocoa extremely simple.

Van Houten's cocoa is thus stimulating and invigorating. Even when made weak, it is a delicious beverage, and it is then much cheaper than tea or coffee.

No wonder, therefore, that in all parts of the world Van Houten's Cocoa is recommended by medical men instead of tea or coffee or other cocoas and chocolates, for daily family use by children and adults both and sick, rich and poor.

The great success of Van Houten's Cocoa has led to many imitations, but it is generally admitted, and a comparison will easily prove that none of them equals the inventor's in solubility, agreeable taste, and nutritive qualities

SPECIAL NOTICE.

SPECIAL ATTENTION is called to the safety of the Broadway Theatre, it being the only Theatre that stands alone and has exits on all four sides. The first theatre constructed under the new law, being thoroughly fire-proof. Main Auditorium on ground floor; thirty-six feet of exits to Broadway, thirty-six feet of exits to 41st to Forty-first Street; twenty-five feet of exits to Seventh Avenue, besides passage running entire depth of building from Broadway to Seventh Avenue. The doors to all above referred exits open outwards by electricity. There are six different places in the theatre from which these doors can be controlled.

ALL SCENERY, Curtains and Draperies on the stage of this theatre have been made non-combustible by a system of fire-proofing which was approved by the Superintendent of Buildings, the Fire Commissioners and Chief Shay. No gas used except in case of emergency, illuminated throughout by the electric light.

AN ASBESTOS CURTAIN is hung to cover entire proscenium opening, so that in case of fire on stage, it would be impossible to communicate to auditorium.

PARTICULAR ATTENTION has been paid to ventilation, the air being drawn from above the roof and circulated through air chambers by approved machinery placed under the orchestra and orchestra circle.

THE LOBBIES of this theatre are more than sufficiently large to contain the entire audience, allowing two and one-half feet for each person. The second balcony is entirely disconnected from balance of building, having separate fire-proof staircases to Broadway, Forty-first Street and Seventh Avenue.

THE STAGE is equipped with Automatic Sprinkler System, which has been approved by the Fire Commissioners, Superintendent of Buildings, and the Board of Fire Underwriters. All seats twenty-two inches wide. Making the Broadway Theatre fire-proof, thoroughly comfortable, perefectly ventilated, the best constructed and safest theatre in the world.

—Monday, Oct. 6th, is set for the opening of the Broadway Theatre by Miss Agnes Huntington, in "Paul Jones," and her original company from London in the cast. The Operette has been playing for nearly two years in London, and rarely if ever, have performances met with so much favor at the hands of the English public, and still more remarkable is the fact that an American prima donna could so have enchained a London audience as to have made her the idol of the public. The opera of "Paul Sones" suits Miss Huntington admirably, and the great American contralto will be heard for the first time in what seems to be her natural sphere—that of opera bouffe. The entire company, chorus, dancers, figurants, costumes, scenery and paraphanalia will all be brought from the other side.

SPECIAL NOTICE.

SPECIAL ATTENTION is called to the safety of the Broadway Theatre, it being the only Theatre that stands alone and has exits on all four sides. The first theatre constructed under the new law, being thoroughly fire-proof. Main Auditorium on ground floor; thirty-six feet of exits to Broadway, thirty-six feet of exits to to Forty-first Street; twenty-five feet of exits to Seventh Avenue, besides passage running entire depth of building from Broadway to Seventh Avenue. The doors to all above referred exits open outwards by electricity. We have six different places in the theatre from which these doors can be controlled.

ALL SCENERY, Curtains and Draperies on the stage of this theatre have been made non-combustible by a system of fire-proofing which was approved by the Superintendent of Buildings, the Fire Commissioners and Chief Shay. No gas used except in case of emergency. Illuminated throughout by the electric light.

AN ASBESTOS CURTAIN is hung to cover entire proscenium opening, so that in case of fire on stage, it would be impossible to communicate to auditorium.

PARTICULAR ATTENTION has been paid to ventilation, the air being drawn from above the roof and circulated through air chambers by approved machinery placed under the orchestra and orchestra circle.

THE LOBBIES of this theatre are more than sufficiently large to contain the entire audience, allowing two and one-half feet for each person. The second balcony is entirely disconnected from the rest of building, having separate fire-proof staircases to Broadway, Forty-first Street and Seventh Avenue.

THE STAGE is equipped with Automatic Sprinkler System, which has been approved by the Fire Commissioners, Superintendent of Buildings, and the Board of Fire Underwriters. All seats twenty-two inches wide. Making the Broadway Theatre fire-proof, thoroughly comfortable, perfectly ventilated, the best constructed and safest theatre in the world.

Conductor (crowded car)—Plenty o' room inside. Passenger (one of forty hanging to strap)—Inside room, eh? Where is it? Conductor (wrathfully)—Alongside o' you, you selfish hunk o' humanity. Want ter keep that strap all ter yerself, don't yer?

The Fort Lee Institute of the Holy Angels is fortunate in having obtained the good will of Miss Lillian Russell, Miss Fanny Rice, Miss Hattie Leonard, Mr. Frederick Solomon and Mr. Will Harper, all of whom are among the artists announced to appear at a benefit concert in aid of the Institute, next Thursday afternoon in Chickering Hall. Miss Russell is down on the programme for "The Silver Line," one of her old time successes.

Miss De Toute (to messenger)—There is no answer to this note.

Patrick (a new importation)—You are a liar, mum; Misther Brown sez there wuz.

A washerwoman's work has but just begun when she is approaching the clothes.—Yonkers Gazette.

MY FIDDLE.

My fiddle? Well, I kind o'keep her handy
don't you know?
Though I ain't so much inclined to tromp
the strings and switch the bow
As I was hef. re the timber of my elbows got so dry,
And my fingers was more limber-like
and daperish and spry.
Yet I can plonk and plunk and plink,
And tune her up and play,
And jest lean back and laugh and wink
At every rainy day.

My playin's only middlin'—tunes I picked up when a boy—
The kind o' sort o' fiddlin' the folks call
corduroy:
"The old fat gal" and "Ryestraw" and
"My sailor's on the sea,"
Is the cowbillous that I saw when the
ch'ice is left to me.
And so I plunk and plonk and plink,
And rosum up my bow,
And play the tunes that make you think
The devil's in your toe.

That's how this dear old fiddle's won my
my heart's endurin' love!
From the strings across the middle to
to the screstchin' up above—
From her apern, over lvridge, and to the ribbon round the throat,
She's a wooin' cooin' pigeon, singin
"Love me" every note!
And so I jest her neck and plink
Her strings with lovin' hands,
And lis'nin close, I sometimes think
She kind o' understands!

AUTHOR'S NOTE.

There having been some curiosity expressed, and some mis-statements made, regarding the source from which "Castles in the Air" is derived the AUTHOR would state that the mother idea is to be found in a one act Intermezzo written by Miguel Cervantes Saavadra, the immortal author of Don Quixote. This slight farce only seven pages long (8 vo. Michel Levy, Paris, 1862) was written about 1later and was originally published in 1624. It is called LES DOS HABLADORES. Needless to say it was not of a musical nature and it's whole performance would not occupy more than fifteen minutes of time. MR. KERKER'S music is wholly original.

SPECIAL NOTICE.

SPECIAL ATTENTION is called to the safety of the Broadway Theatre, it being the only Theatre that stands alone and has exits on all four sides. The first Theatre constructed under the new law, being thoroughly fire-proof. Main Auditorium on ground floor; thirty-six feet of exits to Broadway, thirty-six feet of exits to to Forty-first Street; twenty-five feet of exits to Seventh Avenue, besides passage running entire depth of building from Broadway to Seventh Avenue. The doors to all above referred exits open outwards by electricity. There are six different places in the theatre from which these doors can be controlled.

ALL SCENERY, Curtains and Draperies on the stage of this theatre have been made non-combustible by a system of fire-proofing which was approved by the Superintendent of Buildings, the Fire Commissioners and Chief Shay. No gas used except in case of emergency. Illuminated throughout by the electric light.

AN ASBESTOS CURTAIN is used to cover entire proscenium opening, so that in case of fire on stage, it would be impossible to communicate to auditorium.

PARTICULAR ATTENTION has been paid to ventilation, the air being drawn from above the roof and circulated through air chambers by approved machinery placed under the orchestra and orchestra circle.

THE LOBBIES of this theatre are more than sufficiently large to contain the entire audience, allowing two and one-half feet for each person. The second balcony is entirely disconnected from balance of building, having separate fire-proof staircases to Broadway, Forty-first Street and Seventh Avenue.

THE STAGE is equipped with Automatic Sprinkler System, which has been approved by the Fire Commissioners, Superintendent of Buildings, and the Board of Fire Underwriters. All seats are Plenty of inches wide. Making the Broadway Theatre fire-proof, thoroughly comfortable, perfectly ventilated, the best constructed and safest theatre in the world.

Conductor (crowded car)—Plenty o' room inside. Passenger (one of forty hanging to straps)—Plenty room, eh? Where is it? Conductor (wrathfully)—Alongside o' you, you selfish hunk o' humanity. Want ter keep that strap all ter yerself, don'tyer?

The Fort Lee Institute of the Holy Angels is fortunate in having obtained the good will of Miss Lillian Russell, Miss Fanny Rice, Miss Hattie Leonard, Mr. Frederick Solomon and Mr. Will Harper, all of whom are among the artists announced to appear at a benefit concert in aid of the Institute, next Thursday afternoon in Chickering Hall. Miss Russell is down on the programme for "The Silver Line," one of her old time successes.

Miss De Toute (to messenger)—There is no answer to this note.

Patrick (a new importation)—You are a liar, mum; Misther Brown sez there wuz.

MY FIDDLE.

My fiddle? Well, I kind o'keep her handy
don't you know?
Though I ain't so much inclined to tromp
the strings and switch the bow
As I was before the timber of my elbows
got so dry,
And my fingers was more limber-like
and disperish and spry.
Yet I can plonk and plunk and plink,
And tune her up and play,
And jest lean back and laugh and wink
At every rainy day.

My playin's only middlin'—tunes I picked
up when a boy—
The kind o' sort o' fiddlin' the folks call
corduroy:
"The old fat gal" and "Ryestraw" and
"My sailor's on the sea,"
Is the convictions that I saw when the
ch'ice is left to me.
And so I plunk and plonk and plink,
And rosum up my bow,
And play the tunes that make you think
The devil's in your toe.

That's how this dear old fiddle's won my
my heart's endurin' love!
From the strings across the middle to
to the screstchin' up above—
From her apern, over bridge, and to the
ribbon round the throat,
She's a wooin' cooin' pigeon, singin
"Love me" every note!
And so I put her neck and chin
Her strings with lovin' hands,
And list'nin close, I sometimes think
She kind o' understands!

AUTHOR'S NOTE.

There having been some curiosity expressed, and some mis-statements made, regarding the source from which "Castles in the Air" is derived the AUTHOR would state that the mother idea is to be found in a one act Intermezzo written by Miguel Cervantes Saavadra, the immortal author of Don Quixote. This slight farce only seven pages long (8 vo. Michel Levy, Paris, 1865) was written about 1590 and was originally published in 1631. It is called LES DOS HABLADORES. Needless to say it was not of a musical nature and it's whole peformance would not occupy more than fifteen minutes of time. MR. KERKER'S music is wholly original.

SPECIAL NOTICE.

SPECIAL ATTENTION is called to the safety of the Broadway Theatre, it being the only Theatre that stands alone and has exits on all four sides. The first theatre constructed under the new law, being thoroughly fire-proof. Main Auditorium on ground floor; thirty-six feet of exits to Broadway, thirty-six feet of exits to to Forty-first Street; twenty-five feet of exits to Seventh Avenue, besides passage running entire depth of building from Broadway to Seventh Avenue. The doors to all above referred exits open outwards by electricity. There are six different places in the theatre from which these doors can be controlled.

ALL SCENERY, Curtains and Draperies on the stage of this theatre have been made non-combustible by a system of fire-proofing which was approved by the Superintendent of Buildings, the Fire Commissioners and Chief Shay. No gas used except in case of emergency. Illuminated throughout by the electric light.

AN ASBESTOS CURTAIN is hung to cover entire proscenium opening, so that in case of fire on stage, it would be impossible to communicate to auditorium.

PARTICULAR ATTENTION has been paid to ventilation, the air being drawn from above the roof and circulated through air chambers by approved machinery placed under the orchestra and orchestra circle.

THE LOBBIES of this theatre are more than sufficiently large to contain the entire audience, allowing two and one-half feet for each person. The second balcony is entirely disconnected from balance of building, having separate fire-proof staircases to Broadway, Forty-first Street and Seventh Avenue.

THE STAGE is equipped with Automatic Sprinkler System, which has been approved by the Fire Commissioners, Superintendent of Buildings, and the Board of Fire Underwriters. Area, 3,000 square inches wide. Making the Broadway Theatre fire-proof, thoroughly comfortable, perfectly ventilated, the best constructed and safest theatre in the world.

Conductor (crowded car)—Plenty o' room inside. Passenger (one of forty hanging to straps)—Plenty room, eh? Where is it? Conductor (wrathfully)—Alongside o' you, you selfish hunk o' humanity. Want ter keep that strap all ter yerself, don't yer?

The Fort Lee Institute of the Holy Angels is fortunate in having obtained the good will of Miss Lillian Russell, Miss Fanny Rice, Miss Hattie Leonard, Mr. Frederick Solomon and Mr. Will Harper, all of whom are among the artists announced to appear at a benefit concert in aid of the Institute here, Thursday afternoon in Chickering Hall. Miss Russell is down on the programme for "The Silver Line," one of her old time successes.

MY FIDDLE.

My fiddle? Well, I kind o'keep her handy
don't you know?
Though I ain't so much inclined to tromp
the strings and switch the bow
As I was before the timber of my elbows
got so dry,
And my fingers was more limber-like
and daperish and spry.
Yet I can pleh and plunk and plink,
And tune her up and play,
And jest lean back and laugh and wink
At every rainy day.

My playin's only middlin'—tunes I picked
up when a boy—
The kind o' sort o' fiddlin' the folks call
corduroy:
"The old fat gal" and "Ryestraw" and
"My sailor's on the sea,"
Is the cowtillions that I saw when the
ch'ice is left to me.
And so I plunk and plonk and plink,
And rosum up my bow,
And play the tunes that make you think
The devil's in your toe.

That's how this dear old fiddle's won my
my heart's endurin' love!
From the strings across the middle to
to the screetchin' up above—
From her apern, over bridge, and to the
ribbon round the throat,
She's a wooin' cooin' pigeon, singin
"Love me" every note!
And so I jest her neck and plink
Her strings with lovin' hands,
And list'nin clost, I sometimes think
She kind o' understands!

AUTHOR'S NOTE.

There having been some curiosity expressed, and some mis-statements made, regarding the source from which "Castles in the Air" is derived the AUTHOR would state that the mother idea is to be found in a one act Intermezzo written by Miguel Cervantes Saavadra, the immortal author of Don Quixote. This slight farce only seven pages long (8 vo. Michel Levy, Paris, 1862) was written about 1590 and was originally published in 1624. It is called LES DOS HABLADORES. Needless to say it was not of a musical nature and it's whole peformance would not occupy more than fifteen minutes of time. MR. KERKER'S music is wholly original.

And jest lean back and laugh and wink
At every rainy day.

My playin's only middlin'—tunes I picked
up when a boy—
The kind o' sort o' fiddlin' the folks call
corduroy;
"The old fat gal" and "Ryestraw" and
"My sailor's on the sea,"
Is the cowtillions that I saw when the chicken left to me.
And so I plunk and plonk and plink,
And rosum up my low,
And play the tunes that make you think
The devil's in your toe.

That's how this dear old fiddle's won my way beside endurin' love!
From the strings across the middle to
to the screetchin' up above—
From her sperm, over bridge, and to the
ribbon round the throat,
She's a-woolin' cooin' pigeon, singin
"Love me" every note!
And so I pat her neck and plink
Her strings with lovin' hands,
And list'ain clost, I sometimes think
She kind o' understands!

AUTHOR'S NOTE.
There having been some curiosity expressed, and some mis-statements made, regarding the source from which "Castles in the Air" is derived the AUTHOR would state that the mother idea is to be found in a one act Intermezzo written by Miguel Cervantes Saavadra, the immortal author of Don Quixote. This slight farce only seven pages long (8 vo. Michel Levy, Paris, 1862) was written about 1590 and was originally published in 1624. It is called LES DOS HABLADORES. Needless to say it was not of a musical nature and it's whole peformance would not occupy more than fifteen minutes of time. MR. KERKER'S music is wholly original.

FOR THE MEN IN THE BOX-OFFICE.

Those patient, gentle young men who always select the best seats in the house for you when you buy theatre tickets, have recently organized themselves into a mutual benefit association, called THE TREASURERS' CLUB OF AMERICA.

On the 20th of April next, a big benefit is to be given them by their brother professionals at the Broadway Theatre, for the purpose of creating a Sinking Fund to be drawn upon when any member becomes ill or requires assistance.

A number of prominent stage favorites have already offered their services and careful preparations are being made to give an entertainment equal to anything of a like nature that has ever been seen in New York.

It is a worthy cause and should be largely patronized not only by theatrical people, but also by the general public who owe so much to the politeness and geniality of the men in the box-office.

THE return to New York of the London Gaiety Company will be a welcome event to all who have sat under the engaging influence of this admirable organization, and in fact to all who are pleased with the lighter order of musical entertainment, and especially good burlesque on "Faust up to Date," on its first presentation to the metropolis, proved an excellently constructed and truly funny work. Naturally it needed to become warmed and assimilated to our locality, just as certain good wines require age to become more palatable by being affected by the temperature of the room in which they are to be enjoyed. Here and in the other large cities of the Union there has come the attrition and association which the quick appreciation of the principals of the felt and observed with the result of rounding off sharp corners and the insertion of many a catching line, situation or scene which this country has suggested. Every where the London Gaiety Company has met with unqualified success and its members return to New York with many new honors gained and friendships established to meet again and to be greeted by the host of friends made on the previous visit. If at all deserving of popularity with the American season, the London Gaiety Company is now assured of a warm welcome on the scene of increased excellence of its work. Miss Florence St. John is in admirable voice and is singing and acting better than ever. Miss Conyers, Miss Marie Jones, the four handsome daughters—Misses Lillian Prior, Florence Levey, Maude Wilmot and Edith Rayner, Miss Katie Barry—all will be pleasant faces once more. Mr. E. J. Lonnen has made a much to-be appreciated reputation in this country as a comedian who never oversteps the line of propriety, is no mere face-maker or "guyer" but a consistent conscientious, natural actor whose work far outranks, in finish and earnestness, what burlesque demands and ordinarily receives. Mr. Charles Danby, who has made himself for now two seasons a great favorite, Mr. E. Vowell, an excellent artist, the large, bright and pretty chorus all with excellent voice—in fact the "all together" may be considered worthy of the attention of all who wish the best of its kind and like the kind.

All the principals have new songs and Robt. Martin's successor to "Kilkhol" and "Innisworthy" entitled "Mullingar" will pass the record of its now famed predecessors after Mr. Lonnen has sung it a dozen evenings, and it becomes known.

Watchmaker (in Washington, D. C.): "Madam, your watch is magnetized."

The DeWolf Hopper Opera Bouffe Season.

On Monday, May 5th, one of the most important events that has as yet occured in the history of the Broadway Theatre will transpire. On that evening the inauguration of what promises to be the famous De Wolfe Hopper Opera Bouffe Company will take place. The new comedy opera entitled "Castles in the Air," which was written by Charles Alfred Byrne and the music by Gustave Kerker, will be presented by about as strong a cast of prominent comic opera people as has yet been brought together in this city. They comprise De Wolf Hopper, Marion Manola, Della Fox, Thos. Q. Seabrooke, Rose Leighton, Anna O'Keefe, Edmund Stanley, Elcia Crois, Fred Kline, Herbert Gresham, Lillie Fox and others. The music is said to be very catching and there is said to be no end of fun in the libretto. The production promises to be one of the most elaborate and costly that has been seen here as the scene is laid in the Island of Martinique it admits of the richest kind of stage settings and tropical scenery. The costumes will be all new, sumptuous and elegant and the entire mounting of the opera is likely to be a great credit to American artists, American managers, and American authors.

The sale of seats will commence on Monday, April 28th, and in the meantime those who have written or will write to the box office for reserved places, their letters will be filled, and the seats allotted to them without any favors according to the dates of the letters.

MY FIDDLE.

My fiddle? Well, I kind o'keep her handy
don't you know?
Though I ain't so much inclined to tromp
the strings and switch the bow
As I was to re the timber of my elbows
got so dry,
And my fingers was more limber-like
and dispe rish and spry.
Yet I can plonk and plunk and plink,
And tune her up and play,
And jest lean back and laugh and wink
At every rainy day.

My playin's only middlin'—times I pick'd up better,
The kind o' sort o' fiddlin' the folks call
cordurov:
"The old fat gal" and "Rvestraw" and
"My sailor's on the sea,"
Is the cowtillions I saw when the
And so I plunk and plonk and plink,
And re sum up my bow,
And play the tunes mv mudder-em think
The devil's in vor'eo.

Than? how this dear old fiddle's wen my
my heart's endurin' love!
From the strings across the middle to the screech-in' up above—
From her apern, over bridge, and to the
ribbon round the throat,
She's a woun' coolin' pigeon, singin
"Love me" every note!
And so I put her neck and plink
Her strings with my hands,
And lash'm close, I sometimes think
She kind o' understands!

FOR THE MEN IN THE BOX-OFFICE.

Those patient, gentle young men who always select the best seats in the house for you when you buy theatre tickets, have recently organized themselves into a mutual benefit association, called THE TREASURERS' CLUB OF AMERICA.

On the 30th of April next, a big benefit is to be given them by their brother professionals at the Broadway Theatre, for the purpose of creating a Sinking Fund to be drawn upon when any member becomes ill or requires assistance.

A number of prominent stage favorites have already offered their services and careful preparations are being made to give an entertainment equal to anything of a like nature that has ever been seen in New York.

It is a worthy cause and should be largely patronized not only by theatrical people, but also by the general public who owe so much to the politeness and gentility of the "men in the box-office."

Full return to New York of the London Gaiety Company will be a welcome event to all who have sat under the energizing influence of this admirable organization, and in fact to all who are pleased with the lighter order of musical comedy and burlesque, especially good burlesque. "First up to Date," on its first presentation to the metropolis, proved an exceptionally constructed and truly funny work. Naturally it needed to be somewhat watered as it assimilated to our locality, just as certain good wines improve and become more palatable by being effected by the temperature of the zone to which they are to be enjoyed. Here and in the other large cities of the Union there lies within the attrition and association which its quick appreciation of the principals of the bill and observe if "rough edges" or rounding off sharp corners and the insertion of many a catching line, allusion or scene which this country has suggested. Everywhere this London Gaiety Company has met with unqualified success and its members return to New York with many new honors gained and many friendships established to meet again and to be greeted by the same hearty welcome made on the previous visit. If at all deserving of popularity when beginning its American season, the London Gaiety Company is now assured of a warm welcome on the scene of increased excellence of its work. Miss Florence St. John is in admirable voice and is singing and acting better than ever. Miss Conyers, Miss Maria Jones, the four handsome dancers—Misses Lillian Price, Florence Levey, Maude Vilmot and Edith Rayner, also Katie Barry—all will be favorites to see once more. Mr. E. J. Lonnen has made a much-to-be-appreciated impression in this country as a comedian who never overstepps the line of propriety, is no mere face-maker or "grinner" but a consistent conscientious actor, some of whose work far outranks, in finish and expressiveness, what burlesque demands and ordinarily receives. Mr. Chas. Danby, who has made himself for many seasons a great favorite; Mr. E. Vincotti, an excellent artist; the large, bright and pretty chorus all with excellent voice—in fact the "all together" may be considered worthy of the attention of all who wish the best of its kind and like the kind.

All the principals have new songs and Rose Martin's successor to "Killaloe" and "Imniscorthy" entitled "Mullingar" will pass the record of its well famed predecessors after Mr. Lonnen has sung it a dozen evenings, and it becomes known.

Watchmaker (in Washington, D. C.): "Madam, your watch is magnetized."

Customer: "Magnetized! Why, I have not been near a dynamo, magnet, electric motor, electric car or anything else. I am employed in the office of the Secretary of State."

Watchmaker: "Ahem! Exactly. Mr. Blain has long been known as a very magnetic man.

The DeWolf Hopper Opera Bouffe Season.

On Monday, March 24, one of the most important events that has as yet occured in the history of the Broadway Theatre will transpire. On that evening the inauguration of what promises to be the famous De Wolfe Hopper Opera Bouffe Company will take place. The new comedy opera entitled "Castles in the Air," which was written by Charles Alfred Byrne and the music by Gustave Kerker, will be presented by about as strong a cast of prominent comic opera people as has yet been brought together in this city. They comprise De Wolf Hopper, Marian Manola, Della Fox, Thos. Q. Seabrooke, Rose Leighton, Anna O'Keefe, Edmund Stanley, Elvia Croix, Alfred Klein, Herbert Cripps, Lillie Fox and others. The music is said to be very catching and there is said to be no end of fun in the libretto. The production promises to be one of the most elaborate and costly that has been seen here as the scene is laid in the Island of Martinique it admits of the richest kind of stage settings and tropical scenery. The costumes will be all new, sumptuous and elegant and the entire mounting of the opera is likely to be a great credit to American artists, American managers, and American authors.

The sale of seats will commence on Monday, April 21st, and in the meantime those who have written or will write to the box office for reserved places, their letters will be filed, and the seats allotted to them without any favors according to the dates of the letters.

MY FIDDLE.

My fiddle! Well, I don't keep her handy
don't you know?
Though I ain't so much inclined to tromp the strings and switch the bow
As to hear or fix the fender of my elbows got so dry,
And my fingers was mere flinder-like and lips red and spry.

Yet I can play a tune right plunk and plink,
And tune her up and play,
And jest lean back and laugh and wink
At every rainy day.

My playin's only middlin'—times I pick it up with a key
Fine kind o' fort o' fiddlin' the folks call corduroy:
"The old fat gal" and "Hvestaw" and "My sailor's on the sea,"
Is the co'dinl'uns that I saw when the chice is left to me.

And so I plunk and plink and plunk,
And roam up my bow,
And play the tunes that make you think
The devil's in your toe.

That's how this dear old fiddle's won my heart's endurin' love!
From the strings across the middle to the scraschin' up above—
From her apern, over fringe, and to the ribbon round the throat,
She's a woon' coin' pigeon, singin
"Love me" every note!

And so I put her neck and plink
Her strings with loven hands,
And list'nin close, I sometimes think
She kind o' understands!

BROADWAY THEATRE

HANDSOMEST AND SAFEST THEATRE IN THE WORLD

FRANK W. SANGER, MANAGER

BROADWAY COR. 41st STREET.

J. T. COWDERY, Publisher, 1398 Broadway.

FOR WEEK ENDING, OCTOBER 12th, 1889.

J. T. COWDERY, Publisher, 1398 Broadway.

SPECIAL NOTICE.

SPECIAL ATTENTION is called to the safety of the Broadway Theatre, it being the only Theatre that stands alone and has exits on all four sides. The first theatre constructed under the new law, being thoroughly fire-proof. Main Auditorium on ground floor; thirty-six feet of exits to Broadway, thirty-six feet of exits to Forty-first Street; twenty-five feet of exits to Seventh Avenue, besides passage running entire depth of building from Broadway to Seventh Avenue. The doors to all above referred exits open outwards by electricity. There are six different places in the theatre from which these doors can be controlled.

ASBESTOS CURTAIN and Draperies on the stage of this theatre have been made non-combustible by a system of fire-proofing which was approved by the Superintendent of Buildings, the Fire Commissioners and Chief Shay. No gas used except in case of emergency. Illuminated throughout by the electric light.

ASBESTOS CURTAIN is hung to cover entire proscenium opening, so that in case of fire on stage, it would be impossible to communicate to auditorium.

PARTICULAR ATTENTION has been paid to ventilation, the air being drawn from above the roof and circulated through air chambers by approved machinery placed under the orchestra and orchestra circle.

THE LOBBIES of this theatre are more than sufficiently large to contain the entire audience, allowing two and one-half feet for each person. The second balcony is entirely disconnected from balance of building, having separate fire-proof staircases to Broadway, Forty-first Street and Seventh Avenue.

THE STAGE is equipped with Automatic Sprinkler System, which has been approved by the Fire Commissioners, Superintendent of Buildings, and the Board of Fire Underwriters. All seats twenty-two inches wide. Making the Broadway Theatre practically fire-proof, thoroughly comfortable, perefectly ventilated, the best constructed and safest theatre in the world.

"DUKE'S BEST" CIGARETTES.

HAVE TO SAY.

By supplying the consumer with a better cigarette than any other manufacturer, we have within six years, established a larger sale than any other house in the civilized world.

We made and sold during the last fiscal year, which amount very nearly equals the product of our two largest competitors, or in round numbers, we sell about 40 per cent. of all the American cigarettes used.

823 MILLION CIGARETTES

We are so highly elated at the position we have attained and the success with which we have met, as a result of giving better goods than our competitors, that we now offer to the public our "DUKE'S BEST" cigarette at the standard price, notwithstanding the fact that they are the finest goods that can be produced regardless of cost.

Grand Instrumental & Vocal Concert
AND ELITE SOCIABLES,
NIGHTLY.

Holiday week is upon us, and the practice of recognizing Christmas as a day of general festivity has become universal among the American people. Not the millionaire alone, but the humblest artizan opens his heart and purse alike in honor of the old German saint, Nicholas, and thousands of faces, both of young and old, are made beautiful and thousands of hearts joyful by the receipt of some testimonial of love and affection from friends near and absent.

The management of the Buckingham Palace, recognizing the fact that Christmas is upon us, have determined to regale their patrons and the public in general with something entirely new to this Temple of Terpsichore. It is their purpose, we understand, during the holiday season, in addition to their elite sociables nightly, to offer a Grand Musical Entertainment, both Vocal and Instrumental. With their usual liberality, and in accordance with the spirit they have at all times evinced to spare no expense or trouble to cater to the tastes of their patrons, they have secured, we are informed, a combination of some of the finest vocal talent in our country.

The musical direction will continue under the charge of Mr. MITTHAUER, whose reputation is now so well established in the musical world that it would be superfluous for us to add further encomiums.

On NEW YEAR'S NIGHT, JAN. 1st, 1881, a GRAND FULL DRESS RECEPTION is announced; the occasion is one in which the management will make special effort to commemorate not only the day itself, but to leave a pleasing remembrance in the minds of all the participants. The halls will be becomingly decorated with evergreen emblems appropriate to the season.

We hope that all the readers of our little journal may enjoy themselves on this occasion, and live many winters to remember it, and wish them in all sincerity, not only "A MERRY CHRISTMAS AND A HAPPY NEW YEAR," but many of them.

PREREQUISITES OF SUCCESS.

Integrity of character and truth are the prerequisites of success in any calling, and especially so in that of the merchant. These are the attributes which never fail to command respect and win admiration. No one fails to appreciate them, and if they "do not pay," in the vulgar sense of the phrase, they bring an amount of satisfaction and peace to the owner that all the wealth of Crœsus could not yield. There is not better stock in trade than those principles; no capital goes so far or pays so well, or is so exempt from bankruptcy or loss. When known, they give credit and confidence, and in the hardest of times will honor your paper in bank. They will give you an unlimited capital to do business upon, and everybody will indorse your paper, and the general faith of mankind will be your guaranty that you do not fail.

Let every young man, upon commencing business, look well to these indispensable elements of success, and defend them as he would the apple of his eye. If instinctive and reckless here, he will imperil everything. Bankruptcy in character is seldom repaired in an ordinary lifetime. A man may suffer in reputation and recover; not so the man who suffers in character.

Be just and truthful. Let these be the ruling and predominating principles of your life, and reward will be certain, either in the happiness they bring to your own bosom, or the success which will attend upon all your business operations in life, or both.

A GREAT APPLE ORCHARD.

The Farmer's Review publishes a detailed account of the orchard of A. B. Whitney, of Illinois, who has one hundred and fifty-five acres in apple trees. He set the first four hundred trees in 1845, and now has sixteen thousand in bearing. He began with one hundred and forty-four sorts, though only thirty are left, his object being to test them. For summer and autumn, he chooses Red Astrachan, Maiden's Blush, Snow and Bailey's sweet, and for winter and spring, Dominie, Jonathan, Willow Twig, Ben Davis and Winesap. His largest crop, in 1876, was twenty-six thousand bushels, one half of which was shipped to market, and the other half made into cider. He does not count on a full or heavy crop oftener than once in four years. For the coding moth he turns sheep into the orchard, by which these insects are nearly cleared out. The soil of the orchard is rich enough without manure. Mr. Whitney advises for an orchard that it slope to the north, cultivation with corn for a few years, than seeding to clover, to be plowed under every three or four years.

NO BUSINESS OUT THERE.

Somewhere between Leadville and Gunnison City wanders a Detroiter, who is penniless, ragged, hungry and discouraged. Four weeks ago he met a Michigan man out there and sent his love to all inquiring friends at home, and also explained why he was in that hard-up condition. He was too honest and too particular for that country. He reached Gunnison City without a dollar in his pocket, but with lots of ambition in his soul, and soon met a man who explained:

"I can give you the softest kind of a snap at four dollars a day. I want you to run one of my faro tables."

"But I don't know the game."

"You don't say, stranger? You must have had a queer bringing up. Out here, and don't know faro! Pass out! No time to bother with you."

The second man applied to for a situation squinted his eyes and took a long look at the Detroiter, and quietly asked:

"What from?"

"Detroit."

"No use. That's too far East. My pard ran off with the company funds last night, and I calkerlated on payin' somebody about a hundred dollars to overtake him and bring me back his skulp. You'd look sweet takin' his trail, you would! You'd better inquire on the next corner."

On the next corner was the site of a saloon about to be opened. The proprietor was a six-footer with a revolver on each hip, and in response to the inquiry he said:

"I 'spose you know how to pour whisky and sling dust?"

"Yes."

"Suppose that one of the tough cuss comes in after his nip and refuses to hand over?"

"I'll call the police."

"Police be hanged. Every man's his own policeman out here. You must open on him with a shooter, and keep pulling the trigger until he falls. The site's open at $3 a day and found."

"I—I guess I won't take it."

"Then git. No place for milksops around here. Might a known you hadn't any nerve by lookin' at ye."

The Detroiter made one more effort. This time it was a man who explained:

"Glad to see you—sot down a bit. Yes see, there's bad blood between me an' a feller called Sandy Tom. We've agreed to drop each other on sight, and we mean business. I want to get the bulge on him, and bein' you're a stranger you can help me. Put this Derringer in your pocket and go and shoot Sandy Tom and I've got $200 for ye."

"Why, that would be murder."

"What of it? Do you expect to hang out around here over a day without doin' suthin' choosin'? What was ye raised?"

"In Detroit."

"Git! You haven't any spinal column! You'd better run home to your ma, you bad! Out ye go—so long."—Detroit Free Press.

"Are you a good rider?" asked the livery man. "I am," replied the customer, and just then the horse snorted, stood on its hands, came down and bucked, and the customer went on, from his high seat in the hay-mow, "see how easily I get off."

A thief was caught in a man's granary. "You wouldn't look a man up for practising as a chiropodist, would you?" said he. "I was only removing corns." Then they sent for the man who made this paragraph and put him in the same cell.—Syracuse Times.

RULES OF THE HOUSE.

At an Oil City hotel boards a father and son. The latter has been in the habit of staying out later than his father liked, and one day the latter said:

"My son, the rule of this room hereafter is, that every person must be in before ten o'clock, or else remain outside."

"Yes, sir," replied the obedient son.

A night or two afterwards the father was detained by his business until nearly eleven o'clock, and on reaching his room found the inside bolt drawn. He knocked and was soon answered with, "Who's there?"

"Your father; get up and let me in."

"See here, the rule of this room is that every person must be in before ten o'clock, or stay outside. Now don't make any more disturbance about here."

The father slept in another room that night.

NOT FOR JOE.

Joseph was a scoffer and a "bad lot" generally. Meeting an officer of the American Bible Society, he chucklingly asked:

"You give out a good many Bibles in the course of a year?" The officer said, "Yes, very many." "And what do you suppose become of them?" They fall into the hands of those that need them, I donbt not." "Well," said Joseph, producing a book with the look of one who would say, "Now I've got you"—"where do you suppose I got that?" The man of Bibles couldn't say. "Got it in a rum shop. You gave it to a sailor, and he sold it for a glass of rum. "Well," said the other, "I am glad it has fallen into your hands, Joseph. I don't know any one who needs it more." Joseph doesn't know as he made much of a point after all.—Boston Transcript.

WISDOM FOR BOYS.

Do you wish to make your mark in the world? Do you wish to be men? Then observe the following rules:

Hold integrity sacred.
Observe good manners.
Endure trials patiently.
Be prompt in all things.
Make few acquaintances.
Yield not to discouragements.
Dare to do right; fear to do wrong.
Watch carefully over your passions.
Fight life's battle bravely, manfully.
Consider well, then decide positively.
Sacrifice money rather than principle.
Use all your leisure time for improvement.
Attend carefully to the details of your business.

"All during the summer, while it was hot, you came up the stairs, and now it is cool, you use the elevator. How is that?" "The Chicago Miniature Piano Company" was the name of a concern advertising a new instrument on which any one could play at sight, for sale at one dollar apiece. A rural youth of Winston, North Carolina, sent on a dollar and received the following instructions for making the aforesaid piano: "Take a flour barrel—any old one will do—put as many cats into it as it will hold. Leave a slit in the side the length of the barrel. A pointed stick moved along in the slit is sure to produce all the tone desired, since most of the cats will answer to the prodding. A child can play on it."

A SUPERB PIANO.

There is no piano manufactured that is so universally commended by expert performers, and so admired by the rank and file of players, as the SOHMER. It is not a cheap piano, built merely for selling; but considering its countless points of superiority, its matchless purity and richness of tone, and the marvelous beauty of the instrument, it is the cheapest piano anywhere manufactured. It is practically unrivalled.

From The Christian Nation.

STECK for nearly half a century has been a magic name in the music world. It has an international reputation as an honestly made piano of the highest artistic rank, and justly earned the appropriate title of the "ONLY RELIABLE." The STECK PIANOS are preferred in schools and institutions, where they are subject to hard use, because of their fine, sympathetic tone, quality and absolute durability. For the same reason, no better instrument can be selected for home use.

Messrs. Steinway & Sons,

Dear Sirs:

I desire to express to you my thanks for the magnificent concert grands which you have placed at my disposal for my recent concerts in Mannheim and Munich. After a fair and impartial test I have no hesitation in adding my name to the long and illustrious list of admirers of the Steinway pianoforte, and I take great pleasure in assuring you that in my opinion no other pianoforte made in America or in Europe can approach your noble production in any of the essential features which endear it to the artist and public alike.

Would you be so very kind as to furnish me with your pianofortes for my approaching concerts in England and Russia, to enable me to achieve the highest possible artistic results?

To say the truth, ten or fifteen years ago I was not so enthusiastic in my approval of your pianofortes, but I had the opportunity of trying one of your splendid new grands in a concert at Helsingfors last winter, and from that moment I became your greatest admirer. Either you have made astonishing improvements or it was my former bad taste; anyway, your pianoforte is now in my eyes the ideal production of our age. Hoping that you will be able to comply with my wish, and again thanking you, I am,

Yours faithfully,

Eugen d'Albert.

A RICHARD WAGNER MONUMENT.

During the past summer an exhibition was held in the Kleistsaal, Berlin, in the benefit of a fund to erect a monument in the Siegfried memory of Richard Wagner. The exhibition was held under the auspices of Princess Charlotte of Prussia, and was especially devoted to music and musical instruments. Besides a large collection of Wagner relics, consisting of manuscripts, autograph letters, portraits, etc., there was an exhibit of modern musical instruments, and prizes were awarded to pianos of eminent manufacture. The only piano entered upon an American manufacturer was the diploma and gold medal of the first class awarded to the Jesse & Haines piano. Of course, the diploma states, as their superior quality of tone and great variety of musical effects." Truly a gratifying honor from such a source.

Taxpayer (to artist friend) You say you are looking for a still life subject?

Artist: Yes.

Well, why don't you paint the progress made on the New York aqueduct?

That's to slow.

Darringer, have you a half dollar that you don't want?

Why certainly. Here it is.

The next day.

Say, Darringer, that half dollar you gave me was a counterfeit.

Yes, Bromley. You asked me if I had a half dollar that I didn't want.

On the steamer, oh, my darling!
When the fog-horns screech and blow,
And you hear the gentle stewar'
Softly come and softly go—
When the passengers are groaning
With a great and nameless woe,
Don't you think 'twere better, darling,
You and I should go below?

In the cabin, oh, my darling,
Think not bitterly of me,
Though I rushed away and left you
In the middle of our tea;
I was filled with sudden longing
To gaze upon the deep blue sea;
It was best to leave you then dear—
Best for you and best for me.

Scene in the office of M. Pasteur.

Sufferer: Doctor I have come to consult you as a last resort. Can you do anything to relieve me from the consequences of these wounds?

Doctor: Those are the little worst dog-bites I ever saw.

Doctor, those are not dog-bites; they are Jersey mosquito-bites.

My dear sir, I can do nothing for you. Next!

Customer (in restaurant): A broiled spring chicken, waiter, and a small bottle, vintage '74.

Waiter: Yes, sir. (Later) Find everything right, sir?

Customer: No, you've made a mistake. You've brought me spring wine and a '74 vintage chicken.

ARGUMENT.

The Princess Etelka, daughter of King Tekeli of Hungary, kidnapped in her infancy by the Emperor of Austria, has been brought up as his ward. The Emperor desires that Etelka shall marry De Rosen, nephew of the Margrave of Rohrbach. A mutual affection exists however between Etelka and the Hungarian patriot Rakoczy, who considers that Etelka's identity is searching for the rightful Queen to return her to the throne. The Emperor's plan is equally distasteful to Etelka and De Rosen, the latter being in love with Nadjy, a promiere-danseuse at the opera.

The Margrave of Rohrnbhurdorff as an adjustment to De Rosen, agrees to pay his nephews debts upon his marriage with Etelka. The law of Austria provides that in the event of a forced marriage, the contracting parties may annul the marriage by mutual consent within 24 hours after the ceremony. Rakoczy, in search of his Queen, arrives at the Chateau of Rohrnbhurdorff disguised as a Gypsy, accompanied by his faithful follower Faragas.—during a fete given by De Rosen in honor of Nadjy, and at about the time of Etelka's betrothal—endeavoring to cause the marriage of De Rosen and Etelka. Rakoczy made known by Faragas to the betrothed lovers, De Rosen reluctantly agrees to it, and after the wedding sets off his follower Faragas to the newly wedded couple. Faragas encounters his wife Angelia, formerly the nurse of Etelka, and who disappearing simultaneously with the infant princess, is opposed by Faragas to have deserted him, he accuses his wife of having made away with the Queen, but she informs him that the Queen is at that moment within the walls of the Chateau. Overjoyed at the good news Faragas indulges too freely in wine, and encounters Bobrumkorff, whom in the garb of a Hungarian soldier which he has assumed in order to keep an appointment with Nadjy, who does not know that on the side of De Rosen Faragas watches for a spy, set by Rakoczy to watch him. Faragas unbosoms himself to Bobrumkorff, who, decides to circumvent the plans of Etelka and Rakoczy by the aid of the Austrian guards. Rakoczy and Etelka overhear the conversation of Faragas and Bobrumkorff, and Rakoczy urges Etelka to obtain De Rosen's written renunciation of marriage. The latter however declines to give, as he has become infatuated with Etelka; Nadjy overhears his vows and upbraids him. Bobrumkorff arrives with the Austrian guards to arrest Rakoczy, but is not by the latter at the head of a body of Hungarian students. The students are victorious and Rakoczy escapes with Etelka, taking De Rosen prisoner. Incensed at the escape of Etelka, the Emperor appoints Bobrumkorff the Governor of Pesth, a dissagreeable post of some danger. Bobrumkorff brings with him a company of ballet and a troupe of ballet dancers, who in the guise of Kosleres [illegible] he has instructed to strew his path with flowers. Rakoczy and Etelka enter the city disguised as Austrian officers and meet Faragas who is masquerading as the burgomayor of Pesth. Rakoczy leaves Etelka in the care of Faragas and returns to his troops to prepare for an attack upon the city. De Rosen who has escaped from the Hungarians, informs his uncle of the presence of Etelka, and they arrange to capture her. She is taken before Bobrumkorff, who is about to convict her, when a signal cannon shot is heard, announcing the victory of Rakoczy over the Austrian forces. Rakoczy entering the city a victor at the head of his troops, claims Etelka as his bride, and De Rosen finding his efforts to win Etelka's love are vain, signs the renunciation of his marriage to her, and Nadjy accepts him as her husband. The people hail Etelka as their Queen; Faragas is reconciled to his long lost wife Angelia, and Bobrumkorff is left to make his peace with the Emperor as best he may.

A TRIBUTE TO B. M. WALTERS.

MR. B. M. WALTERS, Manufacturer of the Nat-vesen Pianoe, at 67 and 69 University Place, New York, has received a well-deserved compliment in the action of the Committee on School Furniture, who have advised the Board of Education of this city to select the Nat-vesen for the sixteen new square Pianoe required in our Public Schools. The Pupils and Schools as well as Mr. Walters should be congratulated on the choice made.—Home Journal, July 30, 1884.

Applicant. Not exactly sir, but—
Can you run a soda-fountain?
Not very well, sir, but I can learn.
No. I guess you won't do. I might let you practise putting up prescriptions, but I can't afford to risk an inexperienced hand at the soda fountain.

Tommy, said his penurious uncle, how would you feel if I were to give you a nickel?
Why, replied Tommy, that I would feel a little faint at first.

In the Midsummer number of Puck there is a handsome picture descriptive of the present condition of affairs in the political world, and also showing in the most striking manner, that although the politicians are fighting amongst themselves, yet the winning ticket for 1888 in the musical world is the Sohmer piano.

In the front of the picture is Columbia, being most courteously received by Mr. Hugo Sohmer who desires to present to her the "Sohmer" piano. By the side of Mr. Sohmer in a group are Josef Kuler on the left; Mr. Charles Fahr in the centre and Mr. George Reichmann at the right of Columbia over the recognition of the instrument's merits on the part of Columbia representing the people of the United States. Above this is a banner waving the words "Sohmer & Co." In the background one sees the Capitol with masses of struggling politicians surrounding Cleveland, Thurman, Harrison and Morton.

But in one thing they all agree, that is the high position and standing of the celebrated Sohmer piano.

Rudolph Aronson's charming Dance Music, can be obtained at all music stores.

BALD AND TOOTHLESS.

The "coming man," as well as the "going man," has always been bald and toothless. An enviable condition compared to that of our correspondent, Q. Clapp, of Fountville, Cal. who says: "Thank God that I heard of Dr. Tutt's Pills; they have been a great boon to me. That man had dyspepsia for 20 years, tried in vain four hospitals, and numberless doctors. These pills act with gentleness and thoroughness, and cure costiveness, deranged liver, and dyspepsia.

REACHED THE LIMIT.

A Detroit peddler of tinware took out some egg-beaters on his last trip, and as the price was only fifteen cents each, and they worked on a new principle, he calculated on big sales. His first experience will answer for all others. He drove up to a farm-house in the western part of Wayne county, and took a beater into exhibit. The people liked it exceedingly well, but the old farmer said:

Young man, want to see your patent.

I have none.

Then your written authority to make sales.

Don't need any.

Then you must give me a bond, with two sureties, in the sum of $1,000, that you will stand between me and any trouble.

But I can't do that.

Then I can't buy. I've just had to pay royalty on a drive well, damages for using an infringement on a patent gate, and have a lawsuit about a hay-fork and another over a windmill, and we don't even buy a dishpan without a bond that it don't infringe on somebody's patent! Dublin Free Press.

WESTERN HUMOR.

The Pittsburgh Chronicle's Funny Man says: "A tragedian's debut is usually a kind of a 'first-class' Art—R. Bilcliff, late of Alhambra Theatre, London, England, said recently: 'I have travelled in various countries and tried all kinds of medicine for torpid liver and constipation; Dr. Tutt's Liver Pills gave me more relief than all others combined.' THE MARQUIS.

ARGUMENT.

Mar, Marie and Marion, respectively met in a stage coach en route to Paris. The peculiar similarity of their names awaken a mutual interest, and when about to separate upon their arrival in Paris, they agree to meet again five years later at the same place. At the end of the interval agreed upon, Marion having inherited a fortune, becomes the la[illegible] Marquise de Nore, disguised as a soldier of the horse-guards whose regiment is stationed in the vicinity of the "Cadran Bleu." Mar in the meantime has attracted the attention of King Louis XV, who has bestowed upon her the title of Countess du Barry. Marie has become a famous ballet dancer, and through the influence of her fiancee Prince de Soubise, occupies under the name of Lachuinel, the position of premiere danseuse at the Royal Opera House. LaGuinard and the Countess du Barry disguised as peasants to fulfill a mutual compact, go to meet Marion at the "Cadran Bleu," arriving in time to frustrate the suicidal attempt of Bricket, Marion's chief cook, who is madly in love with her. They agree to aid each other in the approaching wedding ceremony, but a message is received announcing that LaLlamee has been unable to obtain the consent of his Colonel to the marriage and his wedding is therefore postponed by reason of the joy of Bricket and the disgust of everyone else. The arrival of the classes of Lachuinel and the Countess du Barry betrays their identity to the villagers and the act closes with the festivities attending the departure of the two famous ladies.

The second act discloses the hair of LaGuinard who confesses to her companions a flirtation with the Marquis de Nore who of course is none other than La Ramee the betrothed of Marion. The Marquis visits La Guinard to her surprise and is informed by Mariaton who recognizes in him her betrothed. The Marquis determined to be La Ramee during that Marion's acquaintance, is a case of mi-taken identity. In the meantime the King having heard of the visit of the Countess du Barry to the cadran bleu, sacrifices it to her love for the mysterious La Ramee, and the position of the Countess du Barry is therefore trembling in the scale. The three women betrayed and injured by this same Don Juan, determine to be avenged upon him, and from that time forward a working scheme for each, for him to marry Marion. This he does but under his own name of the Marquis de Nore. The betrothal and wedding of France at that time, is made to take the ceremony for a penalty marriage and attacks the Marquis de Nore for which offense he is arrested by the Bailiff.

The scene of the third act is Trianon, the residence of the Countess du Barry, near Versailles. Bricket, who has enlisted as a soldier in the horse guards, is placed on guard by the sergeant, LaGuinard, but leaves his post to meet Marion. He learns from her that she still loves him, and will become his wife. Bricket is advised by Mariaton to feign sickness in order to get his discharge. Rose du Barry intercedes for him and secures his pardon. The King having been informed of the love-making of the Marquis de Nore, under the name of LaLlamee, commands him to marry Marion, but through the influence of Prince de Soubise, newly qualify gives his consent to the marriage of Soubise and Marie, reserving the Countess du Barry, permits Marion to marry Bricket, and sends the Marquis de Nore to the front.

Within a few days there will appear a book of Fairy Tales called Dreamland, written by the well-known journalist, Charles Alfred Byrne. It will be composed of thirty original stories, illustrated with one hundred and fifty engravings by the celebrated artist and designer Alfred Thompson. With a view to a large circulation, the publishers will issue two different editions of the book, one at 50 cents, in paper, and the other at $1.25, in linen. The orders are already so large for the book that a first edition of 20,000 will be issued, with the anticipation of another just as large for Christmas.

The best cure of absent-mindedness of which we have heard was that of a professor. While he was crossing a street a watering cart let its hose loose upon him. The prof near quietly raised his umbrella and walked two streets before he discovered that the sun was shining brightly.

MR. PARR, of Messrs. Sohmer & Co., informed our representative that the demand for the "Sohmer" Piance is an extraordinary one, and that many of our best musicians are now purchasing them for their own use.

DR. LOVELAND'S "COMPLEXION" is interesting to ladies who blush, for our first lady naturally loves purity; perhaps that is the reason that it is so extensively used. Beauty, Washington, advised sending for a package of the snowy, pure and delightful new dentifrice, which is highly commended by Mrs. Gen. Logan's maid, Dr. Carroll, and Prof. J. Morrson, of the National University.

To make a long story short, as all stories are now, we are delighted convinced that it simply and perfectly fulfils its mission, "its a consummation devoutly to be wished," as Hamlet says, but seldom accomplished.

Intolerable damage has been wrought by common powders washes and pastes, which frequently destroy the teeth on account of the acids, alkalies and other destructive articles in many "make-up."

Common powders are at best calculated to provoke the need of the services of the dentist, but their free filtration on the gums, and absorption of their baleful influence by the mucous membrane of the mouth, are simply appalling.

Somerset, the new cream dentifrice, prepared by Johnson & Johnson, relieves the gums of all the objections urged of the former dentifrices so Thoroughly tested by chemists and dentists, it has been pronounced practically safe and scientific in all its applications. It forms by an unctuous cream, and as to the most pungent delightful and refined dentifrices ever known to the world.

Somerset is perfection.

There is nothing like it.

Mr. Lester Wallack says of Somerset: "It is the finest dentifrice I ever used." Marshall P. Wilder, the clever humorist, writes: "I should say that Somerset is perfection."

SOLD BY ALL DRUGGISTS, 35 cts.

REDFERN'S is making a sporting gown of dark blue serge with a short shaped collar, and the skirt is cut in a New York jacket, with the flat pleats front and back, falling to the edge of the same material. The front drapery is cut in a long tablier shape, very full just round the legs. Four long narrow pleats form an arch effect round the front edge, while the back and the right are simply but exactly draped. This drapery is box pleated throughout with some seven or eight rows of stitching. The hat is of both to correspond, lined prettily with velvet.

"ERMINIE."

ARGUMENT.

What story the opera of Erminie possesses is of so simple a nature, that the most wrastful of audiences could not be misled by its guilelessness. Nothing in short but a traditional custom of the Theatre renders an Argument necessary, and if I can send in a remark unseen by the Manager, it will be that I should like to abolish argument and custom both.

The principal male characters, Ravannes and Cadeau will be immediately recognized, and it is believed the public, who are as fond of old friends as old jokes, will welcome them accordingly. It has been thought proper for the purposes of this piece, to re-christen them, but a marked resemblance will easily be discovered between the honored Mascaire and Jacquies Strop.

Not to cast them altogether amongst strangers, it was deemed advisable to give them the accompanying support of a landlord and waiter. Here all likeness to the drama ceases, and with the reminder that there is nothing new under the sun, the plot is believed to be more or less original. The action of the piece takes place in twenty (It was thought more than twenty-four hours of any light opera would become tedious.) In a birthday, that of Erminie, in compliment to whom, being the scene of the play, the date was fixed, who arrives in the village Pouvert with her father, the Duke Chaudenay. The meeting of a country fair, but the Marquis is expecting a certain Vicomte de Breuzy, to whom in deference to dramatic exigencies he has betrothed his daughter, and which supposed union he now for the first time announces, to the annoyance of Erminie, who is in love with it. Her details will disclose themselves as the action proceeds.

On the appearance of Robert M. Ravannes and his partner Jacques Strop, the audience, from what they say and no secrets, learn they have stopped and robbed a young Englishman, and being an American audience, I shall guess, it is the expected bridegroom, who is the youngest brother of the Vicomte, originally intended for the honor of an alliance with the Pouverts, until from the author found it necessary to kill, but his successor to bride and title might be meritorious to the extent that Erminie Ravennes to assume his character and position, a climax it is needless to relate he does not neglect, by his effrontery effecting the arrival of the real Viscount as a mendicant.

The further adventures of the swell nobleman and his two companions, with the pretty damsel Pouvert, shall be left to the observant auditors, in the hope they may discover some pleasing surprises, of which a better knowledge of the plot might deprive them, the author reserving this humanely weak argument with the consolation that there is something with which his piece must bear unfavorable comparison.

HARRY EASTON.

A TRIBUTE TO R. M. WALTERS.

MR. R. M. WALTERS, Manufacturer of the Waterson Pianos, at 57 and 59 University Place, New York, has received a well-deserved compliment in the action of the Committee on School Furniture, who have advised the Board of Education of this city to select the Narvesen for the sixteen new Upright Pianos required to our Public Schools. The Pupils and Schools as well as Mr. Walters should be congratulated on this choice made.—Home Journal, July 30, 1884.

IS THE BEST

BECAUSE

1st—It is the only Corset ever made that will reduce the size and increase the length of the waist of Fleshy Ladies without high and tight lacing.

2d—It is the best Spinal Supporter ever made, and it supports equally as well the abdomen and all other parts of the body.

3d—It is Proof against Perspiration and Moisture, and will neither corrode nor soil underwear, it neither splotches nor hooks at the waist and the bones never drove or come out in wear.

4th It never changes its form, always retaining its original shape; it is invaluable to young ladies, because it removes and prevents stooping and round shoulders.

THIS CORSET can be found in all first-class stores which will guarantee all the above.

Both man or one think of love's sweet dream,
I often do, don't you?

Oh there's within a cozy home
That is the spot of pleasure and rest,
Where love and joy and sweet spell
Is blended to be greet.
I like to see a pretty place
Where style and taste is true,
And rest awhile, from care and toil:
I love it, you, don't you?

MR. FAHR, of Messrs. Sohmer & Co., informed our representative that the demand for the "Sohmer" Pianos is an extraordinary one, and that many of our best musicians are now purchasing them for their own use.

R. M. WALTERS, of University Place, cor. 12th St., has scored a triumph by the introduction of his Narvesen Pianos for singing purposes in the Public Schools of New York. Mr. Walters keeps a large assortment of new and second-hand Pianos always on hand, for cash, credit or rent.

MR. James Brown Potter's writing a letter to her friend, Mrs. Ayer, highly extolling Rosamee Cream, has been the chief theme of society for the past fortnight. The dudes and belles are all of course bound to try the already famous cream, and even the fashionable belles in London, are going for the wonderful beautifier. It is the first time in the annals of society that the Atlantic cable has been used to record the success of an article for the toilet but last week Edmund Yates, the celebrated journalist in his despatch to the New York World mentions the extraordinary furore the Rosamee Cream has created, and the fact that the leading woman of New York society, has in her delight, at its results, given the unlimited letter of credit to have it exhibited all the world to wag its tongue.

"EL DESCANSO," is one of the most beautiful Coffee Plantations near the great plain of BOGOTA, Republic of Columbia South America. "ERMINIE."

ARGUMENT.

What story the opera of Erminie possesses is of so simple a nature, that the most trustful of audiences could not be misled by its gulosseness. Nothing in short but a traditional custom of the Theatre renders an Argument necessary, and it I can speak in a remark unseen by the Manager, it will be that I should like to abolish argument and custom both.

The principal male characters, Ravanness and Cadenai will be immediately recognized, and it is believed the public, who are no fond of old friends as of old jokes, will welcome them accordingly. It has been thought proper for the purposes of this piece, to re-christen, but a marked resemblance will easily be discovered to the time honored Macaire and Jacques-Strop.

Not to easy them altogether amongst strangers, it was deemed advisable to give them the accompanying support of a hadbird and waiter. Here all likeness to the former ceases, and with the reminder that there is nothing new under the sun, the plot is believed to be more or less original. The action of the piece takes place in one day, (It was thought more than twenty-four hours of any light opera would become tedious.) It is the birthday, that of Erminie in compliment to whom, being the heroine of the play, the date was fixed, who arrives in the village Pauvert with her papa, the Baron, to witness the display of a country fair; but the Marquis is expecting a certain Visconte de Brisac, to whom in deference to dramatic exigencies he has betrothed his daughter, but whom she has never seen for the first time announces, to the annoyance of Erminie, who is in love with—but details will disclose themselves as the action proceeds.

On the appearance of Robert M. Ravannes and his partner, the Jacques Cadenai, the audience, from which they pass no secrets, learn they have stopped and robbed a young nobleman, and being an American audience they will guess it is the expected bridegroom, who is the younger brother of the Visconte, originally intended for the honor of an alliance with the Pouverts, and whom the author found it necessary to kill, that the successor to the family title might be unknown to the rest and so enable Ravannes to assume his character and position, a change it is needless to relate he does not neglect, by his effrontery effecting the arrest of the real Visconte as a notorious convict.

The further adventures of the so-called nobleman and his illiterate companion, at the chateau Pouvert, shall be left to the observant auditors, in the hope they may discover some pleasing surprises, of which a better knowledge of events might deprive them, the author closing this lamentably weak argument with the consolation that there is something with which his piece need not fear unfavorable comparison.

HARRY PAULTON.

A TRIBUTE TO R. M. WALTERS.

MR. R. M. WALTERS, Manufacturer of the Narvesen Pianos, at 57 and 59 University Place, New York, has received a well-deserved compliment in the action of the Committee on School Furniture, who have advised the Board of Education of this city to select the Narvesen for the sixteen square Pianos required in our Public Schools. The Pupils and Schools as well as Mr. Walters should be congratulated on the action made.—Home Journal, July 30, 1884.

ARGUMENT.

What story the opera of Erminie possesses is of so simple a nature, that the most trustful of audiences could not be misled by its guilessness. Nothing in short but a thousand and one old custom of theatre renders an Argument necessary, and if I can sneak in a remark unseen by the Manager, it will be, that I should like to abolish arguments and custom both.

The principal male characters, Ravannes and Cadeau will be immediately recognized, and it is believed the public, who are so fond of old friends as of old jokes, will welcome them accordingly. It has been thought proper for the purpos-s of this piece, to re christen them, but a marked resemblance will easily be discovered to the long honored Robert Macaire and Jacques Strop.

Not to cut them altogether amongst strangers, it was deemed advisable to give them the accompanying annport of a landlord and waiter. Here all likeness to the drama ceases, and with the reminder that there is nothing new under the sun, the plot will be found to be more or less original. The action of the piece takes place in one day (it was thought more than twenty-four of any light could not well honor the occasion) to be birth day, that of Erminie, in compliment to whom, being the heroine of the play, the date was fixed, who arrives in the village Pouvert with her papa, the Marquis, to witness the dissipation of a country fair; but the Marquis is expecting a certain Viscounte de Brissac, to whom in reference to dramatic exigence he has betrothed his danghter, but which proposed union he now for the first time announces, to the annoyance of Erminie, who in love with—but details will disclose themselves as the action proceeds.

On the appearance of Robert M., Ravannes and his partner, Jacques Cadeau the audience, from whom they have no secrets, learn they have stopped and robbed a young nobleman, and being an American audience they will guess it is the expected bridegroom, who is the young cousin brother of the Viscounte, originally intended for the honor of an alliance with the Pouverts and whom the author found it necessary to kill, that his successor to bride and title might be attentive to the rest and so enable Ravannes to assume his character and position, a chance it is needless to relate he does not neglect, by his effrontery effecting the arrest of the real Viscounte as a notorious convict.

The further adventures of the swell nobleman and his illiterate companion, at the chateau Pouvert, shall be left to the observant auditors, in the hope they may discover some pleasing surprises, of which a better knowledge of the author might deprive them, the author closing this lamentably weak argument with the consolation that there is something with which his piece need not fear unfavorable comparison.

A TRIBUTE TO R. M. WALTERS.

MR. R. M. WALTERS, Manufacturer of the Narvesen Pianos, at 37 and 39 University Place, New York, has received a well-deserved co mpliment in the action of the Committee on School Furniture, who have advised the Board of Education of this city to select the Narvesen for the sixteen new square Pianos required in our Public Schools. The Pupils and Schools as well as Mr. Walters should be congratulated on the choice made.—Home Journal, July 9th, 1884.

SPAFFORD AND THE BURGLARS.

How a Deaf Man Nonplussed a Pair of Midnight Marauders.

[Cleveland Plain-Dealer.]

The burglars who went through the clothing store Tuesday night also paid a visit to the residence of Mr. L. O. Spafford, at the corner of Broadway and Jones avenue. Mr. Spafford heard some one moving in the kitchen and opening the door asked who was there. Immediately two revolvers were presented at his head with the command: "Your money or your life."

"What?" asked Mr. Spafford, who can not hear very well.

"Your money or your life," repeated the burglar.

"Oh, come now!" said Mr. Spafford, "that'll do. I think you'd better go away from here. Get out. I want nothing to do with you."

With this he gave the burglar a shove closed the door and returned to bed. The strange conduct so puzzled the knights of the jimmy that after a consultation in the kitchen they left without disturbing anything. As a memento of their visit they scribbled on the wall: "Well done, old man."

"NANON."--PRESS COMMENTS.

HERALD.—"NANON," the gayest and lightest of modern Operettas.....It acheived immediate success.

TIMES.—The audience was very large, and its approval of the Operetta and of its representation was expressed by repeated demonstrations of delight.

WORLD.—Taken as a whole, the Opera was a success. The largest assemblage ever seen in the Casino was present to witness it, and the verdict was given heartily and noisily. Everything that good taste and liberal management can do, has been done to make it acceptable.

TRIBUNE.—A long and successful career can be predicted for the work.

MORNING JOURNAL.—To the Chorus belongs a good share of the success of the evening. for there is no question of the success of the Opera as a whole. The costumes are rich and appropriate beyond question and add immensely to the effect of the Opera.

SUN.—Taken as a whole, the representation was bright and effective.

STAATS ZEITUNG.—Diese erste Nanon-Auffuhrung in Englischer Sprache muss als das Brillanteste und Gelungenste bezeichnet werden, was dieses Theater bisher geboten hat.

TELEGRAM.—"NANON," at the Casino, a great success. The cast was a phenomenally strong one.....It is one of the best Comic Operas produced here, since The Mascot and Patience.

DRAMATIC NEWS.—The piece was put on the stage in the most gorgeous and artistic manner.

EVENING POST.—The work possesses the first requisite for operetta of a clear and well defined story and at the Casino is most beautifully presented to the eye; it seems certain to enjoy a long term of popular favor.

MAIL AND EXPRESS.—The company which presents "NANON" at the Casino includes some excellent artists.

THE NEW YORK MIRROR.—The audience found much to applaud in the rendering of Genee's charming music, a great deal to laugh at in the funniments of the comedians and plenty of favor to bestow upon the respective performances of the leading members of the cast. Probably no better distribution of parts could have been made among people who speak our language.

MUSIC AND DRAMA.—A splendid success.

BROOKLYN EAGLE.—Nanon will run until the snow falls again.

THE KEYNOTE.—Such scenic splendor has not been viewed at this theatre and rarely in New York.....The book is the best translation presented of any of the German Comic Operas....The Costumes were the richest ever shown in a like production in New York.

At the same time it renders the instrument more powerful, and better to get out of under the Mason & Hamlin Patent organ reed, improved instruments, and, coming from these thoroughly trained workmen, may be depended upon to be all they represent them.—Boston Journal.

NANON.

ARGUMENT.

Nanon is the hostess of mirth before the gates of Paris, called the Golden Lamb," which has gained renown alike by a rotund host and a buxom WIFE and helpmate for theatre and court. On this account, Marcellac the star of the royal theatre, takes his meals there, to the inexpressible annoyance of Monsieur de Mauleon. At the same time the famous beauty, Nanon de l'Enclos, also pays a visit to the "Golden Lamb," to enjoy a sight of her rival, for she has but one suspicions that her lover, the Marquis d'Ashigne, has turned his affections toward Nanon. But there, she learns that Nanon is going to be married to the drummer Grignan as the same time the Marquis appeared. His drummer Grignan by no other than the Marquis d'Ashigne, who under this disguise intends to shelter the beautiful hostess. The evening before her birthday, he gathers about his pretended comrades, a drummer and piper of the regiment, singers and musicians, and serenades Nanon. And in Rudolph Aronson's opera bouffe with a proposed marriage, a serenade, the rehearsal of the wedding march, and the wedding itself, make their appearance. D'Ashigne is compelled to play the unsupervised country gentleman in order to save the credit of her grief Mother's revenues rang and friendly compliments to Nanon. Hector and a gallant lady, whom none of them know, is also at the same time confessor of Madame de Maintenon, D'Aubigne, and governess and favorite confidante of Louis XIV., and is employed by him for having effected away so long and for having forgotten her birthday. Nanon is to Monsieur, nothing but and better than a daughter. It is gotten to be ale then quarrel with swords. Mentmore Marcellac who is prepared to surprise Nanon, to avoid the scandal of a duel, and she now pays his homage to her by singing accompanied by the drummer's drum. MR. R. M. WALTERS, Manufacturer of the Narvesen Pianos, at 57 and 59 University Place New York, has received a well-deserved compliment in the action of the Committee on School Furniture, who have advised the Board of Education of this City to select the Narvesen for the sixteen new square Pianos required in our Public Schools. The Pupils and Schools as well as Mr. Walters should be congratulated on the choice made.—Home Journal, July 30, 1884.

CASINO NOTES.

All persons of moderate means have an opportunity to get a first class piano or organ at a low price and on easy terms, by calling on the enterprising firm of Horace Waters & Co., 124 Fifth Avenue, N. Y.

Signor Perugini, the eminent American tenor, after an absence of several years abroad, will make his reentree in Opera Comique at the Casino, Monday Evening, October 9th, and assume the role of the Marquis D'Aubigne in Nanon.

R. M. Walters, of University Place, cor. 12th street, has scored a triumph by the introduction of his Narvesen Pianos for singing purposes in the Public Schools of New York. Mr. Walters keeps a large assortment of new and second hand Pianos always on hand, for cash, credit or rent.

Messrs. Schmer & Co., the deservedly popular manufacturers of first class pianos, have again been obliged to enlarge their several establishments. Many of our best musicians are now purchasing the Schmer Piano for their own use. They are a progressive firm, and their constant aim is to gratify the desires of their customers.

CAMPANINI.—The WeberPianos sustain the voice in a wonderful degree and they have my unqualified admiration.

The popular song, "Hidden Music," as sung by Miss Pauline Hall, each evening during the third act of "Nanon," was composed expressly for her by Mr. Julian J. Lyons. For sale at all Music Stores, and in the foyer of the Casino.

The Restaurant connected with the Hotel Madison—entrance directly opposite the Casino is excellent, all the delicacies of the season can be had here, and at moderate prices. The Casino is under the supervision of one of the best Chefs in New York.

Use Wenck's Perfumes, they are the best.

"POLLY,"

PRESS COMMENTS.

HERALD.—"Miss LILLIAN RUSSELL has recaptured the town. The piece was a great success. Its music is facile and bright, and its scenery and costumes are fully up to the high standard of the Casino. There is a military dash in the operetta, which took the house by storm."

SUN.—"It was evident that the fame of the new operetta 'Polly,' which has had a six months' run in England, had preceded its production here and filled the minds of energetic and enthusastic first nighters with amiable prejudices in its favor. The favorable anticipations were fully justified by the results of the performance."

TELEGRAM.—"The action is rapid and the performance went with a dash and 'go' that showed the effect of a thorough rehearsal. The music is bright and melodious, and the various solos, duets and concerted numbers were rendered in a very satisfactory manner."

GRAPHIC.—"It is a two-act military comic opera with a wealth of color and movement, and action so thoroughly sustained that there is not a dull moment from the beginning to the end of it."

COMMERCIAL ADVERTISER.—"The Casino has offered nothing this season which has promised more propitiously for the future."

DRAMATIC NEWS.—"The opera made at first hearing a most favorable impression, and will undoubtedly become very popular. It is full of pretty, tuneful songs, waltzes, march movements, etc. The story is highly amusing and it cannot fail to meet with success."

MUSICAL AND DRAMA.—"POLLY," at the Casino is an undoubted hit, and the "standing room only," sign has been out every night since the opening.

SATURDAY, June 15th, the Fiftieth representation of "Polly" will take place at the Casino. Beautiful Souvenirs are to be presented at both the Matinee and Evening performances.

Buffet Floor up Stairs. Take Elevator.

NEXT Sunday Evening, Grand Popular Concert at the Casino.

Promenade Concert every Evening on Roof Garden after Performance.

A magnificent revival of BILLEE TAYLOR, will follow POLLY at the Casino.

The sketches of the costumes for "NANON" were drawn by Baron de Grimm.

The sele of seats for "NANON" will commence Monday morning, June 15th.

The only correct edition of the Libretto of Polly can be had from boy in foyer.

After the performance patrons should go to the old original oyster bay, 1400 Broadway.

RUDOLPH ARONSON'S Popular Dance Music can be had at BRENTANO'S, 5 Union Square.

The Blue Point Oyster House, 1453 Broadway, on the Rossmore block, is a very popular resort.

Messrs. Heyn, Mezzanovich and Merry, are at present busily engaged with the scenery for "Nanon."

No Opera Comique presented in modern times, has attained the wonderful popularity which "NENON" has.

CAMPANINI.—The WeberPianos sustain the voice in a wonderful degree and they have my unqualified admiration.

Souvenirs to be presented at the Casino Saturday, June 13th, are to be very handsome and unique in design.

RUDOLPH ARONSON'S popular "PRETTY MAIDES" POLKA, has been published for Piano, and can be had at all Music Stores.

"NANON" HAS RUN over 350 NIGHTS in Berlin, and is still being played with great success in Hamburg, Leipsic, Hanover, Prague, Bremen, Dresden, etc.

The Casino with its excellent ventilation and beautifully Illuminated Roof Garden is without doubt, the most comfortable Summer Theatre in America.

"NANON" has run hundreds of nights in Germany. The Waltz "Anna in rapture I come to thee" is sung, whistled and played in all parts of the German empire

The Fiftieth Performance of "POLLY" will take place at the Casino, Saturday, June 13th. Beautiful Souvenirs are to be presented at both the Matinee and Evening Performances.

SPECIAL NOTICE.—The orchestra chairs are arranged to fold by first lifting the seat by the wooden handle, the back will then fold of itself. It will conduce to the general convenience of exit if this is observed.

There are few, if any, firms doing a larger retail trade than SOHMER & CO., of this city. It is almost impossible to call at their wareroems any time of the day without finding some person contracting for a SOHMER PIANO.

The Restaurant connected with the Hotel Madison—entrance directly opposite the Casino is excellent, all the delicacies of the season can be had here, and at moderate prices. The Cuisine is under the supervision of one of the best Chefs in New York.

R. M. Walters, of University Place, cor 12th street, has scored a triumph by the introduction of his Narvesen Pianos for singing purposes in the Public Schools of New York. Mr. Walters keeps a large assortment of new and second-hand Pianos always on hand, for cash, credit or rent.

The cast for "NANON" to be presented at the Casino June 20th, will include The Misses Sadie Martinot, Pauline Hall, Billee Barlow, Alice Vincent, Rose Beaudet, Agnes Folsom, Florence Bell, Emma Healey, Carrie Andrews, Eugenie Maynerd, Adele Langdon, and the Messrs. Francis Wilson, W. H. Fitzgerald, Law J. Gisske, Harry Standish, Weeks, Waite, Tibbets, Mc-Dowell and Wm. T. Carleton. Mr. Heinrich Conried will be Stage Director, and Mr. Jesse Williams Music Director.

VERDICT OF THE COURT.
Oysterman at Large for Life.

From what I have seen of the effects of the preparation known as Dr. S. P. Zackarie's Liquid Manikure for beautifying the finger nails, it appears to be a valuable contribution to the articles of toilet. It is of rapid application, harmless and safe, and does AWAY with the trouble of resorting to the powder, trimming, wash and rubbing generally in use for these toilet purposes. J. M. CARNOHAN, M. D., formerly Professor of Surgery, and Surgeon-in-Chief to the State Immigrants' Hospital.

"POLLY,"
OR THE PET OF THE REGIMENT.
ARGUMENT.

POLLY TRENCHARD is the orphan child of a British Grenadier, who was killed in the Ashantee War. Polly is adopted by the tenth Hussars, and grows to womanhood under the care of that gallant regiment. She is a thorough sport, she is loved by Private Mangle, a smart young trooper, and regards his suit with much favor. At an inspection of the regiment, Major-General Bangs, C. B., is much struck with Polly's grace and beauty. He immediately sees his opportunity, and proposes marriage. Polly is impressed with the superior advantages of an alliance with an officer of high rank instead of an obscure, private soldier, and hesitates. "It is the period," she unobscure, private soldier, and hesitates. "It is the period," she unhesitatingly gives Major-General Bangs, C. B., the preference. The betrothal is celebrated by a ball in the presence of the regiment and the General's family, and Lady Edgelin McAssor, widow of the late General, who has shortly declares Polly to be her own daughter. Lady McAssor is the sister of Major-General Bangs, C. B., the contemplated marriage becomes illegal. Arthur Mangle gives sublic expression to his despair, but his misery is cleared by the announcement that Polly must leave the regiment. She tenderly bids her old comrades farewell, and departs for Carnton Town, accompanied by her aristocratic mamma.

IN ACT 2d, the division commanded by Major-General Bangs, C. B., is ordered abroad to rescue a small British force besieged by the treacherous King of Timantimtackim. The General will visit the camp to take leave of their esteemed relative ere he departs. Mrs. Polly's treasurers for the husband of her choice is revived on meeting him, and, at his urgent request, she verbally promises to marry him. The unwelcome intelligence reaches the camp that the agreement in black and white, and such has come to regret the over-agreement in black and white, and such has come to regret the overhasty promise. The General is made that Lady McAssor never had any children, and Polly's supposed Hereford General had any children, and Polly's supposed Hereford General renews his suit, and urges the "Pet of the Regiment" to throw his lot and wear the family jewelry. Polly cheerfully consents. At this supressive juncture, Private Mangle plays the trump card held in reserve. He declares himself to be a German Prince in disguise. This noble reward is the test of Polly's fidelity. She proves true to her first love, and renounces the hand of General Bangs to accept that of her titled young man. In desperation the General, with the Prince's consent, offers Mr. Mangle a Peerage, which even that temptation. Just in time to prevent a catastrophe, which would darken the story over, the sending of the opera glasses reaches Major-General Bangs, C. B., conveying the glad intelligence that the siege of Timantimtackim has been raised and war is averted. As a reward for the rumerous services he might have rendered to his grateful country, the General is raised to the Peerage, and all ends happily.

A TRIBUTE TO THE NARVESEN PIANO.

MR. R. M. WALTERS, Manufacturer of the Narvesen Pianos, at 57 and 59 University Place New York, has received a well-deserved compliment in the action of the Committee on School Furniture, who have advised the Board of Education of this City to select the Narvesen for the sixteen new square Pianos required in our Public Schools. The Pupils and Schools as well as Mr. Walters should be congratulated on the choice made.—Home Journal, May 30, 1884.

CASINO NOTES.

BEAUTIFUL SOUVENIRS are to be distributed at the Monster Entertainment to take place at the Casino Tuesday afternoon April 7th for the benefit of the "Statue of Liberty" Pedestal. The entire house is to be handsomely decorated with the French and American colors for this occasion.

MR. HEINRICH CONRIED is at present busily engaged with the preparations for the production of DANKE'S most popular operetta "NADGY"—which is to be presented at the Casino early in June with an unusually strong cast.

J. & C. Fischer's new Baby Grand Piano has already taken a very prominent place, and many celebrated musicians are attesting to its wonderful power and tone. The "Fischer" Pianos are renowned for tone and durability, and the firm is one of the most enterprising and progressive in the trade. Merit and success go together.

RUDOLPH ARONSON'S popular "PRETTY MAIDEN" POLKA, has been published for Piano, and can be had at all Music Stores.

"POLLY" is to be presented at the Casino Monday April 27th. It has been an enormous success in England, where it is now in the sixth month of its run. Miss Lillian Russell, the charming Prima Donna will make her first appearance in this Operetta, since her return from her successful tour in Europe.

Tuesday afternoon April 7th a Monster Entertainment is to take place at the Casino in aid of the STATUE OF LIBERTY Pedestal Fund. Tickets and Reserved Seats can now be obtained at the Casino Box Office.

After the performance patrons should go to the old original oyster bay, 1400 Broadway.

R. M. Walters, of University Place, cor. 12th street, has scored a triumph by the introduction of his Narvesen Pianos for singing purposes in the Public Schools of New York. Mr. Walters keeps a large assortment of new and second-hand Pianos always on hand, for cash, credit or rent.

HOTEL MADISON.—Ladies' entrance immediately opposite the Casino. This newly built Hotel is constructed with all the latest improvements. The Cafe is under the management of one of the best chef's in the city. Especial attention paid to Opera and Theatre parties.

There are few, if any, firms doing a larger retail trade than SOHMER & CO. of this city. It is almost impossible to call at their warerooms any time of the day without finding some person contracting for a SOHMER PIANO.

MISS ALFA NORMAN has made a very great success as the prima donna of the Carleton English Opera Co. in San Francisco. She sang the charming part of Zerlina in Fra Diavolo. Her voice and her methods are praised very highly by the San Francisco critics. Blakely Hall writing in the Argonaut says: "Miss Alfa Norman's voice is that of an absolute soprano—a rare register, by the way, as the majority of singers are tenors, and cannot sing above A. Miss Norman sings to E sharp, and her voice is as clear as a bell and as thoroughly sympathetic. To her other gifts Miss Norman unites that of being a beautiful woman. This singer will appear at the Bijou Opera House in May, as the Prima donna of a new English Opera Co.

SYDNEY ROSENFELD is at work on the adaptation of that most successful operetta "NANON," which is to be produced at the CASINO early in June, with a phenomenal cast.

GRAND UNION HOTEL, opp. Grand Central Depot. IMPORTANT.—Travelers and families arriving or leaving the city for business, pleasure, or to visit summer resorts, will find superior accommodations at this Hotel, European Plan, 600 elegant rooms, at $1.00 and upwards per day. Richly furnished suites for families. Also rooms for supper or dinner parties. Restaurant, Cafe, and Wine Rooms supplied with the best at moderate prices. Guests save $3.00 carriage hire, and by handing their baggage checks to the hotel clerk can have it delivered from this depot to their room in fifteen minutes, free of charge.

(THE BAT.)

ARGUMENT.

The story of the Opera is briefly as follows: A wealthy banker, Eisenstein (Mark Smith), having insulted the judge of the Court, is sentenced to a few days imprisonment, but is permitted to go home to take leave of his wife, to whom he has been recently married. While at home his family physician, Dr. Falke, (C. W. Dungey), persuades him to break his parole and go with him that night to a masked ball given by Prince Orlofsky (Miss Irene Perry). Mme. Eisenstein (Miss Rosalie Becker), in the meantime has been visited by a former lover, Alfred (Edwin Whitney), who persuades her to grant him an interview after her husband has gone to prison. The chambermaid, Adele (Mathilde Cottrelly), also begs off "to visit a sick aunt," as she alleges, but really to go to the Prince's ball, to which her sister, Ida (Miss Valerga), a coryphee has secured her an invitation. Eisenstein takes his leave, with much pretended sorrow. Alfred comes in, makes himself very much at home, and is arrested and marched off to prison by Inspector Franke (Dr Wolf Hopper), who mistakes him for Eisenstein.

In the second Act, which is a ball room, Eisenstein, Dr. Falke and the Inspector meet. Adele comes in, dressed in her mistress' finery, and a very amusing scene occurs between her and Eisenstein, who suspects her identity, but is not quite sure of it. In this scene Eisenstein tells of a trick he played on Dr. Falke at a masquerade three years before, at which the latter appeared in the character of a bat. To revenge himself, Falke sends a note to Mme. Eisenstein, who presently appears, masked, and sets up a desperate flirtation with her husband, but disappears before he can persuade her to remove her mask.

The third and closing Act is laid in the prison office. Franke comes in very drunk and is met by a turnkey (Charles Plunkett), who is also drunk. The two have a very amusing performance here, and presently all the leading characters appear, on one pretext or another, and give the prison officials a great deal of trouble to keep them apart until the denouement, which shows that while all have been indiscreet they have been nothing worse, so everything ends happily.

FROM what I have seen of the effects of the preparation know as Dr. S. P. ZACHARIE'S Liquid Manicure for beautifying the finger nails, it appears to be a valuable contribution to the articles of toilet. It is of ready application, harmless and safe, and does away with the trouble of resorting to the powder, ointment, wash and polishing generally in use for the same purpose.—J. M. CARNOCHAN M. P. formerly Professor of Surgery, and Surgeon-in-Chief to the State Immigrants Hospital.

CAMPANINI—The Weber Pianos used at the voice in a manner of grace and they have no unqualified admiration.

The fashionable predjudice of paying for a first-class piano double its intrinsic value has been destroyed by the BAUDMAN Pianos which are faultless and can be bought at a reasonable and modest price. The new HARDMAN Upright is the equal of modern piano manufacturing. New Warerooms, 146 Fifth Avenue, above 19th Street.

One of the most notable features of the many attractions of the present season, is the magnificent dining and supper rooms of the famed Hoffman House. An Orchestra of four instruments discourses sweet music between the hours of 6 and 8:30 p. m., while the guests are served with the cooking of the best chef in America. The decorations, it may be safe to say, have no equal in any Hotel in the world.

The "Bijou" Grand (only five feet in length) is the latest addition to the styles of Pianos manufactured by the well known house of Schmer & Co. This is certainly the smallest Grand Piano ever made, and creates a genuine furore among musicians; discourses sweet immense power of tone, and the really sweet quality it possesses. It will not fail to meet with large sales.

"RUDOLPH ARONSON'S, popular "PRETTY MAIDEN" POLKA, has just been published for Piano, and can be had at all Music Stores.

SPECIAL NOTICE.—The orchestra chairs are arranged to fold by first lifting the seat by the wooden handle, the back will then fold of itself. It will conduce to the general convenience of exit if this is observed.

After the performance patrons should go to the old original oyster bay, 1460 Broadway.

R. M. Walters, of University Place, cor. 12th street, has scored a triumph by the introduction of his Narvesen Pianos for singing purposes in the Public Schools of New York. Mr. Walters keeps a large assortment of new and second-hand Pianos always on hand, for cash, credit or rent.

NELL GWYNNE.

ARGUMENT.

ACT I.

An old roysterer noble, duke of Buckingham (to Cave, M. H., the gayest lunatic of the town (to Lucas, H.), under the guise of Vic. Bill and nothing more, to keep company with Nell (Miss Tallot), and her sister (to Jessamine, Miss Lucas), the two orange girls of Drury Lane Theatre, but the King, jealous of the former's influence with the ladies, and especially with Nell Gwynne, who loves him, and who, in return, is the only woman he ever loved, sends Rochester (to Campbell, Sig. A.), a notorious libertine, to watch the duke, to which end Rochester, who has never seen Nell, but has heard of her, and is in love with her from description, sends Sir Charles Sedley (to Sig. Campanini), a wit, to bring him to the Duke's house. Sir Charles is recognized by Nell, and Buckingham (to Campbell, Sig. A.), who is in love with Jessamine, and who has never seen Rochester, and Buckingham (to Campbell, Sig. A.) are engaged in the same pursuit. The acting of the play opens with a scene between Nell and Jessamine, the two orange girls, in the green of Drury Lane, and ends with a duet between Nell and Sedley.

ACT II.

The latter scene discovers Jessamine leaving the house of Nell Gwynne, which is then occupied by Nell, Buckingham and Marjorie, general drudge in Wych Street, waiting on their fair mistresses. Jessamine, during an interview, has informed Nell of her disguise. Buckingham is jealous of the Baronet and threatens the dress of a cat-catcher. At this point, Rochester enters, and, with a view of placing two young girls, poor relations of their own, in a convent. The two friends quarrel and fight, and at the end of the act, Nell and Clare, who is another love planet the grand scene, singing a love song between Nell and Joan, as rustic boddice and kirtle, and with bundle on shoulder.

ACT III.

The action is now shifted to Nell's house, pour shop and the counterfeit bridge. Jessamine has recently arrived with her lover, Buckingham, who has changed clothes with Rochester, and the latter, Rochester unlikely dressed, there are two in the field. Buckingham in his double suit is there to challenge Sedley, who has come to fight against thieves, and the real Beadle, his double, comes to court Marjorie. Jessamine, by, according to account, Nell, who persuades Marjorie to put on her dress and take her place till she is clear of the premises. What with two Beadles, two Buckinghams and two Jessamines, the mistakes are many and confusing, but Nell, who has generously sent Jessamine away with Buckingham, finally baffles their designs on Jessamine, at one time as a cook, at another as a girl fortune-teller. Finally, Jessamine and Buckingham, the two lords make appointments with Marjorie, supposing her to be Jessamine, and the Beadle is arrested and put in his own stocks for the pranks really committed by Buckingham.

ACT IV.

A Glade in the New Forest. Charles and his court, hunting with hawk and hound fall in with Nell looking after her kine, and learning that the denouement of the love affair of Buckingham comedy is fast approaching, resolves to wait and see it. The hunt is resumed, and then the infatuated Rochester throws himself at the feet of his pretty waitress Gillian, little dreaming that it is Clare. Condition number one. Buckingham then has a private talk (long, (otherwise Neil) in which, discovering that she sings and dances charmingly, the mercurial nobleman rashes to the conclusion that he has found a rustic prodigy, and actually proposes to take her to London and crush Nell Gwynne. Condition number two. Nothing now remains for the actress to do, but turn the two lords into ridicule, after the design with the supposed Jessamine, and then hurry away with Clare to share in the impeachment of Rochester and Buckingham. In this they are strongly assisted by old Wessel, and the Beadle, who since the night of terror where the house of the one was turned inside out, and the other was clapped in his own gallery, have been wandering, distraught, in the woods. Comparing notes, they find that the false beadle and false cat-catcher were the landlord and waiter of the Dragon, and summoning the watch, they halt Rochester and Buckingham before Nell. Now the two scamps are confounded by Neil, how Talbot gets the hand of Clare, Falcon that of Jessamine, and how all ends happily (except perhaps for the amateur innkeepers), need not be detailed.

A TRIBUTE TO THE NARVESEN PIANO.

MR. R. M. WALTERS, Manufacturer of the Narvesen Pianos, at 57 and 59 University Place New York, has received a well-deserved compliment in the action of the Committee on School Furniture, who have advised the Board of Education of this City to select the Narvesen for the sixteen new square Pianos required in our Public Schools. The Pupils and Schools as well as Mr. Walters should be congratulated on the choice made.—Home Journal, July 30, 1884.

CASINO NOTES.
Next Sunday Evening, Grand Popular Concert.—The following Artists of Mr. Maurice Grau's French Opera Company will appear for the last time: Mme. Theo, the Parisian Diva; Mlle. Camille Dorsdall, M. Lary and M. Gailhard, in connection with Rudolph Aronson's Casino Orchestra, increased to 50 Musicians, under the conductorship of Mr. Gustav Kerker. Admission 50 cents. Reserved seats $1.00. Seats can now be secured.

On Monday evening, October 6th, a magnificent revival of Meilacher's charming Opera Comique, The Beggar Student will be presented by the McCaull Opera Company to-night.

The "Bijou" Grand is only five feet in length; is the latest addition to the styles of Pianos manufactured by the well known house of Schmer & Co. This is certainly the smallest Grand Piano ever made, and creates a genuine furore among musicians on account of its immense power of tone, and its really sweet quality it possesses. It will not fail to meet with large sales.

Mr. F. F. Mackay, the well-known character actor and Manager, who will be remembered in connection with the Union Square Theatre productions of Agnes, The Two Orphans, etc., afterwards as manager of the Chestnut Street Theatre, Philadelphia, and more recently for his performances in the Romany Rye, and In The Ranks, has just purchased a new play in five acts, entitled True Nobility, from John C. Freund, editor of Freund's Weekly, which he will produce as soon after the elections as possible. Mr. Mackay considers Mr. Freund's play as the strongest and most interesting piece of its kind that has been played in this country since the production of The Two Orphans.

Mr. Maurice Grau's French Opera Company is meeting with remarkable success at Wallack's Theatre. The charming Theo is in the centre as ever, and the new prima donna, Mlle. Cecile Ledort has made a decided hit.

SPECIAL NOTICE.—Those extra chairs are arranged to fold by from 12 to 1, the rear of the western balcony, the dock with the best of views. It will conduce to the general comfort if this rule is observed.

☞ RUDOLPH ARONSON, popular "PRETTY MAIDEN" POLKA, has just been published for Piano, and can be had at all Music Stores.

After the performance patrons should go to the old original oyster bay, 1400 Broadway.

H. M. Watters, of University Place, cor. 12th street, has scored a triumph by the introduction of his Narvesen Pianos for singing purposes in the Public Schools of New York. Mr. Watters keeps a large assortment of new and second-hand Pianos always on hand, for cash, credit or rent.

The fashionable prejudice of paying for a first class Piano double its intrinsic value has been destroyed by the HARDMAN PIANOS which are faultless and can be bought at a reasonable and modest price. The new HARDMAN UPRIGHT is the acme of modern piano manufacturing. New Warerooms, 146 Fifth Avenue, above 19th Street.

THE BEGGAR STUDENT.
ARGUMENT.

The action of this Opera is laid in the city of Cracow Poland, in the year 1704. Augustus the Strong, of Saxony, having overcome the Polish monarch Stanislaus, the Saxon soldiery are in possession and the prisons are filled with Polish political prisoners. In the first act, General Olinsdorf, military governor of the city, and in love with Laura, eldest daughter of the Polish Countess Palmatica, intercepts a letter written by the mother, in which she ridiculates the idea of marrying her daughter to any Saxon, and more especially a low-caste beggar like the student, adding that only a Pole and a nobleman can be her son in law. The Gen'l from revenge, to humble those haughty ladies, takes from prison Symon Symonovitz, a handsome young Polish vagabond student, who has been incarcerated for poaching, pledging him, in return for his liberty and a large sum of money, to impersonate a wealthy nobleman, make love to and marry the Countess Laura Symon rejoins upon taking with him a fellow prisoner, Janitsky, who is held for political reasons, to act as his private secretary. The plot is successful. Countess Palmatica, and her daughters, who have been existing for years in genteel poverty, are dazzled by the golden bait, and the first act ends with the betrothal of the seeming Prince and the Countess Laura.

In the second act, Symon, finding Laura is really in love with him, recipricates her passion and decides, as the money supplied by the Gen'l is all spent, to inform Laura of the deception practiced upon her. Not having courage to tell her of his baseness, he writes a letter declining all, and entrusts it to Laura's mother, with instructions to deliver it before the ceremony is performed. The General, discovering the Countess has this letter, tells her that the billet refers her only to marriage settlements, and persuades her to withhold it until the parties are wed. The ceremony over, the General reveals the plot to the assembled guests, showing the Prince to be only a beggar student, and has him driven from the palace.

At the beginning of the third act, Symon, insulted and disgraced, is meditating self destruction, when his friend Janitsky reveals himself as a Polish officer interested in a plot for the capture of the citadel and reinstatement of King Stanislaus upon the throne of Poland. The success of the scheme depends upon the payment of 200,000 thalers to the Austrian commandant, for which he has agreed to surrender to the Poles. The Governor General has discovered but Janitsky knows the secret hiding place of the Polish treasure Dupes and bribes him (Janitsky) with 200,000 thalers to betray that officer to the Austrians. Janitsky asks Symon to personate the Governor General, promising reward for his capture can be paid to the commandant and the victory thus be gained. Symon consents, and holds the Governor in ignorance of the fact that the Poles are in possession, and a the Austrians as slaves. In return for this, he is knighted by King Stanislaus and forgiven by his wife and mother in law.

A TRIBUTE TO THE NARVESEN PIANO.

MR. H. M. WATTERS, Manufacturer of the Narvesen Pianos, 57 and 59 University Place, New York, has received well deserved compliment as the action of the Committee on School Furniture who have advised the Board of Education of this city to select the Narvesen for the sixteen new square Pianos required in our Public Schools. The Pupils and Schools as well as Mr. Watters should be congratulated on the choice made.—Home Journal, July 30, 1884.

The scenery for Nell Gwynne, which is to be presented at the Casino by the McCaull Opera Comique Company, after the run of The Beggar Student, will be the handsomest ever seen on the stage. Messrs. Hoyt, Mazzanovich and Mueller have been at work on it for several weeks past.

The following is the cast of "Nell Gwynne," to be presented by the McCaull Opera Comique Co., at the Casino, Saturday Nov. 8th: Nell Gwynne, Marie Cottrell; Lord Clare, Laura Joyce Bell; Jessamine, Ida Vinega; Marjorie, Irene Perry; Peregrine, Billie Barlow; Beadle, Digby Bell; Wensel, J. H. Riley Buckingham, William Hamilton Clarke; Sir Thomas Killigrew, W. H. Fessenden; The King, C. W. Dungan; Talbot, Edward Cameron; Music Director, Signor De Novellis. New and gorgeous Costumes designed from the original plates. New and Beautiful Scenery by the Messrs Hoyt, Mazzanovich and Mueller.

The young American prodigy, Master Jay Banner, who received the Premier prix at the Paris Conservatoire, this year, is to appear for the second time, next Sunday evening.

One of the most notable features of the many attractions of the present season, is the magnificent dining and supper rooms of the famed Hoffman House. An Orchestra of ten instruments discourses sweet music between the hours of 6 and 8.30 p.m., while the guests are served with the cooking of the best chef in America. The decorations, it may be safe to say, have no equal in any Hotel in the world.

The "Bijou" Grand only five feet in lenght) is the latest addition to the styles of Pianos manufactured by the well known house of Schmer & Co. This is certainly the smallest Grand Piano ever made, and creates a genuine furore among musicians on account of its immense power of tone, and the really sweet quality it possesses. It will not fail to meet with large sales.

RUDOLPH ARONSON'S, popular "PRETTY MAIDEN POLKA, has just been published for Piano, and can be had at all Music Stores.

Extensive preparations are being made for the presentation at the Casino of "Nell Gwynne" by the London Opera Comique Sensation. "Nell Gwynne" The opera has enjoyed a run of over three hundred nights in London.

SPECIAL NOTICE.—The orchestra chairs are arranged to fold by first lifting the seat by the wooden handle, the back will then fold of itself. It will conduce to the general convenience of exit if this is observed.

After the performance patrons should go to the old original oyster bay, 1466 Broadway.

R M Walters, of University Place, cor. 12th street, has scored a triumph by the introduction of his Narvesen Pianos for singing purposes in the Public Schools of New York. Mr. Walters keeps a large assortment of new and second hand Pianos always on hand, for cash, credit or rent

THE BEGGAR STUDENT.

ARGUMENT.

The action of this Opera is laid in the city of Cheron Poland in the year 1704. Augustus the Strong, of Saxony having overcome the Polish monarch Stanislaus, the Saxon soldiery are in possession and the prisons are filled with Polish political prisoners. In the first act, General Ollendorf, military governor of the city and in love with Laura, eldest daughter of the Polish Countess Palmatica, intercepts a letter written by the mother, in which she ridicules the idea of marrying her daughter to any Saxon, and more especially a blustering braggart like the General, adding that only a Polish nobleman can be her son in law. The General's first revenge is humble-hauty ladies, taken from prison Symon Symonovicz, a handsome young Polish vagabond student, who has been incarcerated for poaching on the King's preserves. In return for his liberty and a large sum of money, to impersonate a wealthy nobleman, make love to and marry the Countess Laura Symon insists upon setting free his fellow prisoner, Janitsky, who is held for political reasons, to act as his private secretary. The plot is successful. Countess Palmatica, tired of suitors, who have been offering for years in genteel poverty, are dazzled by the golden bait, and the first act ends with the betrothal of the seeming Prince and the Countess.

In the second act, Symon, finding Laura is really in love with him, reciprocates her passion and confesses to the many subterfuges by which he is all spent, to inform Laura of the deception practiced upon her. Not having courage to tell her of his imposture, he writes a letter confessing all, and entrusts it to Laura's mother, with instructions to deliver it before the ceremony is performed. The General, discovering that the Countess has this letter, tells her that the billet refers her only to marriage settlements, and persuades her to withhold it until after the nuptials. The ceremony over, the General reveals the plot to the assembled guests, showing the Prince to be only a beggar student, and has him driven from the palace.

At the beginning of the third act, Symon, insulted and disgraced, is meditating self destruction, when his friend Janitsky reveals himself as a Polish officer interested in a plot for the capture of the citadel and reinstatement of King Stanislaus upon the throne of Poland. The success of the scheme depends upon the payment of 200,000 thalers to the Austrian commandant, for which sum he agrees to surrender to the Poles. The Governor General has discovered that Janitsky knows the secret hiding place of the Polish Grand Duke, and bribes him (Janitsky) with 200,000 thalers to betray that secret to the Saxons. Janitsky asks Symon to personate the Grand Duke until the money received for his capture can be paid to the commandant and the victory thus be gained. Symon consents, and holds the General in ignorance of the truth until the Poles are in possession and all the Austrians prisoners. In return for this, he is knighted by King Stanislaus and forgiven by his wife and mother in law

A TRIBUTE TO THE NARVESEN PIANO.

Mr. R M. Walters, Manufacturer of the Narvesen Pianos at 57 and 59 University Place, New York, has received a well deserved compliment in the action of the Committee on School Furniture, who have advised the Board of Education of this City to select the Narvesen for the sixteen new square Pianos required in our Public Schools. The Pupils and Schools as well as Mr. Walters should be congratulated on the choice made.—Home Journal July 30, 1884.

CASINO NOTES.

Next Sunday Evening, Grand Popular Concert. The following artists of Mr. Maurice Grau's French Opera Company will appear, Mme. Theo, the Parisian Diva; Mlle. Lefort, Mlle. Nordall, M. Lary and M. Gaillard, in conjunction with Rudolph Aronson's Casino Orchestra, increased to 50 Musicians, under the conductorship of W. G. Dietrich. Admission 50 cents. Reserved seats $1.00. Seats can now be secured.

The last nights of the "Little Duke" are announced at the Casino. On Monday evening, October 6th, a magnificent revival of Millocker's charming Opera Comique. The Beggar Student will be presented by the McCaull Opera Comique Company.

This is certainly the smallest Grand Piano ever made, and creates a genuine furore among musicians on account of its immense power of tone and the really sweet quality it possesses. It will not fail to meet with large sales.

Promenade Concerts take place each evening after the performance in the theatre, on the upper Music Pavilion.

Most of the New York ladies use "Button's Raven Gloss Shoe Dressing" and know it is the best. We wish the ladies from other Cities to know this too. Sold by leading Shoe Dealers everywhere.

Take the elevator for buffet floor and roof garden.

The admission to the Casino including both entertainments is 50 cents.

SPECIAL NOTICE.—The orchestra chairs are arranged to fold by first lifting the seat by the wooden handle, the back will then fold of itself. It will conduce to the general convenience of exit if this is observed.

The ices, creams, salads, &c., served on the buffet floor and roof garden are from the Hotel Brunswick.

RUDOLPH ARONSON, popular "PRETTY MAIDEN" POLKA, has just been published for Piano; and can be had at all Music Stores.

Opera glasses to hire on the orchestra floor.

Refreshments are served on the buffet floor and roof garden.

The "Bijou" Grand (only five feet in length) is the latest addition to the styles of Pianos manufactured by the well known house of Schmer & Co.

Grand Popular Concerts are given every Sunday evening at the Casino. The Beautiful Roof Garden open.

After the performance patrons should go to the old original oyster bay, 1,460 Broadway.

Mr. Maurice Grau's French Opera Company is meeting with remarkable success at Wallack's Theatre. The charming Theo is as popular as ever, and the new prima donna, Mlle Cecile Lafort has made a decided hit.

The fashionable prejudice of paying for a first class Piano double its intrinsic value has been destroyed by the HARDMAN PIANOS which are faultless and can be bought at a reasonable and modest price. The new HARDMAN UPRIGHT is the acme of modern piano manufacturing. New Warerooms, 146 Fifth Avenue, above 19th Street.

The Little Duke.

ARGUMENT.

The first act takes place in the Palace of Louis XIV, where the nuptials of the Duke de Parthenay, (age 17) and Mlle. Blanche de Cambrey, (age 16), are being celebrated, it is a mariage de convenience, on account of their youth they are to be separated immediately after the wedding. Frimousse, the tutor of the Duke takes the bride away to the Boarding school of Madame de Lausac. The Duke is left disconsolate and his friends joke him about his position. The Chevalier de Montaland arrives with the Regiment De Parthenay, giving orders to the Duke to take command as Colonel and to Frimousse that he is appointed Latin and Greek Professor at the Academy of Madame de Lausac. The Duke conceives the idea of going with his regiment, and rescuing his wife.

In act two the Duchesse is a pupil at Madame de Lausac's School. Montaland comes with a flag of truce to claim the Duchesse. Madam Lausac declines to give her up and De Montaland leaves. The Duke then enters disguised as a peasant girl, discovers his wife who has been locked up. Frimousse makes love to the peasant girl (the Duke) when he steals his keys and releases the Duchesse, but only to be disappointed as Madame de Lausac refuses to let her go without an order from the King.

Act third, the scene is laid in the camp of the Regiment de Parthenay. The Duke's regiment have been victorious and he arrives a hero. He is sent for by the general to receive his congratulations at the same time giving orders that no wives or sweethearts are to be allowed in camp. The Duke retires to his tent to sleep but is awakened by the discovery that his wife is in his tent having escaped from the school. Frimousse, who has been drafted unwillingly into the regiment sees the Duchesse in the Duke's tent. He immediately informs the general, who hearing his orders are disobeyed, commands the Duke to be disrated, but remembering his valor in battle, the previous day, relents. The Duke is allowed to keep his wife and Frimousse is made Corporal.

CASINO NOTES.

RUDOLPH ARONSON, popular "PRETTY MAIDEN" POLKA, has just been published for Piano; and can be had at all Music Stores.

Opera glasses to let on the orchestra floor.

Refreshments are served on the buffet floor and roof garden.

The "Bijou" Grand (only five feet in length is the latest addition to the styles of Pianos manufactured by the well known house of Solmer & Co.

This is certainly the smallest Grand Piano ever made, and creates a genuine furore among musicians on account of its immense power of tone and the really sweet quality it possesses. It will not fail to meet with large sales.

Promenade Concerts take place each evening after the performance in the theatre, on the upper Music Pavilion.

There may be a few ladies who do not know that Button's Raven Gloss is the only Shoe Dressing that does not harden, scale nor crack leather.

Take the elevator for buffet floor and roof garden.

The ad mission to the Casino including both entertainments 50 cents.

SPECIAL NOTICE.—The orchestra chairs are arranged to fold by first lifting the seat by the wooden handle, the back will then fold of itself. It will conduce to the general convenience of each if this is observed.

The teas, creams, salads, &c. served on the buffet floor and roof garden are from the Hotel Brunswick.

Everyone who has traveled on the West Shore R. R. is delighted with its excellent management, and on no road in the world can one travel so luxuriously and comfortably as on this popular route.

Grand Popular Concerts are given every Sunday evening at the Casino. The Beautiful Roof Garden open.

After the performance patrons should go to the old original oyster bay, 1,400 Broadway.

MLLE. THEO and MR. MAURICE GRAU'S French Opera Company, will appear at Wallacks Theatre, commencing September 9th, the initial production will be There's great Parisian success "Madame Bonafice." She will also appear at several of the popular Sunday Concerts at the Casino during the season.

The Little Duke.

ARGUMENT.

The first act takes place in the Palace of Louis XIV, where the nuptials of the Duke de Parthenay, (age 17) and Mlle. Blanche de Combrey, (age 16), are being celebrated, it is a mariage de convenance, on account of their youth they are to be separated immediately after the wedding. Frimousse, the tutor of the Duke takes the bride away to the Boarding school of Madame de Lausac. The Duke is left disconsolate and his friends joke him about his position. The Chevalier de Montaland arrives with the Regiment De Parthenay, giving orders to the Duke to take command as Colonel and to Frimousse that he is appointed Latin and Greek Professor at the Academy of Madame de Lausac. The Duke conceives the idea of going with his regiment, and rescuing his wife.

In act two the Duchesse is a pupil at Madame de Lausac's School. Montaland comes with a flag of truce to claim the Duchesse. Madam de Lausac loves to give her up and De Montaland leaves. The Duke then enters disguised as a peasant girl, discovers his wife who has been locked up. Frimousse makes love to the peasant girl the Duke when he steals his keys and releases the Duchesse. Unseen to be disappointed as Madame de Lausac refuses to let them go without an order from the King.

Act third, the scene is laid in the camp of the Regiment de Parthenay. The Dukes regiment have been victorious and he arrives here, he is sent for by the General Reserve his battle flies at the same time giving orders that all wives of officers are to be followed in camp. The Duke retires to his tent to sleep but is awakened by the discovery that his wife is in his tent having escaped from the school. Frimousse who has been drafted into the regiment sees the Duchesse in the Duke's tent. He immediately informs the general, who hearing his orders are disobeyed, commands the Duke to be executed, but remembering his valor in battle, the previous day, relents. The Duke is allowed to keep his wife and Frimousse is made Corporal.

FALKA.

Falka von Folbach is the niece of the Ritter von Folbach, governor of Mongratz, in Hungary who has also a nephew named Tancred von Folbach. The latter is an usher in a school in an obscure village called Grafenkirch. Falka is at school at a convent.

His Imperial Majesty, the Emperor of Austria, has promised Von Folbach a patent of nobility if the latter will procure an heir to the title. Von Folbach has no children of his own and so contrives the idea of marrying his nephew, Tancred, to Alexina von Ketirsch, a ward of the Emperor, with the view of thus securing an heir.

In the first act, old Von Folbach is at Mongratz, where the Lady Alexina arrives to be married to the Tancred.

Tancred has also been sent for. He is attacked and robbed by a band of Tzigani, and is left in the forest cold to die. From this unpleasant position he is released by Edwige, the sister of nobodies, on the condition that she shall marry her. He arrives at Mongratz torn and dishevelled, and finds himself at the inn of Jutchka, where his uncle, Folbach, is to receive Alexina. Here also we find Falka, who, in her convent dress, has eloped with Arthur, a young Hungarian lady. These two are followed hotly by the lay brother Perusin, the convent porter, and to escape him, Falka puts on Arthur's clothes, and fabricates herself to be his brother, Folbach, his nephew, Tancred.

Falka is granted an officer of hussars, and presented to the Lady Alexina as the lady's future husband.

Act II takes place in the ambassador hall of the governor's castle. Folbach determines to send Falka back to the convent, and the mistress of Arthur, whom we know as Falka in men, is forced obliged to personate her. Folbach and Falka take luncheon together, and Tancred, who is masquerading as a waiter to escape Bohémas and Edwige is compelled to serve them.

The Lady Alexina arrives, and wanting an excuse to walk alone with the supposed Tancred who is really Falka, sends the real Tancred (the waiter) to unpack her mail. Minna, to see the sports. Falka instantly offers to go to Minna instead, and so leaves Alexina and Tancred alone much to the former's disgust. Tancred makes love to Alexina, and Falka returns as the supposed lover.

Bohémas and Edwige then appear with their Tzigani following, and cause both Falka and Tancred to be arrested for the fulfillment of the promise to marry Edwige. Falka is discarded and in order to avoid a duel, confesses to Bohémas and Edwige that she is a woman, and prevails upon Bohémas to tell Folbach that he is an accomplice of Falka in the Kemadeck affair in order says that the young lady (Arthur) is coming back, and the curtain drops on a flash of confusion.

Act III. is laid on the battlements of the castle, where Tancred, in full hussar dress, is ready for his nuptials with Alexina, who however, dislikes him as much as she loved Falka. Folbach also has a great contempt for his nephew, and is incensed that through him only can he hope to secure his patent of nobility. Falka, as with Edwige, decided also as Falka, Arthur. The latter has made up her mind to marry Tancred, and meeting Lady Alexina, after much explanation, Falka results in the two wearing changing dresses, by which stratagem Tancred is deceived, and conducts Edwige to the altar, instead of Alexina.

Bohémas marries Alexina, and Falka is united to her faithful Arthur; the Emperor sending a special messenger to Folbach, giving his Imperial Majesty's consent to the settlement of a title on the Tancred.

Falka von Folbach is the niece of the Ritter von Folbach, governor of Mongrita, in Hungary who has also a nephew named Tancred von Folbach. The latter is an officer in a school in an adjacent city called Gratzkirsch. Falka is also at school at a convent.

His Imperial Majesty, the Emperor of Austria, has promised Von Folbach a patent of nobility if the latter will guarantee to bear to the throne. Von Folbach has no children of his own and so conceives the idea of marrying his nephew, Tancred, to Alexina von Ketchwalla, a ward of the Emperor, with the view of thus securing an heir to the throne.

Falka, the niece of Von Folbach is at Mongrita, where the Lady Alexina arrives to be entertained by Tancred.

Tancred has also been sent for. He is attacked and robbed by a band of Tzigani, and is left in the forest, bound to a tree. From this unpleasant position he is released by Edwige, the sister of Boleslas, on the condition that he shall marry her. He arrives at Mongrita torn and dishevelled, and finds himself at the inn of Jokolay, where his uncle, Folbach, is to receive Alexina. Here also we find Falka, who, in her convent dress, has eloped with Arthur, a young Hungarian boy. These two are followed hotly by the lay brother Peleas, the convent porter, and to escape him, Falka puts on Arthur's clothes, and introduces herself to her uncle, Folbach, as his nephew, Tancred.

She is greeted as an officer of hussars, and presented to the Lady Alexina as the lady's future husband.

Act II. takes place in the outdoor hall of the governor's castle. Folbach determines to send Falka back to the convent, and the unfortunate lad is boon companion Falka has taken to perforce obliged to personate her. Folbach and Falka take luncheon together, and Tancred, who is masquerading as a waiter to escape Boleslas and Edwige is compelled to serve them.

The Lady Alexina arrives, and unwilling an excuse to walk alone with the supposed Tancred who is really Falka, tells the real Tancred (the waiter), to take her mail, Minna, to see the Countess Falka hastily offers to do so Minna instead, and so leaves Alexina and Tancred alone—much to the former's disgust. Tancred declares love to Alexina, but the lady is furious at the supposed insult.

Boleslas and Edwige then appear with their Tzigani following, and attain from Falka (whom they suppose to be Tancred) the fulfilment of the promise of marriage. Falka is distressed, and in order to avoid a duel, confesses to Boleslas and Edwige that she is a woman, and breaks upon Boleslas to tell Folbach that he has assaulted. This the old Seneschal frobes in and says in the young lady Arthur's presence. Falka is, and the curtain drops on a final scene in the interior of the castle where Tancred, in full hussar dress, is ready for his marriage with Alexina, who has made up her mind to marry Tancred, and meeting Lady Alexina, an explanation ensues, which ends in the two young charming dresses, to which status in Tancred is decried, and consents forever to be true, instead of Alexina.

Boleslas marries Alexina, and Falka is united to her faithful Arthur; the Emperor sending a special messenger to Folbach, giving his Imperial Majesty's consent to the settlement of a title in the female line.

CASINO NOTES.

Refreshments are served on the buffet floor and roof garden.

Among the latest and most valuable works issued, "The Drama, Painting, Poetry and Song," by Mr. Albert Ellery Berg, ranks as one of the foremost. So carefully and judiciously has it been compiled, that it might justly be termed a Dramatic Encyclopedia. Its value to the patrons of the drama and to the theatrical profession cannot be over estimated. The work is handsomely bound, contains over 700 pages, exclusive of 400 illustrations of a high order of merit, and is issued from the publishing house of F. F. Collier, 15 and 17 Vandewater Street. It is sold by subscription only. Upon receipt of your address on a postal card their agent will call with sample copy.

Promenade Concerts take place each evening after the performance in the theatre, on the upper Music Pavilion.

There may be a few ladies who do not know that Button's Raven Gloss is the only Shoe Dressing that does not harden, scale nor crack leather.

Take the elevator for buffet floor and roof garden.

The Moet and Chandon Champagnes, so popular in years past, are once more coming to the front. The Green Seal, the White Seal and Gold Seal are now the fashionable wines, and the wines of the Elite—no dinner, ball, wedding, etc., being complete without them.—Knickerbocker.

The admission to the Casino including both entertainments is 50 cents.

SPECIAL NOTICE.—The orchestra chairs are arranged to fold by first lifting the seat by the wooden handle, the back will then fold of itself. It will conduce to the general convenience of exit if this is observed.

The ices, creams, salads, &c., served on the buffet floor and roof garden are from the Hotel Brunswick.

Everyone who has traveled on the West Shore R. R., is delighted with its excellent management, and on no road in the world can one travel so luxuriously and comfortably as on this popular route.

Grand Popular Concerts are given every Sunday evening at the Casino.

After the performance patrons should go to the old original oyster bay, 1460 Broadway.

FALKA.

Falka von Folbach is the niece of the Ritter von Folbach, governor of Slavonia, in Hungary who has since a secret marriage married von Folbach. She has grown up as an adopted child in the village called Gradschkarst. Falka is at school at a convent.

His imperial Majesty, the Emperor of Austria, has promised von Folbach a patent of nobility if the latter will guarantee an heir to the title. Von Folbach has no children of his own, and so conceives the idea of marrying his nephew, Tancred, to Alexina von Kelbarch, a ward of the Emperor, with the view of thus securing an heir.

In the first act, old von Folbach is at Mongratz, where the Lady Alexina arrives to be contracted to Tancred.

Tancred has also been sent for. He is attacked and robbed by a band of Tsigeni, and is left in the forest tied to a tree. From this unpleasant position he is released by Edwige, the sister of Boleslas, on the condition that he shall marry her. He arrives at Mongratz torn and disheveled, and finds himself at the inn of Jaucsha, where his uncle, Folbach, is to receive Alexina. Here also we find Falka, who, in her convent dress, has eloped with Arthur, a young Hungarian boy. These two are followed hotly by the lay brother Polican, the convent porter, and to escape him, Falka puts on Arthur's clothes, and introduces herself to her uncle, Folbach, as his nephew, Tancred.

She is granted an officer of hussars, and presented to the Lady Alexina as the lady's future husband.

Act II takes place in the audience hall of the governor's castle. Folbach determines to send Falka back to the convent, and the unfortunate Arthur, whose clothes Falka has taken, is perforce obliged to personate her. Folbach and Falka take luncheon together, and Tancred, who is unarmed, is ordered to escape Boleslas and Edwige is compelled to serve them.

The Lady Alexina arrives, and making an excuse to walk alone with the supposed Tancred who is really Falka, tells the real Tancred she wishes to take him as husband. To escape, he quits, but immediately offers to take Muna instead, and so leaves Alexina and Tancred alone much to the former's chagrin. Tancred makes love to Alexina, and the lady is furious at the supposed insult.

Boleslas and Edwige then appear with their Tsigeni following, and claim from Falka whom they suppose to be Tancred; the following dialogue ensues: Boleslas says, Falka denies, and is perforce obliged to send a challenge to Boleslas and Edwige that she is a woman, and not Tancred. Boleslas then tells how he has apologized, and how the old Seigneschal rushes in and says that the young lady (Arthur) is missing, and a search party is sent out on a chase of confusion.

Act III is laid on the battlements of the castle, where Tancred, in full Hussar dress, is ready for his nuptials with Alexina, who however, dislikes him as much as she loved Falka. Folbach also has a great contempt for his nephew, and is distressed that through him only can he hope to secure his patent of nobility. Boleslas, with Edwige, dressed also as a bride, arrive. The latter has made up her mind to marry Tancred, and meeting Lady Alexina, so expressed herself. Alexina, having had an interview with Falka in disguise of confession, which straightens Tancred is deceived, and conducts Edwige to the altar, instead of Alexina.

Boleslas marries Alexina, and Falka is united to her faithful Arthur, the Emperor sending a special messenger to Folbach, giving his Imperial Majesty's consent to the settlement of a title in the female line

CASINO NOTES.

SPECIAL ANNOUNCEMENT.—The beautiful Samuel Root-Garden will be opened Wednesday evening, May 7th. It will be brilliantly illuminated with hundreds of vari-colored lights and ornamented with flowers, plants and rare exotics. Promenade concerts will be given here by Rudolph Aronson's Orchestra after the performances in the theatre below by the McCaull Opera Comique Company.

Musin, the distinguished violin virtuoso, will appear at the next Sunday Casino Concert, May 4.

Among the latest and most valuable works issued, "The Drama, Painting, Poetry and Song," by Mr. Albert Ellery Berg, ranks as one of the foremost. So carefully and judiciously has it been compiled, that it might justly be termed a Dramatic Encyclopedia. Its value to the patrons of the drama and to the theatrical profession cannot be over estimated. The work is handsomely bound, contains over 700 pages, exclusive of 400 illustrations of a high order of merit, and is issued from the publishing house of F. F. Collier, 15 and 17 Vandewater Street. It is sold by subscription only. Upon receipt of your address on a postal card their agent will call with sample copy.

There may be a few ladies who do not know that Button's Raven Gloss is the only Shoe Dressing that does not harden, scale nor crack leather.

The Moet and Chandon Champagnes, so popular in years past, are once more coming to the front. The Green Seal, the White Seal and Gold Seal are now the fashionable wines, and the wines of the Elite; no dinner, ball, wedding, etc., being complete without them.—Anichebacher.

SPECIAL NOTICE.—The orchester chairs are arranged to fold by first lifting the seat by the wooden handle, the back will then fold of itself. It will conduce to the general convenience of exit if this is observed.

Everyone who has traveled on the West Shore R. R., is delighted with its excellent management, and on no road in the world can one travel so luxuriously and comfortably as on this popular route.

After the performance patrons should go to the old original oyster bay, 1460 Broadway.

FALKA.

Falka von Folbach is the niece of the Bitter von Folbach, governor of Mongratz, in Hungary, who has also a nephew named Tancred von Folbach. The latter is an usher in a school in an obscure village called Grudenbach. Falka is also a school-girl.

His Imperial Majesty, the Emperor of Austria, has promised von Folbach a patent of nobility if the latter will guarantee an heir to the title. Von Folbach has no children of his own, and so conceives the idea of marrying his brother, Tancred, to Alexina von Kolbirsch, a ward of the Emperor, with the view of thus securing an heir.

In the first act, old von Folbach is at Mongratz, where the Lady Alexina arrives to be contracted to Tancred.

Tancred has also been sent for. He is attacked and robbed by a band of Tzigani, and is left in the forest tied to a tree. From this unpleasant position he is released by Edwige, the suitor of Boleslas, on the condition that he shall marry her. He arrives at Mongratz torn and dishevelled, and finds himself at the inn of Janotha, where also resides Falbach, to receive Alexina. Here also is found Falka, who, in her convent dress, has eloped with arthur, a young Hungarian boy. These two are followed hotly by the lady brother Pelican, the convent portier, and to escape him, Falka puts on Arthur's clothes, and introduces herself to her uncle, Falbach, as his nephew, Tancred.

She is received as an officer of hussars, and presented to the Lady Alexina as the lady's future husband.

The second act opens in the great hall of the governor's castle. Folbach determines to send Falka off to the convent, and the unfortunate Arthur, whose clothes Falka has taken, is perforce obliged to personate her. Folbach and Falka take luncheon together, and Tancred, who is masquerading as a waiter to escape Bolesias and Edwige, is compelled to serve them.

The Lady Alexina arrives, and wanting an excuse to walk alone with the supposed Tancred who is really Falka, tells the real Tancred the watter, to take her maid, Minna, to soothe sports. Falka instantly offers to take Minna instead, and so leaves Alexina and Tancred alone much to the former's disgust. Tancred makes love to Alexina, and the lady is furious at his supposed insult.

Bolesias and Edwige then appear with their Tzigani following, and claim from Falka, whom they suppose to be Tancred, the fulfilment of the promise to marry Edwige. Falka is distracted, and in order to avoid a public confession to Bolesias and Edwige that she is a woman, and prevails upon Bolesias to tell Folbach that he has apologized. Then the old general rushes in and says that the young lady Arthur is coming back, and the curtain drops on a finale of confusion.

Act III is laid on the battlements of the castle, where Tancred, in full hussar dress, is ready for his nuptials with Alexina, who however, dislikes him so much as she loved Falka. Folbach also has a great contempt for his nephew, and is flattered that through him only can he hope to secure his patent of nobility. Bolesias, with Edwige and retinue also as a train, arrive. The latter has made up her mind to marry Tancred, and meeting Lady Alexina, an explanation ensues, which results in the two women changing dresses, by which stratagem Tancred is deceived, and conducts Edwige to the altar, instead of Alexina.

Bolesias marries Alexina, and Falka is united to her faithful Arthur, the former sending a telegraphic messenger to Folbach, giving his Imperial Majesty's consent to the settlement of a title in the female line.

CASINO NOTES.

Next Sunday Evening, 171st Grand Popular Concert. Rudolph Aronson's Orchestra and Eminent Soloists.

Among the latest and most valuable works issued, "The Drama, Painting, Poetry and Song," by Mr. Albert Ellery Berg, ranks as one of the foremost. So carefully and judiciously has it been compiled, that it might justly be termed a Dramatic Encyclopedia. Its value to the patrons of the drama and to the theatrical profession cannot be over estimated. The work is handsomely bound, contains over 200 pages, exclusive of 400 illustrations of a high order of merit, and is issued from the publishing house of F. F. Collier, 15 and 17 Vandewater Street. It is sold by subscription only. Upon receipt of your address on a postal card their agent will call with sample copy.

"Falka," the reigning London sensation, is to be presented on Monday evening, April 14, at the Casino, by the McCaull Opera Comique Company. The music is by Chassaigne; the libretto by Leterrier and Vanloo; English translation by Farnie.

There may be a few ladies who do not know that Button's Raven Gloss is the only Shoe Dressing that does not harden, scale norcrack leather.

In England the custom for the winner to give wine to a club is not uncommon, especially in the days of race dinners, but in this country it is a rarity. It was, however, inaugrated at the Fall Meeting of the Louisville Jockey Club, by the house of Moet & Chandon. All those connected with the turf, should not forget that for some years past these gentlemen have been liberal patrons of the American turf. The Moet & Chandon Wines are the best, purest, and cheapest Champagnes imported in the United States, and no sportsman should be without them.—Amerikecker.

SPECIAL NOTICE.—The orchester chairs are arranged to fold by first lifting the seat by the wooden handle. the back will then fold of itself. It will conduce to the general convenience of exit if this is observed.

Everyone who has traveled on the West Shore R. R., is delighted with its excellent management, and on no road in the world can one travel so luxuri-usly and comfortably as on this popular route.

After the performance patrons should go to the old original oyster bay, 1460 Broadway.

At the farewell Matinee of the "Merry War," on Saturday, April 12th, beautiful and specially designed souvenirs will be presented.

BUY YOUR WINDOW SHADES direct from the Factory. Having originated and introduced the now prevailing style of Dado shades, I am again to the front with several new and original Frenze designs for Shades. N. B.—All of my Shades are made on Lonsdale satin, are sized on both sides, and the color rubbed into the fabric by hand. Every Shade is warranted not to crack or part. They are lined with pure oil colors, and, unlike the Rogoods, will not fade. They can be retinted any color in any tint, as cheap as a white shade can be done up. I am the manufacturer of this quality of material, either in plain or gilt Shades. CHAS. EATON, 10 W. 14th St., near Macy's.

CASINO NOTES.

"Falka," the reigning London sensation, is to be presented on Monday evening, April 14, at the Casino, by the McCaull Opera Comique Company. The music is by Chassaigne; the libretto by Leterrier and Vanloo; English translation by Farnie.

Miss Rosalba Beecher has been especially engaged to assume the role of Violetta in "The Merry War."

Through the courtesy of M. S. Chambers, M. D., president of the West India Manufacturing Company, the little flacons of perfume were presented with the drums at the last "Souvenir" night at the Casino. The goods of this company have attained wonderful popularity in the past few years. The "Merry War Bouquet" was specially prepared for the occasion, and, being a delightful perfume, we trust it may become as popular as its attractive namesake. The retail store of this establishment is No. 40 West 23d Street.

In England the custom for the winner to give wine to a club is not uncommon, especially in the days of race dinners, but in this country it is a rarity. It was, however, inaugurated at the Fall Meeting of the Louisville Jockey Club, by the house of Moet & Chandon. All those connected with the turf, should not forget that for some years past these gentlemen have been liberal patrons of the American turf. The Moet & Chandon Wines are the best, purest, and cheapest Champagnes imported in the United States, and no sportsman should be without them.—Knickerbocker.

A great many ladies think the Casino the most popular place of amusement in the city, but they should all know that "Button's Raven Ghost" is the most popular Shoe Dressing in the city. Does not harden, scale nor crack leather.

SPECIAL NOTICE.—The orchester chairs are arranged to fold by first lifting the seat by the wooden handle, the back will then fold of itself. It will conduce to the general convenience of exit if this is observed.

Everyone who has traveled on the West Shore R. R., is delighted with its excellent management, and on no road in the world can one travel so luxuriously and comfortably as on this popular route.

After the performance patrons should go to the old original oyster bay, 1460 Broadway.

Only the finest materials and workmanship employed in producing the new Straight Mesh Cigarette, "CLOTH OF GOLD."

At the farewell Matinee of the "Merry War," on Saturday, April 12th, beautiful and specially designed souvenirs will be presented.

"FALKA"

The new Opera Comique by Chassaigne and Farnie, which achieved such a wonderful success by the McCaull Opera Comique Co. on its recent production in Philadelphia, will be presented at the Casino Monday, April 14.

The subjoined excerpts from the critiques of the Press of Philadelphia are substantially indorsed by

As expressed by

IMMENSE AUDIENCES.

"'Falka' has started on a long run. It made an unquestionable success."—Times.

"An instant and unqualified success. Characterized by vigor and humor. Immensely amusing."—Ledger.

"Afforded delight. The audience was throughly pleased. The melodies are charming."—Press.

"Achieved a signal and immediate success."—North American.

"An instantaneous and well deserved success. It is melodious, gay, and full of movement. The dialogue is full of wit."—Record.

"Beautifully put on the stage. Each scene witnessed its special triumph."—Inquirer.

"A signal success . . . due to the intrinsic merit of the work . . . and also to the very complete fashion in which it is mounted and represented."—Telegraph.

"An immediate and brilliant success. Theatre packed to overflowing."—Bulletin.

"'Falka' is a work of which everybody will say: 'I wanted that badly.' 'Falka' has come to stay."—Call.

Take Otis elevator for Buffet floor and Roof Garden.

The Queen's lace handkerchiefs were perfumed with "Wenck's Opera Bouquet" on Saturday night.

The Buffet Floor and Cafe is under the supervision of Mr. G. Dorval of the Brighton Beach Pier.

The summer portion of the Casino building will remain open until Oct. 1st.

Sunday evening next, July 22d, the 29th popular concert will take place at the Casino.

The new Casino building is a beauty; it is a fervid bit of color; shapely as an untrimmed tree, and in fact a perfect little poem in red brick.—Joaquin Miller.

A beautiful fountain will ornament the center of the summer garden on the roof in a few days.

Work on the Casino was commenced in March, '82. The whole of the design and the entire work was done under the immediate supervision of Messrs. KIMBALL & EDELL.

For dinner parties, social gatherings, pic-nics, fish-ing excursions, etc. use "Sutaine Sec," the high grade champagne. Try it at Buffet.

The grand cafe on the ground floor will be most elaborately when finished, it will be opened on or about September 1st.

The ice cream at the Casino is from the Brunswick Hotel.

"Sweet Bouquet" Cigarettes have a delicious flavor and are preferred by connoisseurs.

The admission to the Casino is 50 cents including operatic performances and promenade concerts.

M. Edward Remenyi, the eminent violinist and Mme. Teresa Carreno, the distinguished pianiste, appear at next Sunday's grand concert at the Casino.

SPECIAL NOTICE.—The orchestra chairs are arranged to fold by first lifting the seat by the wooden handle, the back will then fold of itself. It will conduce to the general convenience of exit if this is observed.

COMMENTS OF THE PRESS

ON THE

Buffet Floor & Summer Roof Garden of the Casino

The buffet floor and garden on the roof at the Casino were opened yesterday evening for the first time and were much admired by a large gathering of visitors. They cannot fail to be a most popular addition to the Casino's attractions.—HERALD.

The general effect is charming, and the delicious breeze which is to be found upon this roof is a consummation devoutly to be wished. Quiet nooks and inviting corners are abundant, and it would be difficult to conceive a more inviting place of resort for those who are compelled to remain in the City during the heated term.—TIMES.

The roof above is entirely open, provided with many seats and tables, and spaces for promenading. It is elaborately lighted with vari colored lamps, and profusely ornamented with masses of shrubs and flowers. Last night it was an animated scene, and the crowd which accupied it found a welcome refuge from the heat in the refreshing breeze which steadily blew across this height. The floor below was also most agreeable cool.—TRIBUNE.

Without any doubt New York has now, for the first time, a summer garden and a summer theatre combined which makes a place of amusement worthy of the metropolis.—WORLD.

It is decorated in the same lavish style as the rest of the building, so that one may now for a moderate sum dine surrounded by allthe magnificence of the Vanderbilts. Better, however, go up to the garden on the roof and enjoy one's self under the stars and the more brilliant arcades of colored lamps.—SUN.

The whole affair is at once unique and beautiful. The best of taste has been displayed by the management, and there is no doubt that New Yorkers will flock to this fresh attraction.—STAR.

The roof and buffet floor of the Casino were formally opened last night, and proved to be as distinct a success as the theatre has been heretofore.—TRUTH.

It was evident to those present that the Casino now supplies a long felt local want—an elegant, cool and well arranged summer garden.—MERCURY.

The summer roof garden of the Casino was opened last evening to the great delight and breezy satisfaction of the patrons of this popular resort. A large number of visitors "after the opera"—enjoyed the music of Mr. Rud. Aronson's well-trained orchestra and the pleasures of the promenade which the management had at last so admirably provided for them.—DISPATCH.

Words of Wisdom.

Mankind are not instantaneously corrupted—Villiany is always progressive—We decline from right, not suddenly, but step by step.—GOLDSMITH.

In age we should remember we have been young and in youth we are to be old.

Success is a rare paint—hides all the ugliness.

Vanity makes a man show much that discretion would conceal.

Always contradict ill report by personal merit.

Wisdom makes but a slow defense against trouble, though, at last, a sure one.

If you want a pleasant palatable champagne, neither too sweet nor too dry, with most exquisite bouquet and fullness of taste, try "Sataine Sec." Ask your grocer for it. Always on ice at Casino Buffet.

The single effort by which we stop short in the downward path to perdition, is itself a greater exertion of virtue than a hundred acts of justice.

Conscience is a coward, and those faults it has not strength enough to prevent, it seldom has justice enough to punish by accusing.

Wherever there is genius there is pride.

Any government that gives absolute preponderance to the many, is hostile to intellect; for intellect is necessarily confined to the few.—BULWER.

Yes, give us fun and laughter,
And hand the smile around;

They put us in the ground.

—"Do you see that young man going along there?" "Yes; what of it?" "He's got a girl on the brain." "Well, judging from his appearance the girl must have a soft sit."

Some old fellows when once they get started on "reminiscences," often make very extraordinary statements. One of these aged liars, who was telling of the early history of the metropolis, declared that he could remember the time when the Battery was considered "up town."

—An Arkansaw boy, writing from college in reply to his father's letter, said: "So you think that I am wasting my time in writing little stories for the local papers and cite Johnson's saying that the man who writes except for money is a fool. Well father, I shall act upon Dr. Johnson's suggestion, and write for money. Please send me $50 at once."—[Arkansaw Traveller.]

—"And so," says the narrator, closing his story, "they took him up to the cemetery in a gold mounted hearse, with four black horses and all the bands in the garrison playing the Dead March." "Very grand, I dessay," remarks his listener, "but I don't care for style. Going to the cemetery on foot is good enough for me."—[From the French.]

The waterphone, the new instrument to measure water, was placed before an old toper's nose and it immediately exploded with such force that pieces flew for fifteen miles and stunned a man who was perched on a whiskey barrel preaching a temperance sermon.

A farmer not long since attended a theatrical performance for the second time in his life. He was very indignant next day and we asked him what was the matter. "I'll never go to another theatre as long as I live." "Why, what occurred to prejudice you against the theatres?" "Well, I liked the first act first rate, but when it was nearly through I read on the play bill that the next act would take place in Chicago, and I got up and left.

SPECIAL ATTRACTION.

The Imperial Hungarian Band, Horvath Mista, Leader, having concluded its engagement at the World's Fair, where it received the first and only prize awarded by the Fair Officials as being the best Band on the grounds, has been secured by THE COLUMBIA, on Union Square. Concerts will be given on the second floor every afternoon and evening. The Celebrated Vienna Court Band Concerts at the same time on the first floor as usual. These two bands are without exception the best ever heard in America. The public are cordially invited to listen, without expense, to their wonderful rendering of the choicest music. Parties desiring the services of either band, at a reasonable price, for Receptions, Musicales, Balls, Etc., can apply at the office of The Columbia.

The amount of Huyler's candy shipped by mail and express to the country is something surprising. The out of town trade seems to be growing every year, and this year, more than ever, ladies and gentlemen are remembering their friends in the country in this very appropriate manner.

The candies are neatly and properly boxed, and reach their destination in as perfect and fresh a condition as that in which they leave the factory.

Everybody knows the purity and excellence of Huyler's confections. They have always been the standard goods in the market, and nothing seems to please a lady more than a box of these delightful sweetmeats.

Huyler's stores are so easily accessible—down town at Broadway corner Liberty Street, and up-town at 865 Broadway, and 42d Street near the Grand Central Depot—that it makes it a very easy matter to drop in and place orders for shipping purposes, which always receive prompt and careful attention.

A BEAUTIFUL BOOK FOR FOUR CENTS.

The Illustrated Catalogue of the Four-Track Series, New York Central books and etchings, is a beautiful little book describing fifteen other beautiful books and eight charming etchings. It will be sent free, post paid, to any address in the world on receipt of two 2-cent stamps, by George H. Daniels, General Passenger Agent, Grand Central Station, New York.

An Echo from the World's Fair.

The Lake Shore Route has recently gotten out a very handsome litho-water color of the "Exposition Flyer," the famous twenty hour train in service between New York and Chicago during the Fair. Among the many wonderful achievements of the Columbian year this train—which was the fastest long-distance train ever run—holds a prominent place and to anyone interested in the subject, the picture is well worth framing. Ten cents in stamps or silver sent to C. K. Wilber, Western Passenger Agent, Chicago, or A. J. Smith General Passenger Agent, Cleveland, O., will secure one.

Jones—You may say what you please, but this country has never produced a greater man than George Washington. Smith—Don't talk so loud. There is a little dude sitting right behind us, and it might hurt his feelings to hear you talk that way.

The grasshopper has, according to its size, 120 times the kicking power of an average man. There must be exciting times for the young grasshoppers when they go courting and find the old man at home.

If they keep on improving war-ships the world will have to remain at peace for fear of war.

The giraffe has never been known to utter a sound. The giraffe is evidently not an office seeker

The Mother—I want to buy a dog for my little girl. Is that fierce-looking animal of yours really fond of children? The Dog Fancier—He is indeed, mum. He came near eating two of my little ones yesterday.

Dudely—We are going to start a new fad, Miss Fannie. Miss Fannie—What is it? Dudely—We are going to ride in the village cart drawn by a donkey. Miss Fannie—In that case there will very frequently be a donkey in the cart as well as between the shafts.

"That tree yonder has been standing over two hundred years," said the guide pointing at one of the kings of the forest. "I should think it would be awful tired, replied a Boston girl.

The accommodations for banquets, private dinners or theatre parties at The Columbia, on Union Square, are such as to make even the most exacting delighted with the almost inexhaustible resources of this wonderful place. To fully appreciate the banquet rooms they must be seen. No pen can do justice to their luxurious furnishings. The prices are very moderate. The banquet rooms have been enlarged to twice the former capacity.

CASINO ROOF GARDEN
In a Fresh Budget of Character Songs.

THE Frontispiece of this Programme is of an unusual classic design, and has been executed by an artist who appreciates appropriate ornamentation. The lyre, decorated with figures, trumpets, pipes and mask, embraces a bust of Miss Della Fox; back of this and the waving palm branches is a beautiful bas-relief of scroll and feathered songsters singing; all are significant of music and drama, while in execution and arrangement they are artistic and chaste. The eye is pleased and the design is freed from an abrupt ending by skillful vignetting. It was designed by Artist Higby, Chief of Art Room of Frank V. Strauss, Advertising Agent and Programme Publisher.

PREFACE.

"Good things and new!" claim this who could
In one short night's review;
Since new things are so seldom good,
And good so seldom new.
So though old friends we bring to view,
Let kindly critics add,
"Yet, there were new things one or two,
And truly not half bad."

The Japanese jute and cotton rugs that are now being sold in vast quantities by A. A. Vantine & Co., 877, 879 Broadway, New York, are extremely desirable for use in either the city, country, seaside or mountain home. They are clean and wear extremely well, and are made in new and handsome designs and tasteful colorings that are sure to please. These rugs are made of carefully picked material, and great care is exercised during the weaving of both kinds. In no other regard than cost are they "cheap" good, either in manufacture or appearance. here is no finer assortment in the entire city than that in the establishment of A. A. Vantine & Co.

He, bitterly: "Pshaw! All women are alike!" She: "Then why in the world do you spend so much time trying to find the one you want to marry?"

Farmer Oatcake—Hello, policeman! what sort o' swindle is that thing stuck on the lamp-post? Officer—That's the postoffice box, sor. Oatcake—It is, eh? Why hang it! I dropped my nickel in the slot, but nary a stamp has come out.

A New Insurance

Is something that will interest almost everybody in the civilized world. The eminent and distinguished Dr. Guernsey, of Fifth Avenue, New York, says that ADAMS' PEPSIN TUTTI-FRUITTI not only insures perfect digestion, but also corrects any odor of the breath.

Dr. Cyrus Edson, President Health Board, New York City, also endorses ADAMS' PEPSIN TUTTI-FRUTTI as a preventative of Dyspepsia.

All tire makers are now advertising their 1894 Pneumatic Tires. As in former years, with the single exception of the G. & J. Pneumatic, all are radically different in construction from the "perfect" tires of last year and the year before. The 1894, the 1893, the 1892 and the 1891 G. & J. Pneumatic Tires are identical. They were perfect in 1891; they are perfect now. We fit them to all makes of safety bicycles. Are not you tired of experimenting for other manufacturers?

GORMULLY & JEFFERY MFG. CO., 1769 and 1771 Broadway, cor. 57th Street.

A beautiful black material, to be commended not only for evening, but for summer-time wear, is Priestley's silk and wool Mousseline. It is light in weight, silky in texture, and like all the goods that come from this manufacturer, it is a perfect black.

"When you return from Chicago," remember that the Exposition Flyer, via the Lake Shore Route, leaves Chicago every day at 1 P. M., reaching New York the next morning at 11.15, five hours faster than via any other line. Sleeping-car reservations for this train should be made as far in advance as possible.
C. K. WILBER, W. P. A., A. J. SMITH, G. P. & T. A., Chicago. Cleveland.

For the summer no material can be more appropriate for dressy occasions than Priestley's Clairette, a fine lustrous fabric, that drapes beautifully. Dresses of Clairette can be charmingly trimmed with either lace or jet.

Mrs. Plume: Don't you think my new bonnet is a perfect dream? Plume: Yes and a mighty bad one.

'There are no flies on your papa," remarked a gray-haired Detroit widower to his lively and lovely daughter. "Yes, papa," she responded softly, as her pretty fingers tangled in his silver locks, "yes there are—time flies."

ARTHUR WAS ALL RIGHT.—"O, Papa" cried the sweet girl, "I hope you didn't hurt Arthur!" "Hurt nothing!" yelled the old man, limping around and holding his foot in his hand. "Hurt nothing! And you tell Arthur that the next time he comes around here with bricks in his coat-tail pockets there'll be blood! Wong! My foot's broken!"

Not a Lottery Concern.

CIUDAD DE SANTO DOMINGO, May 20.

To the Editor of the Press:

Sir—In your issue of the 15th inst., you state that the Santo Domingo Guaranty Company is simply the Santo Domingo Lottery Company in disguise, and criticise the action of the United States Consul, John H. Read.

I desire to state that you have been misinformed. Although both the Santo Domingo Guaranty Company and the Santo Domingo Lottery Company are corporations chartered by the Santo Dominican Government, they have nothing in common except that the Santo Domingo Guaranty Company has, on one or two occasions, acted as agent for the Santo Domingo Lottery Company in direct transmission of funds. Sincerely, ANTONIO MORA.

Are you giving a banquet, a theatre party, a wedding reception, an entertainment or a dancing party? The Columbia, on Union Square, offers inducements that are irresistible. Magnificent banquet rooms, accommodating 10 to 1,000 persons. Ball-room and finest orchestra for dancing or entertainment furnished gratis. A visit to our rooms and prices obtained is sufficient to insure your patronage. The only first-class establishment in the city with ample accommodations for a large banquet.

The most useful traveling cloaks are made of Priestley's Cravenettes, and are long enough to cover the entire figure. Such cloaks will shake the dust off easily, and will keep you dry in the heaviest shower.

The best table d'hote dinner in this city is served daily from 5 to 8 P. M. by The Columbia, on Union Square. Price, 75 cents. Charming music afternoon and evening. Handsomest dining rooms in the world. Open until 1 A. M.

Young Dr. Kallowmell—Mr. Cumso, suppose you suggest to me a good motto for a young physician who is striving to work up a practice. Cumso—How does "Live and Let Live" strike you?

"You have missed your vocation," said Fogg, as he gazed at the typewritten letter his stenographer handed to him, "You should conduct a missing word contest."

People who imagine the average message boy can do nothing quick, will be surprised to learn that one has been discovered fast asleep.

Frank—Your cheek is all swollen up. What caused it? Joe—I made a bet with Jones. He bet that inside of twenty-four hours a painful accident would happen to me, and just as the twenty-four hours were up he hit me a whack on the jaw and won the money.

WHERE MONEY IS MADE.

Agricultural and horticultural pursuits in the region east of the Rocky Mountains are attended by the hard conditions of close competition. It is only by the exercise of superior industry and intelligence that more than a bare subsistence is possible. In California the situation is entirely different. In that State certain articles are produced which cannot be grown in any other State of the Union; they are costly articles of consumption, which are grown elsewhere only in foreign countries and imported thence into the United States under heavy expense for transportation and customs charges. The California fruit grower thus has special advantages enjoyed nowhere else in this country, and in this way the surprising profits which he secures are accounted for. All the staple articles common to the other States may be grown in California, and at a larger profit than anywhere else; but the largest profits are made in the articles which are produced in Asia Minor and semi-tropic Europe, such as olives and and olive oil, Smyrna figs, fancy wines and, rare, table grapes, oranges, lemons, and a long list of other products. It is much easier to get a start in California than one might suppose, the various colony enterprises especially offering easy conditions. There are no bitter cold days when work is impossible, and some kind of crop may be made to grow at any time of the year. The climate is mild, bracing and healthful. Women especially have more opportunities for making money at pleasant occupations than anywhere else in the world.

For further information, freight or ticket rates, free illustrated pamphlets maps and time tables, address the following representatives of the Southern Pacific Co., who also sell tickets to Texas, Mexico, China, Japan, Australia and Honolulu: E. Hawley, Ass't Gen'l Traffic Manager; L. H. Nuting, Eastern Passenger Agent, 349 Broadway, or 1 Battery Place (Washington Building), New York.

It seems parodoxical, but it is true all the same, that though you write a stanza of poetry to your girl, it will yet be averse to her.

An agricultural paper advises the farmer to count his sheep every day. His time can't be of much ewes to him if he can afford to do that.

"The mad bull rushed down the street until he was confronted by two policemen, and then he was puzzled to know what to do." "Did he finally decide?" "Not until he had tossed up a copper."

NO CAUSE FOR ALARM.—Wife: The cat is in the pantry eating the cold steak. Come and drive her out. Husband: Is that the steak you cooked for dinner? Wife: Yes. Husband: Then, I reckon, the cat's gone already.

SCENE: Crystal Palace. Yankee Visitor addressing a policman on duty)—I calculate, stranger, that if they keep you much longer under this glass roof you'll be in a fair way of sprouting. Robert (disparagingly)—No fear of that, guv'nor; they don't keep me moist enough.

Kind Father: My dear, if you want a good husband, marry Mr. Goodheart. He really and truly loves you. Daughter: Are you sure of that, pa? Kind Father: Yes, indeed. I've been borrowing money of him for six months, and still he keeps coming.

NEW, LARGE AND HANDSOME.

The new building of Bloomingdale Bros. on 59th Street, adjoining their present immense quarters, is a very handsome structure. It is 187 feet front by 100 feet deep, six stories above the ground and two floors below. This one section alone is larger than the entire plant of some houses that claim to be the largest in New York. The various departments of dry and fancy goods, furniture, carpets, etc., will be greatly enlarged when this building is opened.

A VALID OBJECTION—"What do you think of annexing Canada and Mexico to the United States?" "Bad scheme. Our climate varies too much already."

"Oh, will she smile upon my suit?" he sang. "She will if you wear them clothes," said his old-fashioned grandmother, with a glance at his spring suit.

"Townes told me that he was going to kick Foster for talking about him. Did he get satisfaction?" "I suppose so. I met Townes yesterday on crutches, with his head bandaged, and from what I saw I inferred that at any rate he was satisfied."

But you are surely mad! How can you think of borrowing money on those terms, and from people of that stamp?" "My dear fellow," replied Gontran, "better go to a scamp who lends you money at fifteen per cent. than to an honest man who refuses you at five."

Patient—"You practice the faith cure, eh?" Physician—"To some extent." Patient—"Is it good for much?" Physician "Oh, about two thousand a year."

A Coming Logician.—A small boy, to punish his elder brother for breaking one of his toys, set to work kicking an unfortunate puppy which belonged to both in common. His mother checked and rebuked him, adding, "Remember that poor Nip belongs to you as well as Jack." "Oh, I know that," replied Nip's tormentor. "but I'm only kicking Jack's half."

The accommodations for banquets, private dinners or theatre parties at The Columbia, on Union Square, are such as to make even the most exacting delighted with the almost inexhaustible resources of this wonderful place To fully appreciate the banquet rooms they must be seen. No pen can do justice to their luxurious furnishings. The prices are very moderate. The banquet rooms have been enlarged to twice the former capacity.

Mrs. Blim—Your husband doesn't seem to be rejoicing like other people on his country's birthday. Mrs. Scadds—No. He has most of his money invested in a fire insurance company.

Mrs Mugg—Is the photographer in? Boy—No m but he'll be in soon. Mrs. Mugg—I want some pictures taken, but I won't pay for 'em if they don't suit. Boy—Oh, they'll be sure to please you, mum. By the time they're all finished up they won't look like you a bit.

THE Frontispiece of this Programme is of an unusual classic design, and has been executed by an artist who appreciates appropriate ornamentation. The lyre, decorated with figures, trumpets, pipes and mask, embraces a bust of Miss Lillian Russell; back of this and the waving palm branches is a beautiful bas-relief of scroll and feathered songsters singing; all are significant of music and drama, while in execution and arrangement they are artistic and chaste. The eye is pleased and the design is freed from an abrupt ending by skillful vignetting. It was designed by Artist Higby, Chief of Art Room of Strauss & Klee, Advertising Agents and Programme Publishers.

Not a Lottery Concern.

CIUDAD DE SANTO DOMINGO, May 30.

To the Editor of the Press:

SIR—In your issue of the 15th inst., you state that the Santo Domingo Guaranty Company is simply the Santo Domingo Lottery Company in disguise, and criticise the action of the United States Consul, John H. Read.

I desire to state that you have been misinformed. Although both the Santo Domingo Guaranty Company and the Santo Domingo Lottery Company are corporations chartered by the Santo Dominican Government, they have nothing in common except that the Santo Domingo Guaranty Company has, on one or two occasions, acted as agent for the Santo Domingo Lottery Company in the transmission of funds. Sincerely, ANTONIO MORA.

THE HARDMAN PIANO is not only "the only piano which improves under usage"—as remarked by a well-known expert recently—but it contains more varieties of musical tone and greater power than any other instrument. The beautiful patterns of casings now used in this famous piano also add much to its attractions. The popularity of the "Hardman" is now extending throughout Great Britain as well as America. HARDMAN, PECK & CO., Manufacturers, 19th Street and Fifth Avenue.

Are you giving a banquet, a theatre party, a wedding reception, an entertainment or a dancing party? The Columbia, on Union Square, offers inducements that are irresistible. Magnificent banquet rooms, accommodating 10 to 1,000 persons. Ball-room and finest orchestra for dancing or entertainment furnished gratis. A visit to our rooms and prices obtained is sufficient to insure your patronage. The only first-class establishment in the city with ample accommodations for a large banquet.

FRAGRANT

SOZODONT

It neutralizes every element of impurity that effects the soundness or whiteness of the teeth. Moreover, it prevents gum-boil and canker. Sozodont should be used by every one who values a good set of teeth. It has none of the acid properties of tooth pastes, etc., and instead of contracting the gums, renders them firm and elastic. All disagreeable odors arising from the breath are neutralized by the use of Sozodont.

NEW, LARGE AND HANDSOME.

The new building of Bloomingdale Bros. on 59th Street, adjoining their present immense quarters, is a very handsome structure. It is 187 feet front by 200 feet deep, six stories above the ground and two below. This one section alone is larger than the entire plant of some houses that claim to be the largest in New York. The various departments of dry and fancy goods, furniture, carpets, etc., will be greatly enlarged when this building is opened.

The Supreme Court of this (New York) state has just issued an injunction forbidding druggists and others selling as Vaseline any imitative article, whether it contains a label or not, it also forbids the vending or offering for sale as Vaseline of any imitation thereof, or from affixing or applying to any such substance, either by means of writing, printing or word of mouth, any word or combination of letters or sounds resembling our trade mark, Vaseline. The Company requests that any person who may be deceived in this way will immediately send word to us, and the offender will be punished.

The amount of Huyler's candy shipped by mail and express to the country is something surprising. The out of town trade seems to be growing every year, and this year, more than ever, ladies and gentlemen are remembering their friends in the country in this very appropriate manner.

The candies are daintily and properly boxed, and reach their destination in as perfect and fresh a condition as that in which they leave the factory.

Everybody knows the purity and excellence of Huyler's confections. They have always been the standard goods in the market, and nothing seems to please a lady more than a box of these delightful sweetmeats.

Huyler's stores are so easily accessible—down town at Broadway corner Liberty Street, and uptown at 865 Broadway, and 42d Street near the Grand Central Depot—that it makes it a very easy matter to drop in and place orders for shipping purposes, which always receive prompt and careful attention.

WHERE MONEY IS MADE.

Agricultural and horticultural pursuits in the region east of the Rocky Mountains are attended by the hard condition of close competition. It is only by the exercise of superior industry and intelligence that more than a bare subsistence is possible. In California the situation is entirely different. In that State certain articles are produced which cannot be grown in any other State of the Union; they are costly articles of consumption, which are grown elsewhere only in foreign countries and imported thence into the United States under heavy expense for transportation and customs charges. The California fruit grower thus has special advantages enjoyed nowhere else in this country, and in this way the surprising profits which he secures are accounted for. All the staple articles common to the other States may be grown in California, and at a larger profit than anywhere else; but the largest profits are made in the articles which are produced in Asia Minor and semi-tropic Europe, such as olives and olive oil, Smyrna figs, fancy wines and raisins, rare table grapes, oranges, lemons, and a long list of other products. It is much easier to get a start in California than one might suppose, the various colony enterprises especially offering easy conditions. There are no bitter cold days when work is impossible, and some kind of crop may be made to grow at any time of the year. The climate is mild, bracing and healthful. Women especially have more opportunities for making money and pleasant occupations than anywhere else in the world.

FRAGRANT

SOZODONT

It neutralizes every element of impurity that effects the soundness or whiteness of the teeth. Moreover, it prevents gum-boil and canker. Sozodont should be used by every one who values a good set of teeth. It has none of the acid properties of tooth pastes, etc., and instead of contracting the gums, renders them firm and elastic. All disagreeable odors arising from the breath are neutralized by the use of Sozodont.

Kinetoscope—the literal meaning signifies "moving scenes". At 1155 Broadway, near 29th Street, are on view this marvelous machine, produced by the fertile brain of Thomas A. Edison. Here can be seen in miniature the actual living reproduction of the muscular posing of Sandow, celebrated dancers and comic scenes from everyday life, in perfect reality; every motion, no matter how minute, is faithfully defined, and can be studied and taken in by the retina even more thoroughly than the actual living scenes from which they are taken. A field of amusement and instruction that everyone should see. Change of subjects on this week.

Not a Lottery Concern.

CIUDAD DE SANTO DOMINGO, May 20.

To the Editor of the Press:

SIR—In your issue of the 13th inst., you state that the Santo Domingo Guaranty Company is simply the Santo Domingo Lottery Company in disguise, and criticise the action of the United States Consul, John H. Read.

I desire to state that you have been misinformed. Although both the Santo Domingo Guaranty Company and the Santo Domingo Lottery Company are corporations chartered by the Santo Dominican Government, they have nothing in common except that the Santo Domingo Guaranty Company has, on one or two occasions, acted as agent for the Santo Domingo Lottery Company in direct transmission of funds. Sincerely, ANTONIO MORA.

VASELINE

EVERYBODY knows the great value of this remedy in the household, but everybody does not know that the imitations of it, which some second class druggists dishonorably palm off on their customers, have little or no value. What should be understood by the public is, that it is not a mere question of comparative value between "Vaseline" and the imitations, but that the imitations do not effect the wonderful healing results of the world renowned "Vaseline," and that they are not the same thing nor made in the same way. Besides this, many of the imitations are harmful, irritant and not safe to use, while true Vaseline is perfectly harmless.

Perfect safety therefore lies in buying only original packages put up by and marked with our name.

WHAT ARE

PRIESTLEY'S

"Cravenette"

They are waterproofed fabrics for dresses and wraps.

They are not malodorous, air-tight materials, like rubber-coated goods, giving one a Turkish bath in one's own vapors; nor are they like any other waterproofed fabrics.

They are indistinguishable in appearance and odor from the same goods not waterproofed.

They are porous to the air, and yet absolutely rain-proof.

They can be submitted to any amount of hard usage and heat without losing their water-resisting qualities.

They shed dust perfectly; therefore, a wrap, cloak or dress made from a Cravenette fabric will serve the double purpose of a rain and a dust protector.

They are to be had in both light weight and medium weight goods, in the following colors:

MYRTLE,		TAN,
NAVY,	BLACK,	MOKA,
BROWN,		GRAY.

A Cravenette garment is an indispensable comfort.

THE frontispiece of this Programme is of an unusual classic design, and has been executed by an artist who appreciates appropriate ornamentation. The type, decorated with figures, trumpets, pipes and mask, embraces a bust of Miss Lillian Russell; back of this and the waving palm branches is a beautiful bas-relief of scroll and feathered songsters singing; all are significant of music and drama, while in execution and arrangement they are artistic and chaste. The eye is pleased and the design is freed from an abrupt ending by skillful vignetting. It was designed by Artist Higby, Chief of Art Room of Strauss & Kibe, Advertising Agents and Programme Publishers.

The accommodations for banquets, private dinners or theatre parties at The Columbia, on Union Square, are such as to make even the most exacting delighted with the almost inexhaustible resources of this wonderful place. To fully appreciate the banquet rooms they must be seen. No pen can do justice to their luxurious furnishings. The prices are very moderate. The banquet rooms have been enlarged to twice the former capacity

"Yes—I'm in the lecture business," said the long-haired passenger, "and I'm making money I've got a scheme, I have, and it works to a charm—big houses wherever I go." "A scheme?" "Yes. I always advertise that my lectures are especially for women under thirty years of age and men out of debt. You just ought to see the way people come trooping in!"

Something new in an imported cotton wash fabric has recently been imported by Vantine, 879 and 879 Broadway. It is known as Japanese Taroriyoka Cotton Crepe, and appears in all the newest stripes and checks. On account of its elasticity and absolutely fast color, it is predicted that this fabric will be in great demand for summer wear and "outing" dresses.

FRAGRANT
SOZODONT
It neutralizes every element of impurity that effects the soundness or whiteness of the teeth. Moreover, it prevents gum-boil and canker. Sozodont should be used by every one who values a good set of teeth. It has none of the acid properties of tooth pastes, etc., and instead of contracting the gums, renders them firm and elastic. All disagreeable odors arising from the breath are neutralized by the use of Sozodont.

NEW, LARGE AND HANDSOME.

The new building of Bloomingdale's Bros. on 59th Street, adjoining their present immense quarters, is a very handsome structure. It is 187 feet front by 200 deep, six stories above the ground and two floors below. This one section alone is larger than the entire plant of some houses that claim to be the largest in New York. The various departments of dry and fancy goods, furniture, carpets, etc., will be greatly enlarged when this building is opened.

The Supreme Court of this (New York) state has just issued an injunction forbidding druggists and others selling as Vaseline any imitative article, whether it contains a label or not; it also forbids the vending or offering for sale as Vaseline of any imitation thereof, or from aiming or applying to any such substance, either by means of writing, printing or word of mouth, any word or combination of letters or sounds resembling our trade mark, Vaseline. The Company requests that any person who may be deceived in this way will immediately send word to us, and the offender will be punished.

VASELINE

EVERYBODY knows the great value of this remedy in the household, but everybody does not know that the imitations of it, which some second class druggists dishonorably palm off on their customers, have little or no value. What should be understood by the public is, that it is not a mere question of comparative value between "Vaseline" and the imitations, but that the imitations do not effect the wonderful healing results of the world renowned "Vaseline," and that they are not the same thing nor made in the same way. Besides this, many of the imitations are harmful, irritant and not safe to use, while true Vaseline is perfectly harmless.

Perfect safety therefore lies in buying only original packages put up by and marked with our name.

WHAT ARE

"Cravenettes"

They are waterproofed fabrics for dresses and wraps.

They are not malodorous, air-tight materials, like rubber-coated goods, giving one a Turkish bath in one's own vapors; nor are they like any other waterproofed fabrics.

They are indistinguishable in appearance and odor from the same goods not waterproofed.

They are porous to the air, and yet absolutely rain-proof.

They can be submitted to any amount of hard usage and heat without losing their water-resisting qualities.

They shed dust perfectly; therefore, a wrap, cloak or dress made from a Cravenette fabric will serve the double purpose of a rain and a dust protector.

They are to be had in both light weight and medium weight goods, in the following colors:

MYRTLE,		TAN,
NAVY,	BLACK,	MOKA,
BROWN,		GRAY.

A Cravenette garment is an indispensable comfort.

ALL GENUINE "Cravenette" GOODS ARE STAMPED ON THE BACK OF EVERY YARD WITH THE REGISTERED TRADE MARK, "Cravenette"

THE frontispiece of this Programme is of an unusual classic design, and has been executed by an artist who appreciates appropriate ornamentation. The lyre, decorated with figures, trumpets, pipes and mask, embraces a bust of Miss Lillian Russell; back of this and the waving palm branches is a beautiful bas-relief of scroll and feathered songsters singing; all are significant of music and drama, while in execution and arrangement they are artistic and chaste. The eye is pleased and the design is freed from an abrupt ending by skillful vignetting. It was designed by Artist Higby, Chief of Art Room of Strauss & Kline, Advertising Agents and Programme Publishers.

The accommodations for banquets, private dinners or theatre parties at The Columbia, on Union Square, are such as to make even the most exacting delighted with the almost inexhaustible resources of this wonderful place. To fully appreciate the banquet rooms they must be seen. No pen can do justice to their luxurious furnishings. The prices are very moderate. "Something new!" What magic in those words We of the nineteenth century are restless, fickle people, and to us those two words ring out with a charm irresistable, and we go in search of this something new, whether it is a painting by a renowned artist or a style recently displayed on some fair lady in a store window. Just now the newest thing of interest to womankind is a new cloth, the "Bradley," made the fact that it is black and made by Priestley proclaims that it is worth while to make a tour of the stores in quest of it.

YOU CAN DO IT YOURSELF.

should have pretty pearly teeth behind them. To make the teeth pearly and to keep them so there is nothing like

FRAGRANT

SOZODONT

It neutralizes every element of impurity that effects the soundness or whiteness of the teeth. Moreover, it prevents gum-boil and canker. Sozodont should be used by every one who values a good set of teeth. It has none of the acid properties of tooth pastes, etc., and instead of contracting the gums, renders them firm and elastic. All disagreeable odors arising from the breath are neutralized by the use of Sozodont.

NEW, LARGE AND HANDSOME.

The new building of Bloomingdale Bros. on 59th Street, adjoining their present immense quarters, is a very handsome structure. It is 167 feet front by 100 feet deep, six stories above the ground and two floors below. This one section alone is larger than the entire plant of some houses that claim to be the largest in New York. The various departments of dry and fancy goods, furniture, carpets, etc., will be greatly enlarged when this building is opened.

The Supreme Court of this (New York) state has just issued an injunction forbidding druggists and others selling as Vaseline any imitative article, whether it contains a label or not; it also forbids the vending or offering for sale as Vaseline of any imitation thereof, or from alluding or applying to any such substance, either by means of writing, printing or word of mouth, any word or combination of letters or sounds resembling our trade mark, Vaseline. The Company requests that any person who may be deceived in this way will immediately send word to us, and the offender will be punished.

Open from June 1st to October 1st.

Umbrellas have a widespread popularity.

After the pickpocket has succeeded in getting his hand in he takes things easily.

If a man is at church when the fire bell rings he is more apt to think the fire may be in his house and rush home than he is at a dollar entertainment.

"Johnny," said a mother to a son nine years old, "go and wash your face. I am ashamed to see you coming to dinner with such a dirty mouth." "I did wash it, mama;" and, feeling his upper lip, he added gravely: "I think it must be my mustache tummin."

Every woman is asking, "What shall I wear to the the Chicago Fair?" Now, after twenty-four hours of travel one's gown is apt to be crumpled and dusty, and if one really wants to look smart on arrival the proper thing to have is a dust cloak of Priestley's Cravenette, either in brown, moka or black. This material is so woven that it lets the air go through without the dust, and it is water proof. To be dust-proof and water-proof, is something that cannot be said about many materials, but of the Cravenette it can be said truthfully that it is not only dust-proof and water-proof, but it is extremely stylish.

It seems paradoxical, but it is true all the same, that though you write a stanza of poetry to your girl, it will yet be averse to her.

Mr. Joseph Oudin, for several years the special New York representative of the Baltimore American, has resigned that position and is now doing a general advertising business. He has handsome offices in the Times Building and though he has but recently started, he already has a fine line of clients. Mr. Oudin is a hustler, he understands the advertising busines thoroughly, and his reputation for business integrity is A1. If hard work, intelligent and conscientious service and a wide personal popularity can contribute to the building up of a successful advertising business, Mr. Oudin's prospects are very bright indeed.

THE JOURNALIST.

July 8th.

The name of the college photographer is an enigma. Some call him Pash, others make it Park; the next says Pack, and others, Parsh. One puzzled individual spellingly inquired for Mr. P-a-c-h. The swell Harvard man talks of Pock; at Princeton we hear of Patch; West Point, with military precision, votes for Patch; while the sweet little Vassarites, with the dearest little French accent in this world, affectionately speaks of Monsieur Parr. Wesleyan likes Potch; Dartmouth, Parch; Williams, Parh. It is rumored that the gentleman in question calls himself, with true German accent, Pach.—Yale Courant.

From Rev. Justin Harsha, D.D., Pastor Second Collegiate Reformed Church, Harlem, N.Y., on the Morrell Liquor Cure:

"Having known Dr. Morrell for several years, and having abundant opportunity to observe the efficacy of his cure upon the most obdurate cases, I take great pleasure in commending both him and it to the public. The cure will save any man or woman who will faithfully try it. It is a priceless boon to humanity, and may God bless it and speed it on its way."

SCENE—A Square in a Sicilian Village. HENRY E. HOYT.

ARGUMENT.

The story is taken from a book of tales by Giovanni Verga. Turiddu, a young Sicilian, before leaving his native village to serve his allotted time as a soldier, has for a sweetheart, Lola, a pretty and heartless flirt. In his absence she marries Alfio, a teamster. Turiddu, on his return, seeks consolation in the love of Santuzza, a poor peasant girl. Lola, jealous of her new rival, draws Turiddu once more into her power, so that he tires of Santuzza and refuses to marry her. Goaded to frenzy, Santuzza opens Alfio's eyes to Lola's faithlessness. He meets Turiddu in the public square coming from mass on Easter morning; embraces him, biting the tip of his right ear, according to the Sicilian fashion of challenging an enemy to mortal combat, and in their subsequent encounter Turiddu is slain.

Friend—I suppose you grieve very much over the death of your husband?

Mrs. Snooks—Indeed I do. If I had utilized before he died the tears I've shed since he died, I'd have half-a-dozen more dresses than I've got now.

There is said to be a man in the Old Colony who is so rigid in his temperance views that he refuses to take an umbrella when it rains because there is a stick in it. He takes his water clear.

Old Gentleman—Which of my daughters are you after, young man?

Candid Young Man—That's what I want to know, sir. What are their respective fortunes?

A little New York boy, Tommy Knickerbocker, whose father is a prominent club man, was studying his lesson not long since. The little boy was very much puzzled over his lessons and finally he asked his pa.

"Pa, what does the word 'pretext' mean?"

"Don't bother me," said his father, who was reading a newspaper; but his mother spoke up and said sweetly:

"When your father says he has to go to the club on important business, that is a pretext to get away from his family."

Tommy jotted down the definition and read it out in school, thereby causing a sensation.

INDIGO

ARGUMENT.

The scene of the opera is laid in the Indigonian Islands, which have, somehow, been left off the maps.

King Indigo nurses a tender passion for Fantasca, a beautiful slave, who is betrothed to Janio, the King's jester and leader of the Royal orchestra. These two lovers, having arranged a plot to regain their liberty, are aided by Ali Baba a donkey driver, and his wife Toffana.

A bogus telegram informs the King that a band of robbers is about to attack the Caves of Kibosh, where is concealed the treasure accumulated during Indigo's economical reign.

The King's frugal policy of government having resulted in the disbandment of the army, Fantasca recruits a company of Amazons from the Royal harem and sallies forth to combat the mythical band of robbers—intending to secure the treasure and escape in a ship sent by her friends.

She obtains from the King an agreement that half the treasure shall be hers in the event of her victory over the robbers.

Romadour, the King's Prime Minister, led by his love for Fantasca, provides her with the key to the Caves of Kibosh; and the beautiful slave, having drugged the Royal party, secures the treasure and escapes with her followers to the sea-shore, where, owing to the non-arrival of the rescuing vessel, she is obliged to still further hoodwink Indigo.

The latter, believing that the robbers have secured the treasure, eventually permits Fantasca to convince him that she has defeated the thieves and recovered the booty—half of which the King bestows upon her as a reward.

The delayed ship arrives opportunely, and Fantasca and her friends return home.

Friend—I suppose you grieve very much over the death of your husband?

Mrs. Snooks—Indeed I do. If I had utilized before he died the tears I've shed since he died, I'd have half-a-dozen more dresses than I've got now.

There is said to be a man in the Old Colony who is so rig'd in his temperance views that he refuses to take an umbrella when it rains because there is a stick in it. He takes his water clear.

Old Gentleman—Which of my daughters are you after, young man?

Candid Young Man—That's what I want to know, sir. What are their respective fortunes?

A little New York boy, Tommy Knickerbocker, whose father is a prominent club man, was studying his lesson not long since. The little boy was very much puzzled over his lessons and finally he asked his pa.

"Pa, what does the word 'pretext' mean?"

"Don't bother me," said his father, who was reading a newspaper; but his mother spoke up and said sweetly:

"When your father says he has to go to the club on important business, that is a pretext to get away from his family."

Tommy jotted down the definition and read it out in school, thereby causing a sensation.

It is said that Sir Walter Scott, who, like all wholesome natures, liked a joke with his friends, met one day a half-witted fellow, who lived near Abbottsford, and said to him: "Sandy, I'll gi'e ye a thousand pounds if you let me kill you." "Na, na, Sir Walter," replied Sandy, "but I'll compromise wi' ye, and let yo half kill me for half the money."

"Keep away from that," said a restaurant keeper to an Irishman, who was standing in front of a newly arrived box of turtles, holding his finger in evident pain. "What are you doing there, anyhow?"

"I wor investigating."

"Investigating what?"

"I wor trying to see which was the head and which was the tail of the baste over there in the corner of the box."

"What do you want to know that for?"

"I've a curiosity to know whether I've been bit or stung."

A certain colonel has recently removed from his boyhood home in Kentucky. On meeting a friend from the old place he was naturally delighted, and anxious to learn all the news. "Well, everything seems to be going on about the same," said his friend. "Well, how's Jim Bullard getting on with his saloon? Jim used to keep first-class goods, and I always predicted he'd make a big success." "Oh, Jim failed; went to pieces; hadn't a dollar left." "You don't tell me!" exclaimed the colonel. "I am sorry to hear that. When did he fail?" "I don't remember exactly, colonel, but I think it was about three weeks after you moved away."

Col. Yerger takes the premium for absentmindedness. He was sitting at his desk writing a few nights ago when one of his children entered.

"What do you want? I can't be disturbed now."

"I only want to say good night, pa"

"Never mind, now. To-morrow morning will do just as well."

New Servant—There is one thing I don't like in this house.

Mrs. Gayboy—What is that?

Servant—Your husband, he always chucks me under the chin and calls me his pet.

Mrs. Gayboy—You must not pay any attention to that. He treats me in the same way. He doesn't really mean anything by it.

A clergyman called on a man, who had just lost his wife, to offer him consolation. "Don't fret, my friend," the clergyman said; "the time will soon come when you will meet her never to part again."

"But, parson," said the man, "I've been married twice, and what I want to know is, which wife am I to meet 'never to part again'? Or am I to meet both of them 'never to part again'? It strikes me that, if so, it will be a bit awkward. Besides, I hated the first wife, for she was a regular vixen."

The clergyman was puzzled what to say, when the man suddenly brightened up, and exclaimed, almost cheerfully:

"I think it will be all right, parson. My first wife was such a downright bad 'un that I don't think there's much fear of my meeting her in heaven!"

George—Love, I dreamed last night that I proposed, and you accepted me; that we were married and our lives were spent in bliss. What think you of this dream?

Marie—George, dear, I have very little faith in dreams; but we might test that one.

Smoker (fiercely)—Your fowls have been over the wall, and scratching my garden!

Chunks (coolly)—Well, there's nothing extraordinary in that. It's their nature to scratch. Now, if your garden was to come over the wall, and begin scratching my fowls, it would be extraordinary, and worth communicating.

Many men fall in love and claim to have lost their hearts, whose experience afterwards convinces them that they lost their heads instead.

Teacher—(to new pupil): What is your last name, my little man?

New Pupil—Tommy.

Teacher—What is your full name?

New Pupil—Tommy Jones.

Teacher—Then Jones is your last name.

Tommy—No, it isn't. When I was born my name was Jones, and they didn't give me the other one for a month afterwards.

PAUL CONRAD,

Lock Box 1358. New Orleans, La.

Bill Pendergast, a rather impecunious man, married for money, and his wife, a widow, ugly and long-tongued, made William repent of his culpable avarice many and many a day. The widow brought with her into Bill's family a son, as well as the other property, and one evening sweet William overheard the boy howling dismally.

"Why howleth the kid?" inquired Bill.

"He was a bad boy, and I have been whipping him. But I made him kiss me afterwards to show him that it was more in sorrow than in anger that I punished him."

"Did you really ask that poor child to kiss you?" said Bill.

"Yes," answered his wife.

"How could you be so cruel?" said Bill, "as to add new tortures to the punishment already inflicted?"

INDIGO

ARGUMENT.

The scene of the opera is laid in the Indigonian Islands, which have, somehow, been left off the maps.

King Indigo nurses a tender passion for Fantasca, a beautiful slave, who is betrothed to Jauio, the King's jester and leader of the Royal orchestra. These two lovers, having arranged a plot to regain their liberty, are aided by Ali Baba a donkey driver, and his wife Toffana.

A bogus telegram informs the King that a band of robbers is about to attack the Caves of Kiboshi, where is concealed the treasure accumulated during Indigo's economical reign.

The King's frugal policy of government having resulted in the disbandment of the army, Fantasca recruits a company of Amazons from the Royal harem and sallies forth to combat the mythical band of robbers —intending to secure the treasure and escape in a ship sent by her friends.

She obtains from the King an agreement that half the treasure shall be hers in the event of her victory over the robbers.

Romadour, the King's Prime Minister, led by his love for Fantasca, provides her with the key to the Caves of Kiboshi; and the beautiful slave, having drugged the Royal party, secures the treasure and escapes with her followers to the sea-shore, where, owing to the non-arrival of the rescuing vessel, she is obliged to still further hoodwink Indigo.

The latter, believing that the robbers have secured the treasure, eventually permits Fantasca to convince him that she has defeated the thieves and recovered the booty—half of which the King bestows upon her as a reward.

The delayed ship arrives opportunely, and Fantasca and her friends return home.

Friend—I supposo you grieve very much over the death of your husband?

Mrs. Snooks—Indeed I do. If I had utilized before he died the tears I've shed since he died, I'd have half-a-dozen more dresses than I've got now.

There is said to be a man in the Old Colony who is so rig'd in his temperance views that he refuses to take an umbrella when it rains because there is a stick in it. He takes his water clear.

Old Gentleman—Which of my daughters are you after, young man?

Candid Young Man—That's what I want to know, sir. What are their respective fortunes?

A little New York boy, Tommy Knickerbocker, whose father is a prominent club man, was studying his lesson not long since. The little boy was very much puzzled over his lessons and finally he asked his pa.

"Pa, what does the word 'pretext' mean?"

"Don't bother me," said his father, who was reading a newspaper; but his mother spoke up and said sweetly:

"When your father says he has to go to the club on important business, that is a pretext to get away from his family."

Tommy jotted down the definition and read it out in school, thereby causing a sensation.

It is said that Sir Walter Scott, who, like all wholesome natures, liked a joke with his friends, met one day a half-witted fellow, who lived near Abbotsford, and said to him: "Sandy, I'll gi'e ye a thousand pounds if you let me kill you." "Na, na, Sir Walter," replied Sandy, "but I'll compromise wi' ye, and let yo half kill me for half the money."

"Keep away from that," said a restaurant keeper to an Irishman, who was standing in front of a newly arrived box of turtles, holding his finger in evident pain. "What are you doing there, anyhow?"

"I wor investigating."

"Investigating what?"

"I wor trying to see which was the head and which was the tail of the baste over there in the corner of the box."

"What do you want to know that for?"

"I've a curiosity to know whether I've been bit or stung."

———

A certain colonel has recently removed from his boyhood home in Kentucky. On meeting a friend from the old place he was naturally delighted, and anxious to learn all the news. "Well, everything seems to be going on about the same," said his friend. "Well, how's Jim Billard getting on with his saloon? Jim used to keep first-class goods, and I always predicted he'd make a big success." "Oh, Jim failed; went to pieces; hadn't a dollar left." "You don't tell me!" exclaimed the colonel. "I am sorry to hear that. When did he fail?" "I don't remember exactly, colonel, but I think it was about three weeks after you moved away."

———

Col. Yerger takes the premium for absentmindedness. He was sitting at his desk writing a few nights ago when one of his children entered.

"What do you want? I can't be disturbed now."

"I only want to say good night, pa"

"Never mind, now. To-morrow morning will do just as well."

———

New Servant—There is one thing I don't like in this house.

Mrs. Gayboy—What is that?

Servant—Your husband, he always chucks me under the chin and calls me his pet.

Mrs. Gayboy—You must not pay any attention to that. He treats me in the same way. He doesn't really mean anything by it.

A clergyman called on a man, who had just lost his wife, to offer him consolation. "Don't fret, my friend," the clergyman said; "the time will soon come when you will meet her never to part again."

"But, parson," said the man, "I've been married twice, and what I want to know is, which wife am I to meet 'never to part again'? Or am I to meet both of them 'never to part again'? It strikes me that, if so, it will be a bit awkward. Besides, I hated the first wife, for she was a regular vixen."

The clergyman was puzzled what to say, when the man suddenly brightened up, and exclaimed, almost cheerfully:

"I think it will be all right, parson. My first wife was such a downright bad 'un that I don't think there's much fear of my meeting her in heaven!"

———

George—Love, I dreamed last night that I proposed, and you accepted me; that we were married and our lives were spent in bliss. What think you of this dream?

Marie George, dear, I have very little faith in dreams; but we might test that one.

Smoker (fiercely)—Your fowls have been over the wall, and scratching my garden!

Chunks (coolly)—Well, there's nothing extraordinary in that. It's their nature to scratch. Now, if your garden was to come over the wall, and begin scratching my fowls, it would be extraordinary, and worth communicating.

———

Many men fall in love and claim to have lost their hearts, whose experience afterwards convinces them that they lost their heads instead.

———

Teacher—(to new pupil): What is your last name, my little man?

New Pupil—Tommy.

Teacher—What is your full name?

New Pupil—Tommy Jones.

Teacher—Then Jones is your last name.

Tommy—No, it isn't. When I was born my name was Jones, and they didn't give me the other one for a month afterwards.

Bill Pendergast, a rather impecunious man, married for money, and his wife, a widow, ugly and loug-tongued, made William repent of his culpable avarice many and many a day. The widow brought with her into Bill's family a son, as well as the other property, and one evening sweet William overheard the boy howling dismally.

"Why howleth the kid?" inquired Bill.

"He was a bad boy, and I have been whipping him. But I made him kiss me afterwards to show him that it was more in sorrow than in anger that I punished him."

"Did you really ask that poor child to kiss you?" said Bill.

"Yes," answered his wife.

"How could you be so cruel?" said Bill, "as to add new tortures to the punishment already inflicted?"

CASINO NOTES.

Cafe open down stairs.

The Normandie Cafe and Restaurant, Broadway and 38th Street, is open till 1 A. M., for the accommodation of theatre and opera parties. Oysters, Game and Salads a specialty.

If you want play books and goods for amateur theatricals, magic lanterns, etc., send for catalogue. W. C. Wemyss, 21 Beekman Street.

The Hoffman House Turkish and Russian Baths, 7 West 24th Street, are the most fashionable and finest in the city.

"Martha Washington Gavotte," composed by Rudolph Aronson, can be obtained at principal music stores. The following extract was taken from the New York Herald: "Musicians who have examined this delightful little work of an American composer, declare that it has great merit." Performed with great success by Eduard Strauss' Orchestra.

Ladies' Artistic Hair Cutters—Brown & Kurz, 46 West 14th Street. Your patronage solicited.

No busier place in New York than "Huyler's." The "Sweet Buy and Buy" is everlastingly sung at this popular establishment.

THE FIRST GENTLEMAN OF EUROPE.—The Prince of Wales, following the example of the Queen, the Duchess of Fife, and many of the nobility, has bought a Hardman piano. The Prince has the reputation of never making a mistake in artistic matters. Hardman, Peck & Co., Manufacturers, 5th Avenue and 19th Street.

MR. FAHR, of Messrs. Schmer & Co., informed our representative that the demand for the "Schmer" Pianos is an extraordinary one, and that many of our best musicians are now purchasing them for their own use.

"The best is always the cheapest." This saying is always proved in buying the "Good Sense" corset waist. Merchants get a little more money for them because they are well worth it. The tendency among manufacturers is to reduce the quality of their goods in order to make a larger profit, but the Ferris "Good Sense" corset waist has gained its large sale because it is the best, and merchants know that the high standard of quality will be maintained.

The eye, the most expressive of features, becomes beautiful, sparkling and strong by using "Oculine." This absolutely harmless lotion is also positive cure for blood-shot and red and diseased eyelids. Leading druggists, or mail, $1.00 per bottle. Main office, Mrs. L. Shaw, 24 West 14th Street, New York.

Antediluvian is a pure, rye whiskey. The whiskey which received the only Gold Medal at the Paris Exposition. Connoisseurs pronounce it the finest whiskey made. Sold in bottles only, and by leading grocers and wine merchants.

INDIGO

ARGUMENT.

The scene of the opera is laid in the Indigonian Islands, which have, somehow, been left off the maps.

King Indigo nurses a tender passion for Fantasca, a beautiful slave, who is betrothed to Janio, the King's jester and leader of the Royal orchestra. These two lovers, having arranged a plot to regain their liberty, are aided by Ali Baba a donkey driver, and his wife Toffana.

A bogus telegram informs the King that a band of robbers is about to attack the Caves of Kiboshi, where is concealed the treasure accumulated during Indigo's economical reign.

The King's frugal policy of government having resulted in the disbandment of the army, Fantasca recruits a company of Amazons from the Royal harem and sallies forth to combat the mythical band of robbers —intending to secure the treasure and escape in a ship sent by her friends.

She obtains from the King an agreement that half the treasure shall be hers in the event of her victory over the robbers.

Romadour, the King's Prime Minister, led by his love for Fantasca, provides her with the key to the Caves of Kiboshi and the beautiful slave, having drugged the Royal party, secures the treasure and escapes with her followers to the sea-shore, where, owing to the non-arrival of the rescuing vessel, she is obliged to still further hoodwink Indigo.

The latter, believing that the robbers have secured the treasure, eventually permits Fantasca to convince him that she has defeated the thieves and recovered the booty—half of which the King bestows upon her as a reward.

The delayed ship arrives opportunely, and Fantasca and her friends return home.

Friend—I suppose you grieve very much over the death of your husband?

Mrs. Snooks—Indeed I do. If I had utilized before he died the tears I've shed since he died, I'd have half-a-dozen more dresses than I've got now.

There is said to be a man in the Old Colony who is so rig'd in his temperance views that he refuses to take an umbrella when it rains because there is a stick in it. He takes his water clear.

Old Gentleman—Which of my daughters are you after, young man?

Candid Young Man—That's what I want to know, sir. What are their respective fortunes?

A little New York boy, Tommy Knickerbocker, whose father is a prominent club man, was studying his lesson not long since. The little boy was very much puzzled over his lessons and finally he asked his pa.

"Pa, what does the word 'pretext' mean?"

"Don't bother me," said his father, who was reading a newspaper; but his mother spoke up and said sweetly:

"When your father says he has to go to the club on important business, that is a pretext to get away from his family."

Tommy jotted down the definition and read it out in school, thereby causing a sensation.

"Keep away from that," said a restaurant keeper to an Irishman, who was standing in front of a newly arrived box of turtles, holding his finger in evident pain. "What are you doing there, anyhow?"

"I wor investigating."

"Investigating what?"

"I wor trying to see which was the head and which was the tail of the baste over there in the corner of the box."

"What do you want to know that for?"

"I've a curiosity to know whether I've been bit or stung."

A certain colonel has recently removed from his boyhood home in Kentucky. On meeting a friend from the old place he was naturally delighted, and anxious to learn all the news. "Well, everything seems to be going on about the same," said his friend. "Well, how's Jim Bullard getting on with his saloon? Jim used to keep first-class goods, and I always predicted he'd make a big success." "Oh, Jim failed; went to pieces; hadn't a dollar left." "You don't tell me!" exclaimed the colonel. "I am sorry to hear that. When did he fail?" "I don't remember exactly, colonel, but I think it was about three weeks after you moved away."

Col. Yerger takes the premium for absentmindedness. He was sitting at his desk writing a few nights ago when one of his children entered.

"What do you want? I can't be disturbed now."

"I only want to say good night, pa"

"Never mind, now. To-morrow morning will do just as well."

New Servant—There is one thing I don't like in this house.

Mrs. Gayboy—What is that?

Servant—Your husband, he always chucks me under the chin and calls me his pet.

Mrs. Gayboy—You must not pay any attention to that. He treats me in the same way. He doesn't really mean anything by it.

A clergyman called on a man, who had just lost his wife, to offer him consolation. "Don't fret, my friend," the clergyman said; "the time will soon come when you will meet her never to part again."

"But, parson," said the man, "I've been married twice, and what I want to know is, which wife am I to meet 'never to part again'? Or am I to meet both of them 'never to part again'? It strikes me that, if so, it will be a bit awkward. Besides, I hated the first wife, for she was a regular vixen."

The clergyman was puzzled what to say, when the man suddenly brightened up, and exclaimed, almost cheerfully:

"I think it will be all right, parson. My first wife was such a downright bad 'un that I don't think there's much fear of my meeting her in heaven!"

George—Love, I dreamed last night that I proposed, and you accepted me; that we were married and our lives were spent in bliss. What think you of this dream?

Marie George, dear, I have very little faith in dreams; but we might test that one.

Smoker (fiercely)—Your fowls have been over the wall, and scratching my garden!

Chunks (coolly)—Well, there's nothing extraordinary in that. It's their nature to scratch. Now, if your garden was to come over the wall, and begin scratching my fowls, it would be extraordinary, and worth communicating.

Many men fall in love and claim to have lost their hearts, whose experience afterwards convinces them that they lost their heads instead.

Teacher—(to new pupil): What is your last name, my little man?

New Pupil—Tommy.

Teacher—What is your full name?

New Pupil—Tommy Jones.

Teacher—Then Jones is your last name.

Tommy—No, it isn't. When I was born my name was Jones, and they didn't give me the other one for a month afterwards.

"May I have the honor to conduct your daughter to the supper table?" asked a society gentleman of a lady from the country, who is staying with some friends whom she is visiting.

"May you take her to supper?" was the response. "Why, of course, and you may take me, too. That's what we came here for."

"It's awfully hard," said the Five Dollar Bill as he was borrowed for the hundredth time, "to go through life entirely a loan."

Bill Pendergast, a rather impecunious man, married for money, and his wife, a widow, ugly and long-tongued, made William repent of his culpable avarice many and many a day. The widow brought with her into Bill's family a son, as well as the other property, and one evening sweet William overheard the boy howling dismally.

"Why howleth the kid?" inquired Bill.

"He was a bad boy, and I have been whipping him. But I made him kiss me afterwards to show him that it was more in sorrow than in anger that I punished him."

"Did you really ask that poor child to kiss you?" said Bill.

"Yes," answered his wife.

"How could you be so cruel?" said Bill, "as to add new tortures to the punishment already inflicted?"

"The best is always the cheapest." This saying is always proved in buying the "Good Sense" corset waist. Merchants get a little more money for them because they are well worth it. The tendency among manufacturers is to reduce the quality of their goods in order to make a larger profit, but the Ferris "Good Sense" corset waist has gained its large sale because it is the best, and merchants know that the high standard of quality will be maintained.

THE GRAND DUCHESS

ARGUMENT.

The Graud Duchess of Gerolstein, having been for the major portion of her twenty-three years of existence under the tutelage of Baron Puck, an aged and musty-brained courtier, pines for an affinity, and finds him in the person of Fritz, a private soldier in her regiment of grenadiers.

Fritz is, however, betrothed to Wanda, a village maiden, and the Duchess, with a view of winning him from his rustic bride, raises the young grouadier by rapid promotion to the rank of Commander-in-Chief, supplanting General Boum.

The latter, seeking revenge, joins forces with Baron Puck and Prince Paul, an unsuccessful suitor for the Duchess' hand, and the three conspire to assassinate Fritz. The Duchess, in a rage at her failure to win Fritz from Wauda, joins the conspiracy, but is won from her purpose and led to give her hand to Prince Paul through the eloquent intercession of the Prince's emissary, Baron Grog.

Boum and Puck obtain revenge upon Fritz through a series of practical jokes, which render the young grenadier ridiculous. Whereupon Fritz, who has married Wanda, is, at his own request, reduced to the ranks and discharged from the service, and General Boum is restored to his position of Commander-in-Chief.

A little New York boy, Tommy Knickerbocker, whose father is a prominent club man, was studying his lesson not long since. The little boy was very much puzzled over his lessons and finally he asked his pa.

"Pa, what does the word 'pretext' mean?"

"Don't bother me," said his father, who was reading a newspaper; but his mother spoke up and said sweetly:

"When your father says he has to go to the club on important business, that is a pretext to get away from his family."

Tommy jotted down the definition and read it out in school, thereby causing a sensation.

Extract from the Paris Edition of The New York Herald, June 25th, 1891:

"A number of the French comic operas are booked for the United States. Mr. Rudolph Aronson, manager of the Casino, New York, has arranged with the Messrs. Choudens, Paris, for the exclusive rights in America of the following successes:—"L'Oncle Celestin," operetta-vaudeville, by Edmond Audran; "Les Folies Amoureuses," opéra-comique, by Pessard; "La Demoiselle du Téléphone," operetta-vaudeville, by Gaston Serpette; "La Volière," operetta, by Charles Lecocq; "Le Mari de la Reine," operetta, by André Messager.

Mr. Aronson is also negotiating for an opera by Messrs. G. R. Sims and George Jacobi, of London, and has closed a contract with Edward Jakobowski (composer of "Erminie") as his representative in America."

SPECIAL.

Mr. Rudolph Aronson takes pleasure in announcing that on Monday Eve'g, Aug. 17,

There will be produced,

(For the first time in English,)

Johann Strauss' Operetta,

INDIGO

The production will be on a scale of magnificence fully equal to that which has characterized all former efforts in this house, and the renowned artist will on that occasion make her first appearance in the Casino.

PAULINE L'ALLEMAND

A clergyman called on a man, who had just lost his wife, to offer him consolation. "Don't fret, my friend," the clergyman said; "the time will soon come when you will meet her never to part again."

"But, parson," said the man, "I've been married twice, and w' at I want to know is, which wife am I to meet 'never to part again'? Or am I to meet both of them 'never to part again'? It strikes me that, if so, it will be a bit awkward. Besides, I hated the first wife, for she was a regular vixen."

The clergyman was puzzled what to say, when the man suddenly brightened up, and exclaimed, almost cheerfully:

"I think it will be all right, parson. My first wife was such a downright bad 'un that I don't think there's much fear of my meeting her in heaven!"

George—Love, I dreamed last night that I proposed, and you accepted me; that we were married and our lives were spent in bliss. What think you of this dream?

Marie - George, dear, I have very little faith in dreams; but we might test that one.

Smoker (fiercely)—Your fowls have been over the wall, and scratching my garden!

Chunks (coolly)—Well, there's nothing extraordinary in that. It's their nature to scratch. Now, if your garden was to come over the wall, and begin scratching my fowls, it would be extraordinary, and worth communicating.

Many men fall in love and claim to have lost their hearts, whose experience afterwards convinces them that they lost their heads instead.

Teacher—(to new pupil): What is your last name, my little man?

New Pupil—Tommy.

Teacher—What is your full name?

New Pupil—Tommy Jones.

Teacher—Then Jones is your last name.

Tommy—No, it isn't. When I was born my name was Jones, and they didn't give me the other one for a month afterwards.

Mrs. Manhattan Beach is a parent who is very severe with her children. She maintains strict discipline, and never allows them to speak out loud. A few days ago Mrs. Beach and her little daughter Maud were about to go out calling, when the latter said:

THE FIRST GENTLEMAN OF EUROPE.—The Prince of Wales, following the example of the Queen, the Duchess of Fife, and many of the nobility, has bought a Hardman piano. The Prince has the reputation of never making a mistake in artistic matters. Hardman, Peck & Co., Manufacturers, 5th Avenue and 19th Street.

Mr. FAHR, of Messrs. Sohmer & Co., informed our representative that the demand for the "Sohmer" Pianos is an extraordinary one, and that many of our best musicians are now purchasing them for their own use.

Ed. Pinaud's Lilas de France is sweet, fragrant and delicious; it is the true odor of the flower.

"The best is always the cheapest." This saying is always proved in buying the "Good Sense" corset waist. Merchants get a little more money for them because they are well worth it. The tendency among manufacturers is to reduce the quality of their goods in order to make a larger profit, but the Ferris "Good Sense" corset waist has gained its large sale because it is the best, and merchants know that the high standard of quality will be maintained.

APOLLO.

ARGUMENT.

It is oracle week at Delphi, and Adrastos, the high priest of the temple, has chosen Pythia, a young and beautiful maiden, as Apollo's oracle. Dioskuros—man of all work about the temple—has found in the ancient archives a law to the effect that should Pythia permit herself to be kissed by a man, the wrath of the gods would be visited upon the offenders and the temple demolished.

Dioskuros' discovery alarms Adrastos, and when, upon Pythia's return from a tour of the principal cities of Greece, it develops that she has met and fallen in love with Helios, a young Athenian who has followed Pythia to Delphi, Adrastos and Dioskuros are at their wits' end to separate the lovers. They are aided in their plans by the arrival of Paresina and Lerina, two maids of Athens who have followed their runaway lovers to Delphi. The latter, Glaukos and Mermeros, accompanied by another Athenian dude, Dimoklos, are visiting Delphi on a pleasure tour.

Helios and his friend, Tiamis, intending an elopement, arrange a rendezvous with Pythia and another temple virgin, Polydora; and Adrastos, having locked Pythia and Polydora in the temple, prevails upon Paresina and Lerina to act as their substitutes in the elopement plan.

Mermeros and Glaukos, however, have also arranged a rendezvous with two temple virgins, and by mistake run away with Paresina and Lerina.

Pythia, moved by her love for Helios, resigns her position of oracle but is induced by Adrastos, through fear of Apollo's vengeance, to re-consider her determination. Helios secures an interview with Pythia and, in defiance of Apollo's wrath, kisses her.

The gods apparently permitting the challenge to pass unnoticed, and urged by Helios, Pythia renounces Apollo, and the populace, enraged at the failure of the festival, are on the verge of riot.

Dioskuros averts the danger by announcing that the temple will close for the season to be altered into an amusement palace to be devoted to the free entertainment of the people of Delphi.

A certain colonel has recently removed from his boyhood home in Kentucky. On meeting a friend from the old place he was naturally delighted, and anxious to learn all the news. "Well, everything seems to-be going on about the same," said his friend. "Well, how's Jim Bullard getting on with his saloon? Jim used to keep first-class goods, and I always predicted he'd make a big success." "Oh, Jim failed; went to pieces; hadn't a dollar left." "You don't tell me!" exclaimed the colonel, "I am sorry to hear that. When did he fail?" "I don't remember exactly, colonel, but I think it was about three weeks after you moved away."

A little New York boy, Tommy Knickerbocker, whose father is a prominent club man, was studying his lesson not long since. The little boy was very much puzzled over his lessons and finally he asked his pa.

"Pa, what does the word 'pretext' mean?"

"Don't bother me," said his father, who was reading a newspaper; but his mother spoke up and said sweetly:

"When your father says he has to go to the club on important business, that is a pretext to get away from his family."

Tommy jotted down the definition and read it out in school, thereby causing a sensation.

Extract from the Paris Edition of The New York Herald, June 25th, 1891:

"A number of the French comic operas are booked for the United States. Mr. Rudolph Aronson, manager of the Casino, New York, has arranged with the Messrs. Choudens, Paris, for the exclusive rights in America of the following successes:—"L'Oncle Celestin," operetta-vaudeville, by Edmond Audran; "Les Folies Amoureuses," opéra-comique, by Pessard; "La Demoiselle du Téléphone," operette-vaudeville, by Gaston Serpette; "La Volière," operetta, by Charles Lecocq; "Lo Mari de la Reine," operetta, by André Messager.

Mr. Aronson is also negotiating for an opera by Messrs. G. R. Sims and George Jacobi, of London, and has closed a contract with Edward Jakobowski (composer of "Erminie") as his representative in America."

Friend—I suppose you grieve very much over the death of your husband?

Mrs. Snooks—Indeed I do. If I had utilized before he died the tears I've shed since he died, I'd have half-a-dozen more dresses than I've got now."

A clergyman called on a man, who had just lost his wife, to offer him consolation. "Don't fret, my friend," the clergyman said; "the time will soon come when you will meet her never to part again."

"But, parson," said the man, "I've been married twice, and w' at I want to know is, which wife am I to meet 'never to part again'? Or am I to meet both of them 'never to part again'? It strikes me that, if so, it will be a b't awkward. Besides, I hated the first wife, for she was a regular vixen."

Candid Young Man—That's what I want to know, sir. What are their respective fortunes?

A Kansas boy earned a nice bible by committing ten hundred verses to memory, and then he traded his bible for a shot-gun, and he accidently shot his aunt in the leg.

"It's awfully hard," said the Five Dollar Bill as he was borrowed for the hundredth time, "to go through life entirely a loan."

A little New York boy, Tommy Knickerbocker, whose father is a prominent club man, was studying his lesson not long since. The little boy was very much puzzled over his lessons and finally he asked his pa.

"Pa, what does the word 'pretext' mean?"

"Don't bother me," said his father, who was reading a newspaper; but his mother spoke up and said sweetly:

"When your father says he has to go to the club on important business, that is a pretext to get away from his family."

Tommy jotted down the definition and read it out in school, thereby causing a sensation.

Bernard Meyer, Selling Agent,

151 Chambers St., N. Y.

A man in Florida recently exchanged a weekly paper for a mule. This trade was not so unappropriate as it would seem at first blush. They are both elevators of the human race.

The first last and almost continual thought of the person who feels that she is included in the fashionable world is how to dress well and yet be considered out of the "style ordinaire". To successfully cater to this general class one must have searched pretty generally in all quarters where ideas of dress are most prolific and where fashions are first accepted. Style is often a caprice bred from novelty and art, sometimes under the most trying circumstances, born, no one knows where, yet petted and reared as an idol for fashion's worshippers. It must indeed be a great house that can keep well posted in all these matters, for such knowledge is only gained by careful search amongst manufacturers and those who select from and model the manufacturers' products.

The house of B. Altman & Co spares no expense in probing all Europe, first in the field, in securing exclusive control of all that is novel, and, as a result, every fashionable gathering, be it Ball, Reception or Dinner, is marked by the handsome costumes which bear the stamp of B. Altman & Co., whose Dressmaking Department is the largest in the world.

Prominent features of its working are careful attention, promptness and satisfaction.

It takes a drug clerk of broad judgment and liberal views, and a calm, statesmanlike control of his features, to know how to give the citizen the right kind of syrup in his soda water, when the citizen's wife says she will take the same as her husband.

Col. Verger takes the premium for absentmindedness. He was sitting at his desk writing a few nights ago when one of his children entered.

"What do you want? I can't be disturbed now."

"I only want to say good night, pa."

Never mind, now. To-morrow morning will do just as well."

New Servant—There is one thing I don't like in this house.

Mrs. Gayboy—What is that?

Servant—Your husband, he always chucks me under the chin and calls me his pet.

Mrs. Gayboy—You must not pay any attention to that. He treats me in the same way. He doesn't really mean anything by it.

OPEN-AIR CONCERTS,
commencing at 7.30 o'clock every evening, and lasting, uninterruptedly, until midnight. This band was the first of the Hungarian Bands to appear in this city, and its great success has never been equaled.

Unapproachable as the Roof Garden has been in the past, in point of brilliancy and pleasing effect, it will, when opened, present a scene of picturesqueness and illumination second to none in the world. Tiny cascades, floral bowers, arbors, and an elaborate display of rare exotics and choice plants interspersed with bright flowers, will tend to make it more popular than ever before.

Due notice will be given of the opening night.

POOR JONATHAN,

ARGUMENT.

The story of the opera deals entirely with the tribulations of an American millionaire. The scenes are laid successively in New York city, Monaco, and West Point. The first represents the palatial residence of Rubygold, the millionaire, who, though surrounded by every luxury, is unhappy and discontented. At a birthday fete arranged in his honor, Jonathan, the cook of the household, uses soap instead of raspberry flavoring in the ice cream. Rubygold imagines that Jonathan attempted to poison him, and orders his dismissal at once. Harriet, a medical student and protege of Rubygold, appears and is requested to sing. Upon her refusal Rubygold tries to tempt her by offering a fabulous sum if she will acquiesce Quickly, an impressario, seeing their discomfiture, makes a flattering offer to Harriet to eschew medicine and become a lyric star. She accepts, leaving Rubygold inconsolable. Jonathan despondent over the loss of his position contemplates suicide. While about to consummate the act he is confronted with Rubygold, who has also resolved to end his life. After explanations, an agreement is entered into between them whereby Rubygold transfers his entire fortune to Jonathan, who assumes all of Rubygold's responsibilities, and Rubygold starts life anew. But there is one condition imposed; should either party sing or hum the ballad sung by Harriet before parting from Rubygold, it is to be regarded as a signal that Rubygold has tired of life's burdens and both are to die. Jonathan, once in possession of the wealth, marries his sweetheart Molly, formerly a servant at Rubygold's house; they both depart for Europe, and at Monte Carlo they meet Harriet, now a famous prima-donna. Jonathan falls in love with Harriet and Molly receives attentions from Count Nowalsky. Rubygold deserted by his friends follows Harriet on her travels, and finally becoming despondent attempts to sing the fatal song, but is prevented from doing so by Jonathan who is enjoying his great wealth to the extreme limit, and has no desire to die; but finally, after returning to his country retreat at West Point where he is hampered, traduced, and deceived by his alleged friends, Jonathan, in a moment of despair and frenzy, hums the song. Rubygold, cured of his discontent, and now acting as steward with the family, hears the song and reclaims his fortune.

Harriet, who has engineered the scheme to disgust Jonathan with his lot, remains with Rubygold, and Jonathan and Molly return to their lowly station.

A certain colonel has recently removed from his boyhood home in Kentucky. On meeting a friend from the old place he was naturally delighted, and anxious to learn all the news. "Well, everything seems to be going on about the same," said his friend. "Well, how's Jim Bullard getting on with his saloon? Jim used to keep first-class goods, and I always predicted he'd make a big success." "Oh, Jim failed; went to pieces; hadn't a dollar left." "You don't tell me!" exclaimed the colonel, "I am sorry to hear that. When did he fail?" "I don't remember exactly, colonel, but I think it was about three weeks after you moved away."

NEVER!

A young lady asked an editor this extraordinary question: "Do you think it right for a girl to sit on a young man's lap, even if she is engaged?" Whereupon the editor told this extraordinary lie: "We have had no experience in the matter referred to." Why didn't he say: "If it was our girl and our lap, yes; if it was another girl and our lap, yes; but if it was our girl and another fellow's lap, never! never! never!

The first, last and almost continual thought of the person who feels that she is included in the fashionable world, is how to dress well and yet be considered out of the "style ordinaire." To successfully cater to this general case one must have searched pretty generally in all quarters where ideas of dress are most prolific and where fashions are first accepted. Style is often a caprice bred from novelty and art, sometimes under the most trying circumstances, born, no one knows where, yet petted and reared as an idol for fashion's worshippers. It must indeed be a great house that can keep well posted in all these matters, for such knowledge is only gained by careful search amongst manufacturers and those who select from and model the manufacturers' products.

The house of B. Altman & Co. spares no expense in probing all Europe, first in the field, in securing exclusive control of all that is novel, and, as a result, every fashionable gathering, be it Ball, Reception or Dinner, is marked by the handsome costumes which bear the stamp of B. Altman & Co., whose Dressmaking Department is the largest in the world.

Prominent features of its working are careful attention, promptness and satisfaction.

POOR JONATHAN.

ARGUMENT.

The story of the opera deals entirely with the tribulations of an American millionaire. The scenes are laid successively in New York city, Monaco, and West Point. The first represents the palatial residence of Rubygold, the millionaire, who, though surrounded by every luxury, is unhappy and discountented. At a birthday fete arranged in his honor, Jonathan, the cook of the household, uses soap instead of raspberry flavoring in the ice cream. Rubygold imagines that Jonathan attempted to poison him, and orders his dismissal at once. Harriet, a medical student and protege of Rubygold, appears and is requested to sing. Upon her refusal Rubygold tries to tempt her by offering a fabulous sum if she will acquiesce Quickly, an impressario, seeing their discomfiture, makes a flattering offer to Harriet to eschew medicine and become a lyric star. She accepts, leaving Rubygold inconsolable. Jonathan despondent over the loss of his position contemplates suicide. While about to consummate the act he is confronted with Rubygold, who has also resolved to end his life. After explanations, an agreement is entered into between them whereby Rubygold transfers his entire fortune to Jonathan, who assumes all of Rubygold's responsibilities, and Rubygold starts life anew. But there is one condition imposed; should either party sing or hum the ballad sung by Harriet before parting from Rubygold, it is to be regarded as a signal that Rubygold has tired of life's burdens and both are to die. Jonathan, once in possession of the wealth, marries his sweetheart Molly, formerly a servant at Rubygold's house; they both depart for Europe, and at Monte Carlo they meet Harriet, now a famous prima-donna. Jonathan falls in love with Harriet and Molly receives attentions from Count Nowaisky. Rubygold deserted by his friends follows Harriet on her travels, and finally becoming despondent attempts to sing the fatal song, but is prevented from doing so by Jonathan who is enjoying his great wealth to the extreme limit, and has no desire to die; but finally, after returning to his country retreat at West Point where he is hampered, trasduced, and deceived by his alleged friends, Jonathan, in a moment of despair and frenzy, hums the song. Rubygold, cured of his discontent, and now acting as steward with the family, hears the song and reclaims his fortune.

Harriet, who has engineered the scheme to disgust Jonathan with his lot, remains with Rubygold, and Jonathan and Molly return to their lowly station.

A certain colonel has recently removed from his boyhood home in Kentucky. On meeting a friend from the old place he was naturally delighted, and anxious to learn all the news. "Well, everything seems to be going on about the same," said his friend. "Well, how's Jim Bullard getting on with his saloon? Jim used to keep first-class goods, and I always predicted he'd make a big success." "Oh, Jim failed; went to pieces; hadn't a dollar left." "You don't tell me!" exclaimed the colonel, "I am sorry to hear that. When did he fail?" "I don't remember exactly, colonel, but I think it was about three weeks after you moved away."

A GRAMMATICAL CORRECTION.

"There," said a woman to a tramp, "is a nice dinner, but I shall expect you to saw a little wood for it."

"Certainly, madam," politely replied the tramp, attacking the dinner with both hands, "but you will pardon me, I trust, if I venture to correct your English."

"My what?"

"Your English. The word 'saw' is a verb, in this case, singular number and imperfect tense. You cannot say 'I shall expect you to saw wood.' 'I shall expect you to see wood' is correct. If you will indicate the pile to me I will look at it as I pass out."

Dudley Nobbs—Huh! you can't ride a bicycle.

It is said that Sir Walter Scott, who, like all wholesome natures, liked a joke with his friends, met one day a half-witted fellow, who lived near Abbotsford, and said to him: "Sandy, I'll gi'e ye a thousand pounds if you let me kill you." "Na, na, Sir Walter," replied Sandy, "but I'll compromise wi' ye, and let yo half kill me for half the money."

ANOTHER WASHOUT.

"Oh, father come and see this washout in our back yard!"

The father, who thinks he has had washouts enough on the road without another in his own yard, heaves a sigh and goes to the window prepared for the worst. It is Monday, and he discovers the wash out on the clothes line.

SELF-POSSESSED.

Some men never lose their presence of mind. A Milwaukee man threw his mother-in-law out of a window in the fifth story of a burning building, and carried a feather bed down stairs in his arms.

He—I love you so intensely, so sincerely, so passionately, so——

She—Just be quiet now; my dowry is not as large as all that.

Bessie, a bit of a blue-eyed girl, was about to go with her aunt to dine at a friend's house.

"Don't forget your manners, Bessie," said her mother. "Be sure to say 'yes, sir;' 'no, sir;' and 'yes, ma'am,' and 'no, ma'am,' when anyone speaks to you."

At the table the first question asked her was—"Bessie, will you have some soup?"

"Yes, sir; no, sir; yes, ma'am; no, ma'am," said Bessie, faintly, while everybody burst out laughing.

The newest Yaukee notion is a machine by which a man can tell when he has become sufficiently druuk. It is called a fuddleometer; and it operates by giving a fellow a sharp punch in the ribs the moment he has got drink enough in his skin.

Now that the fashionable world is busy with Balls, Receptions, Dinners, &c., it is well to remember that the most correct costumes as regards exclusiveness of design and materials, are produced by B. Altman & Co., whose dressmaking department, the largest in the world, offers facilities which allow proper attention to every order, consequently ensuring perfect fit and satisfaction. Many society leaders who thought it necessary to order abroad at one time, now find it much more agreeable to select from an endless variety of the choicest materials, which no single establishment in Europe could show. B. Altman & Co. select from all the foreign markets and secure novelties immediately after their production. With such favorable opportunities ladies find themselves easily pleased, and many of the most novel and beautiful dresses worn at the great society gatherings are the artistic results produced by the Dressmaking Department of B. Altman & Co.

Friend—Good-morning, John! The girl told me to come up stairs. Busy packing your trunk, I see.

Married Man—Yes. Help me to get it strapped, quick.

Friend—What's the hurry?

Married Man—We are going to the sea-side. This is my trunk, and, as you will see, it is right full to the top, but if my wife happens to come in before it's strapped, she'll crowd half a ton of her things into it.

Isaac—Is dis de sovereign dot shentleman joost gave you for de coat dot he vants sent home?

"Yes, fader."

"Vy, it is a bad von."

"No, fader. I haf tested it, and it is goot enough, only it is a leetle hit vorn."

"Vell, mine poy, joost change de coat he bought, for dot second-hand von marked twelve-and-seex. It is exactly de same kind of coat as de von he bought, only, like his sovereign, it is a leetle bit vorn. Ve must equalize matters."

It takes a drug clerk of broad judgment and liberal views, and a calm, statesmanlike control of his features, to know how to give the citizen the right kind of syrup in his soda water, when the citizen's wife says she will take the same as her husband.

POOR JONATHAN,
ARGUMENT.

The story of the opera deals entirely with the tribulations of an American millionaire. The scenes are laid successively in New York city, Monaco, and West Point. The first represents the palatial residence of Rubygold, the millionaire, who, though surrounded by every luxury, is unhappy and discontented. At a birthday fete arranged in his honor, Jonathan, the cook of the household, uses soap instead of raspberry flavoring in the ice cream. Rubygold imagines that Jonathan attempted to poison him, and orders his dismissal at once. Harriet, a medical student and protege of Rubygold, appears and is requested to sing. Upon her refusal Rubygold tries to tempt her by offering a fabulous sum if she will acquiesce Quickly, an impressario, seeing their discomfiture, makes a flattering offer to Harriet to eschew medicine and become a lyric star. She accepts, leaving Rubygold inconsolable. Jonathan despondent over the loss of his position contemplates suicide. While about to consummate the act he is confronted with Rubygold, who has also resolved to end his life. After explanations, an agreement is entered into between them whereby Rubygold transfers his entire fortune to Jonathan, who assumes all of Rubygold's responsibilities, and Rubygold starts life anew. But there is one condition imposed; should either party sing or hum the ballad sung by Harriet before parting from Rubygold, it is to be regarded as a signal that Rubygold has tired of life's burdens and both are to die. Jonathan, once in possession of the wealth, marries his sweetheart Molly, formerly a servant at Rubygold's house; they both depart for Europe, and at Monte Carlo they meet Harriet, now a famous prima-donna. Jonathan falls in love with Harriet and Molly receives attentions from Count Nowalsky. Rubygold deserted by his friends follows Harriet on her travels, and finally becomig despondent attempts to sing the fatal song, but is prevented from doing so by Jonathan who is enjoying his great wealth to the extreme limit, and has no desire to die; but finally, after returning to his country retreat at West Point where he is hampered, traduced, and deceived by his alleged friends, Jonathan, in a moment of despair and frenzy, hums the song. Rubygold, cured of his discontent, and now acting as steward with the family, hears the song and reclaims his fortune.

Harriet, who has engineered the scheme to disgust Jonathan with his lot, remains with Rubygold, and Jonathan and Molly return to their lowly station.

AN ÆOLIAN

Will enable you to have music in your home at any and all times without the aid of a musician.

It can be used by every member of the family, as the operation of playing it is so simple that it can be learned by any one with a few days' practice.

It is not a mechanical instrument, but is capable of the most delicate shadings of tempo and expression.

Any piece of music can be obtained for the Æolian, but it is designed for and particularly adapted to the highest grades of classical and operatic music. All the Wagner Overtures and Beethoven Symphonies, together with works from all the masters, are arranged for the Æolian, and are played by it with wonderful orchestral effect.

The tone of the Æolian is peculiarly soft and beautiful, resembling, more than anything, a small orchestra, with the different parts.

The Æolian is endorsed by Herr Anton Seidl, leader of the German Opera in New York, and prominent musicians wherever it is heard.

This wonderful instrument is on daily exhibition at the wareroome of

A GRAMMATICAL CORRECTION.

"There," said a woman to a tramp, "is a nice dinner, but I shall expect you to saw a little wood for it."

"Certainly, madam," politely replied the tramp, attacking the dinner with both hands, "but you will pardon me, I trust, if I venture to correct your English."

"My what?"

"Your English. The word 'saw' is a verb, in this case, singular number and imperfect tense. You cannot say 'I shall expect you to saw wood.' 'I shall expect you to see wood' is correct. If you will indicate the pile to me I will look at it as I pass out."

IRISH, YOU KNOW.

To cure snoring an exchange advises that a piece of soap be dropped into the mouth of the snorer. The oil in the soap will lubricate the pharynx and other Latin parts of the throat. It strikes us that this remedy had better be applied with caution, else the snorer might arise and lubricate the floor with the man who dropped in the soap.

THE SHORTEST FORENSIC SPEECH KNOWN.

The presiding judge, knowing the habitual verbosity of C——, the counsel for the defence, said to him:

"Mr. C——, I would ask you to be brief for once."

The barrister stood up, and, addressing the jury, delivered himself as follows:

"My opponent is wrong; I am right; you are the best judges."

The jury acquitted the prisoner.

THE MUSICAL CORSET.

"Have you seen the musical corset?" said the father of eight girls the other day. "Entirely my own invention, I assure you, and I make each of my daughters wear one. It is a stay made so that the slightest pressure produces a curious sound that can be heard in the adjoining room. With a pair of these corsets on," remarked the sagacious parent, "it would be impossible for any one of my daughters to allow a young man to put his arm around her waist without everyone in the vicinity knowing all about it, and the result is a quick wedding. Gets the girls off your hands in no time."

NEVER!

A young lady asked an editor this extraordinary question: "Do you think it right for a girl to sit on a young man's lap, even if she is engaged?" Whereupon the editor told this extraordinary lie: "We have had no experience in the matter referred to." Why didn't he say: "If it was our girl and our lap, yes; if it was another girl and our lap, yes; but if it was our girl and another fellow's lap, never! never! never!

A hubband complained of his wife before a magistrate for assault and battery, and it appeared in evidence that he had pushed the door against her, and she in turn had pushed it against him; whereupon the counsel for the defendant said that he could see no impropriety in a husband and wife a-doring each other.

ANOTHER WASHOUT.

"Oh, father come and see this washout in our back yard!"

The father, who thinks he has had washouts enough on the road without another in his own yard, heaves a sigh and goes to the window prepared for the worst. It is Monday, and he discovers the wash out on the clothes line.

PRESS COMMENTS.

N. Y. Herald.—Millocecker's latest success; sweet, tuneful music, delightful settings, a hit.

N. Y. World.—Poor Jonathan is an enormous success, and Mr. Aronson can be congratulated on having shown his desire to give the New York public an operetta that meets the artistic demands of the times to the fullest degree.

N. Y. Times.—Another popular success. The performance was excellent. Lillian Russell scored a great success.

N. Y. Tribune.—With such an operetta, Mr. Aronson ought to have a prosperous season, garnering not only much money, but the gratitude of all lovers of good musical comedy.

N. Y. Sun.—A memorable novelty. Plenty of bright sayings. The music will be heard all over town in a few days. A lengthy run at the Casino.

Morning Journal.—Spirited and joyful to the eye. Greeted with a vast amount of applause.

The Star.—It made a lively impression.

The Press.—Poor Jonathan a success. The Casino has found an attraction that will rival Erminie in popularity.

Fashion at the Horse Show.—The Horse Show at Madison Square Garden this season offered an opportunity for the display of many new gowns and bonnets, the whole forming a kaleidoscopic picture of most beautiful colors and harmonizing effects. During the week there was quite a change and showing of costumes, and one was impressed with a desire to know the origin of these artistic creations. Many ladies expressed the wish, not to know who the wearer was, but who the maker was. Most of the handsome dresses and bonnets were the production of the house of B. Altman & Co., whose dressmaking department (the largest in this country) furnishes the richest toilettes worn at all fashionable gatherings. There is an exclusiveness in design and entire novelty in each costume produced by B. Altman & Co., which is pleasing and desirable.

Mr. Farr, of Messrs. Sohmer & Co., informed our representative that the demand for the "Sohmer" Pianos is an extraordinary one, and that many of our best musicians are now purchasing them for their own use.

POOR JONATHAN.

ARGUMENT.

The story of the opera deals entirely with the tribulations of an American millionaire. The scenes are laid successively in New York city, Monaco, and West Point. The first represents the palatial residence of Rubygold, the millionaire, who, though surrounded by every luxury, is unhappy and discontented. At a birthday fete arranged in his honor, Jonathan, the cook of the household, uses soap instead of raspberry flavoring in the ice cream. Rubygold imagines that Jonathan attempted to poison him, and orders his dismissal at once. Harriet, a musical student and protege of Rubygold, appears and is requested to sing. Upon her refusal Rubygold tries to tempt her by offering a fabulous sum if she will acquiesce Quickly, an impressario, seeing their discomfiture, makes a flattering offer to Harriet to eschew medicine and become a lyric star. She accepts, leaving Rubygold inconsolable. Jonathan despondent over the loss of his position contemplates suicide. While about to consummate the act he is confronted with Rubygold, who has also resolved to end his life. After explanations, an agreement is entered into between them whereby Rubygold transfers his entire fortune to Jonathan, who assumes all of Rubygold's responsibilities, and Rubygold starts life anew. But there is one condition imposed; should either party sing or hum the ballad sung by Harriet before parting from Rubygold, it is to be regarded as a signal that Rubygold has tired of life's burdens and both are to die. Jonathan, once in possession of the wealth, marries his sweetheart Molly, formerly a servant at Rubygold's house; they both depart for Europe, and at Monte Carlo they meet Harriet, now a famous prima-donna. Jonathan falls in love with Harriet and Molly receives attentions from Count Nowalsky. Rubygold deserted by his friends follows Harriet on her travels, and finally becoming despondent attempts to sing the fatal song, but is prevented from doing so by Jonathan who is enjoying his great wealth to the extreme limit, and has no desire to die; but finally, after returning to his country retreat at West Point where he is hampered, traduced, and deceived by his alleged friends, Jonathan, in a moment of despair and frenzy, hums the song. Rubygold, cured of his discontent, and now acting as steward with the family, hears the song and reclaims his fortune.

Harriet, who has engineered the scheme to disgust Jonathan with his lot, remains with Rubygold, and Jonathan and Molly return to their lowly station.

One of the leading dermatologists of this city, whose name we omit, was recently consulted by a society lady regarding the proper course to adopt to prevent her skin from becoming harsh and dry and preserve its youthful freshness. He gave her a prescription, and also told her to bathe her face every night with warm water and fine soap, rinsing afterward thoroughly in warm clean water, and then apply a nice cologne or violet water, and repeat the process in the morning and once during the day. She replied that it was difficult to obtain a cologne or violet water which suited her. The doctor told her that he had recently had occasion to visit the elegant pharmacy of DAGGETT & RAMSDELL, "The Cambridge," 826 5th Ave., and was shown a cologne and violet, which seemed to her to be par excellence, delicate and extremely refreshing. The patient, following his advice, purchased a bottle of each, and reports that in three days she notes decided improvement, the skin is softer, with more color, and she is confident that she secured skillful advice.

THE ASPHALT TILES,

forming the walk around the Casino, are composed of crushed limestone and pure Trinidad Asphalt, subjected while hot to a pressure of 3,000 lbs. to the square inch. Having all the advantages of the sheet pavements in smoothness and elasticity, they have none of their defects; never soften in summer or crack in winter, are easily taken up for repairs to water or gas pipes, and last, but not least, present to the eye a pleasing variety of form and color, which harmonizes to a remarkable degree with the present taste for a florid style of architecture.

Phillips' Cocoa excels all other preparations of the Cocoa bean in digestibility, flavor and nutritious properties. A delicious substitute for tea and coffee. Ordinary Cocoas cause headache and depression. This does not. Test it.

A new luxury of the table which the American public is learning to appreciate is the Russian Caravan Tea imported by B. Fischer & Co.

Fashions in Fans.—This season's importation reveals many beautiful and artistic designs, rich in color and conceptions. An extreme novelty is a fan of "mousseline de soie" which, when opened and closed, forms a wave of flimsy texture. These fans are in different colors to match any costume. Bridal fans are shown in oriental pearl, inlaid with gold sticks, covered with Duchesse and Point lace, which meets a centre piece of "Crepe de Chine" on which are hand-paintings of great artistic merit. There are others with tortoise shell sticks inlaid with gold, covered with Chantilly lace, worked with hand-painted gold medallions. The exhibition at B. Altman & Co.'s, 18th St., 19th St. and 6ixth Avenue, is varied and grand. Spangled butterflies appliqué on gauze in all colors are quite new and fashionable.

THE BRAZILIAN.

ARGUMENT.

Don Inigo Sebastiano, governor by usurpation of a small Brazilian province, has a daughter Manuela, whose lover, Don Ramón, is bent upon the double purpose of marrying Manuela and overthrowing Don Inigo. They are aided by Babette, Manuela's confidential companion, and an accidental flirtation between Manuela and Herr Kirchwasser, a German tourist, is used as a subterfuge to deceive Don Inigo as to the identity of his daughter's lover. Inigo endeavors to force Kirchwasser to marry Manuela, but Babette having drugged Inigo's soldiers, Don Ramón, assisted by Gonçalves and his brigand band, effects the rescue of Manuela, and Kirchwasser and his servant Daniel are captured by Gonçalves and held for ransom. Don Ramón and Manuela having been married, Inigo demands that Gonçalves shall deliver up the young couple. To avoid bloodshed Babette and Kirchwasser disguised as the two lovers are sent under escort to Inigo's fortress, where, upon discovering the cheat, Inigo sentences Kirchwasser and Daniel to death. They are, however, rescued in the nick of time by Don Ramón, who at the head of his brigand allies defeats Inigo and captures the fortress, being chosen governor to succeed Inigo; whereupon Kirchwasser marries Babette and the two lovers are re-united.

HAD A BETTER REMEDY.

Druggist—What! Didn't you find Joram's Hair Remover effective?

Customer—Rather so, but I have a better remedy at home.

Druggist—What do you call it.

Customer—My wife.

HE USED BIG WORDS.

Lawyer—Well, proceed.

Witness—The plaintiff resorted to an ingenious use of circumstantial evidence——

The Judge (interrupting)—For the benefit of the jury, state in plainer language exactly what you mean by that.

Witness—Well, my exact meaning is—that he lied!

HOW TO BE BEAUTIFUL.

It was the talisman of the ex-Empress Eugenie, the secret of the famous Mrs. Langtry, and the goddess of the fair Lillian Russell, and a source of joy to thousands of others.

Improved Auburnine, for coloring any shade of blond, gray or faded hair to that beautiful Titian red. If your hair or beard is turning gray, you have a preparation that will not rub or wash off, and cannot be detected. It is odorless, clean, lasting and perfectly harmless; price, $3.00, $1.50 and $1.00 per bottle.

Rose Leaves, indelible tint for lips and face, soft as the blush of the rose, $1.00 and $1.50 per bottle.

Thousands of ladies all over the world owe their beautiful appearance to these preparations.

LADIES' AND CHILDREN'S HAIR-CUTTING, SHAMPOOING, BLEACHING and DYEING a specialty; 30 expert artists constantly in attendance.

All complexion bleaches outdone by L. SHAW'S special cream and "Bloom of Coconut Paint, which has stood the test for 30 years so gloriously.

Railway Old Lady (to grocer)—I guess you may gimme another sheet of fly paper, same as I got yistiddy.

Grocer—Yes'm; I s'pose you found it very effective?

Railway Old Lady—Not very. I hadn't got it sot more'n five minutes 'fore a skeeter came in, got his foot stuck, an' flew away with it.

A STARTLING ANNOUNCEMENT.

Butler (at a fancy dress ball, who has been told to announce people, by the characters they represent, to new arrivals)—What character?

Ladies—Oh, no particular character.

Butler (at the top of his voice)—Two ladies of no character in particular.

Eastern Man (writing home from the Far West)—The rush of business in the glorious West is simply marvelous—things move like lightning. I stepped into a real estate office on my arrival to buy a lot, and they made out the receipt and filled out the deed in exactly three minutes.

Same Man (writing home five years later)—I'll come back as soon as I can sell my lot. I have been trying to sell it for four years now, and I think a few years more will find a customer.

HE WOULD SEE TO USING IT.

Miss Divinely Affiated—Mr. Editor, I have brought you a little poem, entitled "Though Lost to Sight, to Memory Dear."

Editor—Thanks, miss. It is a dear little poem, and shall fulfill its mission.

"Good-day, sir."

"Good-day, miss."

SELF-POSSESSED.

Some men never lose their presence of mind. A Milwaukee man threw his mother-in-law out of a window in the fifth story of a burning building, and carried a feather bed down stairs in his arms.

A bald-headed man had a lot of rabbits painted on his pate. It resembled a show-cage, but he said they looked like hares.

A wicked man in Davenport, being on his death-bed, wished to consult some proper person regarding his future state, and his friends sent a fire insurance agent to him.

PRESS CRITICISMS.

N. Y. Herald.—A charming, graceful waltz.

N. Y. World.—The latest musical composition by Rudolph Aronson is called "ALMA." It is a Spanish Waltz, and is full of tuneful, bright parts that will command attention and admiration. Aside from its melody the measure is entrancing, especially to lovers of the waltz.

N. Y. Times.—A melodious, vigorous, and well scored composition.

Morning Journal.—A bright, sparkling waltz.

"Alma" is the most charming Waltz ever composed by Rudolph Aronson; can be obtained at all Music Stores.

Mr. FAHR, of Messrs. Schmer & Co., informed our representative that the demand for the "Schmer" Pianos is an extraordinary one, and that many of our best musicians are now purchasing them for their own use.

We take pleasure to call the attention of our friends that Messrs. Bloomingdale Bros. are offering School Supplies at great inducements.

There is no remedy for dyspepsia and indigestion like that of Dr. Jensen's Tablets; it is important to observe the direction not to take them less than one-half hour after meals.

The Hoffman House Turkish and Russian Baths, 7 West 24th Street, are the most fashionable and finest in the city.

"Martha Washington Gavotte," composed by Rudolph Aronson, can be obtained at principal music stores. The following extract was taken from the New York Herald: "Musicians who have examined this delightful little work of an American composer, declare that it has great merit."

Do you know why Ferris Bros. keep their new factory running at full time right through what is called the dull season? Simply because there is a constantly increasing demand for the "Good Sense" Corset Waist. Its reputation is established.

Lily d'Or, the new exquisite perfume, is used by our best people and is a great favorite with the ladies. It is delicate and lasting. Our best druggists sell it.

THE

GRAND DUCHESS

ARGUMENT.

The Grand Duchess of Gerolstein, having been for the major portion of her twenty-three years of existence under the tutelage of Baron Puck, an aged and mustybrained courtier, pines for an affinity, and finds him in the person of Fritz, a private soldier in her regiment of grenadiers.

Fritz is, however, betrothed to Wanda, a village maiden, and the Duchess, with a view of winning him from his rustic bride, raises the young grenadier by rapid promotion to the rank of Commander-in-Chief, supplanting General Boum.

The latter, seeking revenge, joins forces with Baron Puck and Prince Paul, an unsuccessful suitor for the Duchess' hand, and the three conspire to assassinate Fritz. The Duchess, in a rage at her failure to win Fritz from Wanda, joins the conspiracy, but is won from her purpose and led to give her hand to Prince Paul through the eloquent intercession of the Prince's emissary, Baron Grog.

Boum and Puck obtain revenge upon Fritz through a series of practical jokes, which render the young grenadier ridiculous. Whereupon Fritz, who has married Wanda, is, at his own request, reduced to the ranks and discharged from the service, and General Boum is restored to his position of Commander-in-Chief.

PRESS COMMENTS.

N. Y. Herald.—A great success.

N. Y. World.—The best production that has ever been made in this house of successful runs.

N. Y. Times.—Put on the stage in a truly brilliant style.

N. Y. Tribune.—It made an unchallenged success.

N. Y. Sun.—"The Grand Duchess" will run long. * * *

Morning Journal.—The success of the opera was positive.

Star.—It may well be doubted if "The Grand Duchess" ever had a more brilliant setting forth.

Press.—"The Grand Duchess" well received.

Courrier des Etats-Unis.—A very brilliant success.

Staats-Zeitung.—All previous productions completely placed in the shade.

Evening World.—The most gorgeous production that the Casino has ever made.

Evening Telegram.—"The Grand Duchess" is sure to run far into the summer. It is a splendid production.

Evening Sun.—Will have a long and prosperous reign.

Mail and Express.—There can be no doubt of a long continued run.

Commercial Advertiser.—More effective than any other former comic opera.

Post.—An entertaining performance, which evoked round after round of applause.

News.—As great a success as the Casino has yet seen.

Truth.—The latest production at the Casino is its greatest.

BEAUTY: HOW ACQUIRED.
The principal tale-bearer of age is the skin of the human face. To regain a youthful appearance we must scale this outer skin off and form a new skin entire. Mme. A. Ruppert's world-renowned Face Bleach does this without injury or harmful effect. One bottle $2; 3 bottles (usually required to clear the complexion) $5, sent to any address. Call at office and see young girl with one side of her face cleared and other side as was originally, showing vast change, or send 4c. postage for full particulars. Mme. A. RUPPERT, No. 6 East 14th St., New York, or 13 West 42d St., New York, or 479 Fulton St., Brooklyn.

A BEAUTY OF THE FUTURE.

They were discussing the joys of matrimony the other night at the Union Club.

"Well," said Jones, meditatively, "looking at her merely in a cold and unimaginative way, my wife is not a beauty; but she will be when her father dies."

HE WAS NOT REFINED.

"Although young Dejons will have millions when his uncle dies, he is a very unrefined man."

"Yes, he's a regular pirate."

"A pirate?"

"Yes—a coarse heir."

Husband—Well, since your ambition is a laudable one, I don't know as I can have any objection, then.

A LAUGHABLE EVENT.

A very laughable event occurred one evening recently at the residence of a newly married pair in this city. The husband being in Boston and not expected home until the theatre train at midnight, the bride and some friends, who had dropped in to pass the evening, thought it would be great fun to have some table tippings and spirit rappings. The first question was asked by the young wife, "Where is my husband?" and the dreadful raps spelt out the letters, "D-r-u-n-k." The climax was reached a few minutes after when a telegram came from the absent husband reading as follows: "Dear E.—Have missed the train and will not be home until to-morrow morning."

"Alma" is the most charming Waltz ever composed by Rudolph Aronson; can be obtained at all Music Stores.

Mr. FAHR, of Messrs. Sohmer & Co., informed our representative that the demand for the "Sohmer" Pianos is an extraordinary one, and that many of our best musicians are now purchasing them for their own use.

We take pleasure to call the attention of our friends that Messrs. Bloomingdale Bros. are offering School Supplies at great inducements.

There is no remedy for dyspepsia and indigestion like that of Dr. Jensen's Tablets; it is important to observe the direction not to take them less than one-half hour after meals.

THE

GRAND DUCHESS

ARGUMENT.

The Grand Duchess of Gerolstein, having been for the major portion of her twenty-three years of existence under the tutelage of Baron Puck, an aged and musty-brained courtier, pines for an affinity, and finds him in the person of Fritz, a private soldier in her regiment of greuadiers.

Fritz is, however, betrothed to Wanda, a village maiden, and the Duchess, with a view of winning him from his rustic bride, raises the young grenadier by rapid promotion to the rank of Commander-in-Chief, supplanting General Boum.

The latter, seeking revenge, joins forces with Baron Puck and Prince Paul, an unsuccessful suitor for the Duchess' hand, and the three conspire to assassinate Fritz. The Duchess, in a rage at her failure to win Fritz from Wanda, joins the conspiracy, but is won from her purpose and led to give her hand to Prince Paul through the eloquent intercession of the Prince's emissary, Baron Grog.

Boum and Puck obtain revenge upon Fritz through a series of practical jokes, which render the young grenadier ridiculous. Whereupon Fritz, who has married Wanda, is, at his own request, reduced to the ranks and discharged from the service, and General Boum is restored to his position of Commander-in-Chief.

A BEAUTY OF THE FUTURE.

They were discussing the joys of matrimony the other night at the Union Club.

"Well," said Jones, meditatively, "looking at her merely in a cold and unimaginative way, my wife is not a beauty; but she will be when her father dies."

HE WAS NOT REFINED.

"Although young Dejons will have millions when his uncle dies, he is a very unrefined man."

"Yes, he's a regular pirate."

A LAUDABLE AMBITION.

Society Woman—Yes, I have decided to go upon the stage.

Husband—But, my dear, the stage does not need any more elevating.

Society Woman—I am not going on with an idea of elevating it.

Husband—Well, since your ambition is a laudable one, I don't know as I can have any objection, then.

A LAUGHABLE EVENT.

A very laughable event occurred one evening recently at the residence of a newly married pair in this city. The husband being in Boston and not expected home until the theatre train at midnight, the bride and some friends, who had dropped in to pass the evening, thought it would be great fun to have some table tippings and spirit rappings. The first question was asked by the young wife, "Where is my husband?" and the dreadful raps spelt out the letters, "D-r-u-n-k." The climax was reached a few minutes after when a telegram came from the absent husband reading as follows: "Dear E.—Have missed the train and will not be home until to-morrow morning."

"Alma" is the most charming Waltz ever composed by Rudolph Aronson; can be obtained at all Music Stores.

MR. FAHR, of Messrs. Sohmer & Co., informed our representative that the demand for the "Sohmer" Pianos is an extraordinary one, and that many of our best musicians are now purchasing them for their own use.

We take pleasure to call the attention of our friends that Messrs. Bloomingdale Bros. are offering School Supplies at great inducements.

There is no remedy for dyspepsia and indigestion like that of Dr. Jensen's Tablets; it is important to observe the direction not to take them less than one-half hour after meals.

THE

GRAND DUCHESS

ARGUMENT.

The Grand Duchess of Gerolstein, having been for the major portion of her twenty-three years of existence under the tutelage of Baron Puck, an aged and musty-brained courtier, pines for an affinity, and finds him in the person of Fritz, a private soldier in her regiment of greasdiers.

Fritz is, however, betrothed to Wanda, a village maiden, and the Duchess, with a view of winning him from his rustic bride, raises the young greasdier by rapid promotion to the rank of Commander-in-Chief, supplanting General Boum.

The latter, seeking revenge, joins forces with Baron Puck and Prince Paul, an unsuccessful suitor for the Duchess' hand, and the three conspire to assassinate Fritz. The Duchess, in a rage at her failure to win Fritz from Wanda, joins the conspiracy, but is won from her purpose and led to give her hand to Prince Paul through the eloquent intercession of the Prince's emissary, Baron Grog.

Boum and Puck obtain revenge upon Fritz through a series of practical jokes, which render the young greasdier ridiculous. Whereupon Fritz, who has married Wanda, is, at his own request, reduced to the ranks and discharged from the service, and General Boum is restored to his position of Commander-in-Chief.

A BEAUTY OF THE FUTURE.

They were discussing the joys of matrimony the other night at the Union Club.

"Well," said Jones, meditatively, "looking at her merely in a cold and unimaginative way, my wife is not a beauty; but she will be when her father dies."

HE WAS NOT REFINED.

"Although Young Dejonas will have millions when his uncle dies, he is a very unrefined man."

"Yes, he's a regular boor."

"A pirate?"

"Yes—a coarse heir."

A LAUDABLE AMBITION.

Society Woman—Yes, I have decided to go upon the stage.

Husband—But, my dear, the stage does not need any more elevating.

Society Woman—I am not going on with an idea of elevating it.

Husband—Well, since your ambition is a laudable one, I don't know as I can have any objection, then.

A LAUGHABLE EVENT.

A very laughable event occurred one evening recently at the residence of a newly married pair in this city. The husband being in Boston and not expected home until the theatre train at midnight, the bride and some friends, who had dropped in to pass the evening, thought it would be great fun to have some table tippings and spirit rappings. The first question was asked by the young wife, "Where is my husband?" and the dreadful raps spelt out the letters, "D-r-u-n-k." The climax was reached a few minutes after when a telegram came from the absent husband reading as follows: "Dear E.—Have missed the train and will not be home until to-morrow morning."

"Alma" is the most charming Waltz ever composed by Rudolph Aronson; can be obtained at all Music Stores.

Mr. FARR, of Messrs. Sohmer & Co., informed our representative that the demand for the "Sohmer" Pianos is an extraordinary one, and that many of our best musicians are now purchasing them for their own use.

We take pleasure to call the attention of our friends that Messrs. Bloomingdale Bros. are offering School Supplies at great inducements.

There is no remedy for dyspepsia and indigestion like that of Dr. Jensen's Tablets; it is important to observe the direction not to take them less than one-half hour after meals.

The Brigands.

THE ARGUMENT.

Falsacappa, chief of a ricberche band of Italian brigands, has a lovely daughter, Fiorella. A young farmer, Fragoletto, having met and fallen in love with Fiorella, during a professional visit of the brigands to his house, led by his infatuation, joins the robber band, and in proof of his courage, waylays and captures the courier of the Duke of Mantua. The Duke, in the absence of the brigands, strays into their camp, and is assisted to escape by Fiorella. Falsacappa learns from papers in possession of the captured courier that the Princess of Grenada, betrothed to the Duke, is on her way to his palace. The brigand chief decides to intercept, at a wayside inn, the Princess and the escort sent to receive her, and having substituted a portrait of Fiorella for that of the Princess (whom the Duke has never seen) and returned the papers found upon the courier, the latter is allowed to go upon his way. The brigands, led by Falsacappa, visit the inn, secure the landlord and his servants, and assuming their characters, receive and imprison in the inn both the Princess and the escort sent by the Duke to receive her. Disguising themselves as the Princess and her party, the bandits then repair to the Duke's palace, with the ultimate intention of receiving the dowry due the Princess, but their design is frustrated by the timely arrival of the real Princess and her retinue. The Duke, however, in graitude to Fiorella for having saved his life, at her intercession, and upon promise of reformation, permits the bandits to depart in peace.

THE BRIGANDS.

PRESS COMMENTS.

World.—Judging from the reception accorded last evening, another long run may be predicted.

Times.—The performance far better than the original production.

Herald.—Lillian Russell looked more than usually charming; she sang brilliautly and acted with sufficient spirit.

Journal.—Welcomed home again with flowers and plentiful applause.

Tribune.—The whole performance was sufficiently entertaining to make it likely that the operetta will again fill the Casino for some time to come.

Star.—The pleasure of the audience was as pronounced as it was night after night six months ago.

Sun.—Received a popular welcome that was as generous as that accorded at its first performance.

Evening Telegram.—"The Brigands" warmly welcomed at their old home.

Evening World.—Revived with a great deal of success.

Evening Sun.—Go and see "The Brigands" again. You will spend a cheerful evening.

Post.—A much better performance than before, and if last night's enthusiasm is any evidence of long-continued favor, it is in for a run.

Commercial Advertiser.—There was a dash and a go and a brilliancy about the whole performance which should insure it a further long run.

News.—It will have a goodly run.

Staats-Zeitung.—"The Brigands" is here again, and will no doubt remain at the Casino until summer.

Mail and Express.—The audience was large and enthusiastic, and "The Brigands" will probably have a long and successful run at the Casino.

SHE PROMISED TO PAY.

A four-year-old tot invited three older playmates into an ice-cream saloon, where she magnificently ordered four plates of cream. When the delectable food had been eaten she calmly proceeded to walk out of the place without paying for it. The proprietor stopped her. Looking up into his face in the most innocent manner, she lisped, "I ain't got any money, sir. I'll pay you when I'm married."

LAUGHTER.

Laughter is the great safety-valve of the human engine. It is queer how many different ways people laugh. The drunken man, for instance, laughs with his eyes. (Omit flowers, please). A great deal of character lies in a laugh. Only last week a man with whom we have long been familiar quite startled us by breaking into a loud guffaw, which came manifestly from the heart, and yet which we have never heard before. His stylographic pen had worked for the first time in eight months. Thus it is seen that perhaps in many a heart a sweet angel slumbers unseen until some happy moment awakens it.

Our national characteristic is smiling. When two Americans meet the first thing they do is to "smile." There are occasions, however, when it is not safe to smile—when your wife has hit her finger with a tack-hammer, for instance.

Ella Wheeler Wilcox sings "Laugh and the world laughs with you." Yes, very true; and slip up on a banana peel, and the world, or at least all within twenty yards of you, laugh at you.—Texas Siftings.

"VAN HOUTEN'S COCOA

BEST & GOES FARTHEST."

The Original and, ever since its invention, Best of all Cocoas.

HIGHEST AWARDS IN THE PRINCIPAL EXHIBITIONS.

Being very strong and nutritious, this cocoa is cheaper and more satisfying than tea.

Tea and coffee, it is now certain, cannot be considered as articles of food.

Cocoa, however, is both a stimulant and a nourisher, and has the great advantage of leaving no injurious effects on the nervous system.

Raw cocoa, it is true, and all cocoa and chocolate manufactured in the ordinary way, are difficult of digestion, their flavor and aroma also being very imperfect.

But these defects were obviated by the invention of the "Pure Soluble Cocoa" in powder by the founder of this firm.

It is acknowledged by the most eminent doctors and analysts that by the special treatment which Van Houten's Cocoa has undergone, the solubility of the flesh-forming constituents is increased by fifty per cent., while the whole of the tissues are softened and rendered more palatable and digestible.

The consequence is that the most valuable elements—which otherwise are largely wasted—may be easily assimilated by the most delicate invalids or children; the delicious flavor and aroma natural to cocoa—but which, without this treatment are not perceptible—are most highly developed, and the great solubility renders the making of the cocoa extremely simple.

Van Houten's cocoa is thus stimulating and invigorating. Even when made weak, it is a delicious beverage, and is then much cheaper than tea or coffee.

No wonder, therefore, that in all parts of the world Van Houten's Cocoa is recommended by medical men instead of tea or coffee or other cocoas and chocolates, for daily family use by children and adults, hale and sick, rich and poor.

The great success of Van Houten's Cocoa has led to many imitations, but it is generally admitted, and a comparison will easily prove, that none of them equals the inventor's in solubility, agreeable taste, and nutritive qualities.

The Brigands.

THE ARGUMENT.

Falsacappa, chief of a récherche band of Italian brigands, has a lovely daughter, Fiorella. A young farmer, Fragoletto, having met and fallen in love with Fiorella, during a professional visit of the brigands to his house, led by his infatuation, joins the robber band, and in proof of his courage, waylays and captures the courier of the Duke of Mantua. The Duke, in the absence of the brigands, strays into their camp, and is assisted to escape by Fiorella. Falsacappa learns from papers in possession of the captured courier that the Princess of Grenada, betrothed to the Duke, is on her way to his palace. The brigand chief decides to intercept, at a wayside inn, the Princess and the escort sent to receive her, and having substituted a portrait of Fiorella for that of the Princess (whom the Duke has never seen) and returned the papers found upon the courier, the latter is allowed to go upon his way. The brigands, led by Falsacappa, visit the inn, secure the landlord and his servants, and assuming their characters, receive and imprison in the inn both the Princess and the escort sent by the Duke to receive her. Disguising themselves as the Princess and her party, the bandits then repair to the Duke's palace, with the ultimate intention of receiving the dowry due the Princess, but their design is frustrated by the timely arrival of the real Princess and her retinue. The Duke, however, in gratitude to Fiorella for having saved his life, at her intercession, and upon promise of reformation, permits the bandits to depart in peace.

THE BRIGANDS.

PRESS COMMENTS.

World.—Judging from the reception accorded last evening, another long run may be predicted.

Times.—The performance far better than the original production.

Herald.—Lillian Russell looked more than usually charming; she sang brilliantly and acted with sufficient spirit.

Journal.—Welcomed home again with flowers and plentiful applause.

Tribune.—The whole performance was sufficiently entertaining to make it likely that the operetta will again fill the Casino for some time to come.

Star.—The pleasure of the audience was as pronounced as it was night after night six months ago.

Sun.—Received a popular welcome that was as generous as that accorded at its first performance.

Evening Telegram.—"The Brigands" warmly welcomed at their old home.

Evening World.—Revived with a great deal of success.

Evening Sun.—Go and see "The Brigands" again. You will spend a cheerful evening.

Post.—A much better performance than before, and if last night's enthusiasm is any evidence of long-continued favor, it is in for a run.

Commercial Advertiser.—There was a dash and a go and a brilliancy about the whole performance which should insure it a further long run.

News.—It will have a goodly run.

Staats-Zeitung.—"The Brigands" is here again, and will no doubt remain at the Casino until summer.

Mail and Express.—The audience was large and enthusiastic, and "The Brigands" will probably have a long and successful run at the Casino.

DION BOUCICAULT.

Dion Boucicault contributes a noteworthy paper to the January ARENA, entitled, "Spots on the Sun." It is a criticism of Shakespeare, and will doubtless call forth comment. No lover of the drama should fail to read it.

WHIMS OF WOMEN.

A man never forgives his wife for having kin, unless they are rich or distinguished.

The strength of a young lady's opposition to smoking depends upon whether it is her brother or some other young man.

The ARENA, the New Boston Review, bids fair to lead the great Magazines of the day. Three large editions of the December number have been sold. The January issue is exceedingly attractive, containing papers from the pens of Col. Robt. G. Ingersoll, Dion Boucicault, Louis Tychette (the Poet Laureate of Canada), Joaquin Miller, W. H. H. Murray, and many other brilliant thinkers.

SHE PROMISED TO PAY.

A four-year-old tot invited three older playmates into an ice-cream saloon, where she magnificently ordered four plates of cream. When the delectable food had been eaten she calmly proceeded to walk out of the place without paying for it. The proprietor stopped her. Looking up into his face in the most innocent manner, she lisped, "I ain't got any money, sir. I'll pay you when I'm married."

POOR FELLOW.

Friend: "What's the matter? You look as if you were in a bad humor."

Chronic Kicker: "I am in a bad humor, and I have cause for it."

"What is it?"

"This morning something occurred to worry me, but I was interrupted, and I have not been able all day long to remember what it was."

"I shall not marry Miss Croesus, after all," announced young Bjenkins sadly. "Her family seems to oppose the match too much."

"Hang the family!" exclaimed a sympathizing friend. "Go in and win, Bjenkins, just the same. What do you care for the family's opinion, so long as the girl is willing?"

"That's just it," exclaimed Bjonkins, still more sadly. "Miss Croesus seems to agree with them."

Van Swell: 'Oh, no, you'd better hang on to my cane so that I can let go in case you are."

LAUGHTER.

Laughter is the great safety-valve of the human engine. It is queer how many different ways people laugh. The drunken man, for instance, laughs with his eyes. (Omit flowers, please). A great deal of character lies in a laugh. Only last week a man with whom we have long been familiar quite startled us by breaking into a loud guffaw, which came manifestly from the heart, and yet which we have never heard before. His stylographic pen had worked for the first time in eight months. Thus it is seen that perhaps in many a heart a sweet angel slumbers unseen until some happy moment awakens it.

Our national characteristic is smiling. When two Americans meet the first thing they do is to "smile." There are occasions, however, when it is not safe to smile—when your wife has hit her finger with a tack-hammer, for instance.

Ella Wheeler Wilcox sings "Laugh and the world laughs with you." Yes, very true; and slip up on a banana peel, and the world, or at least all within twenty yards of you, laugh at you.—Texas Siftings.

"VAN HOUTEN'S COCOA

BEST & GOES FARTHEST."

The Original and, ever since its invention, Best of all Cocoas.

HIGHEST AWARDS IN THE PRINCIPAL EXHIBITIONS.

Being very strong and nutritious, this cocoa is cheaper and more satisfying than tea.

Tea and coffee, it is now certain, cannot be considered as articles of food.

Cocoa, however, is both a stimulant and a nourisher, and has the great advantage of leaving no injurious effects on the nervous system.

Raw cocoa, it is true, and all cocoa and chocolate manufactured in the ordinary way, are difficult of digestion, their flavor and aroma also being very imperfect.

But these defects were obviated by the invention of the "Pure Soluble Cocoa" in powder by the founder of this firm.

It is acknowledged by the most eminent Doctors and analysts that by the special treatment which Van Houten's Cocoa has undergone, the solubility of the flesh-forming constituents is increased by fifty per cent., while the whole of the tissues are softened and rendered more palatable and digestible.

The consequence is that the most valuable elements—which otherwise are largely wasted—may be easily assimilated by the most delicate invalids or children; the delicious flavor and aroma natural to cocoa—but which, without this treatment are not perceptible—are most highly developed, and the great solubility renders the making of the cocoa extremely simple.

Van Houten's cocoa is thus stimulating and invigorating. Even when made weak, it is a delicious beverage, and is then much cheaper than tea or coffee.

No wonder, therefore, that in all parts of the world Van Houten's Cocoa is recommended by medical men instead of tea or coffee or other cocoas and chocolates, for daily family use by children and adults, hale and sick, rich and poor.

The great success of Van Houten's Cocoa has led to many imitations, but it is generally admitted, and a comparison will easily prove, that none of them equals the inventor's in solubility, agreeable taste, and nutritive qualities.

EUGEN D'ALBERT TO WILLIAM KNABE & CO.
(Translated from the German.)

During my sojourn here I had frequent opportunities to make myself acquainted with the Knabe pianos, and from fullest conviction I declare them to be the best instruments of America. Should I return here for artistic purposes—which may be the case very soon—I shall most certainly use the pianos of this celebrated make. I give this testimonial with pleasure, voluntarily, and entirely unsolicited for by the house of Knabe.

THE BRAZILIAN.

ARGUMENT.

Don Inigo Sebastiano, governor by usurpation of a small Brazilian province, has a daughter Manuela, whose lover, Don Ramón, is bent upon the double purpose of marrying Manuela and overthrowing Don Inigo. They are aided by Babette, Manuela's confidential companion, and an accidental flirtation between Manuela and Herr Kirchwasser, a German tourist, is used as a subterfuge to deceive Don Inigo as to the identity of his daughter's lover. Inigo endeavors to force Kirchwasser to marry Manuela, but Babette having drugged Inigo's soldiers, Don Ramón, assisted by Gonçalves and his brigand band, effects the rescue of Manuela, and Kirchwasser and his servant Daniel are captured by Gonçalves and held for ransom. Don Ramón and Manuela having been married, Inigo demands that Gonçalves shall deliver up the young couple. To avoid bloodshed Babette and Kirchwasser disguised as the two lovers are sent under escort to Inigo's fortress, where, upon discovering the chest, Inigo sentences Kirchwasser and Daniel to death. They are, however, rescued in the nick of time by Don Ramón, who at the head of his brigand allies defeats Inigo and captures the fortress, being chosen governor to succeed Inigo; whereupon Kirchwasser marries Babette and the two lovers are re-united.

PRESS COMMENTS.

N. Y. World.—The Brazilian should, and doubtless will, run all summer. In the elaborateness of its production it will rank with any opera ever given at the Casino.

N. Y. Herald.—Marie Halton appeared fresh as a rose. The "Cigarette Song" ought to become popular.

N. Y. Times.—Will crowd the Casino all summer.

N. Y. Tribune.—A numerous assemblage witnessed the new production, and applauded the stage pictures.

N. Y. Sun.—Nothing better has been seen in this city for many months Should draw remunerative audiences until the fall season sets in.

Morning Journal.—Brilliant costumes; an amusing plot; bright music.

Star.—The music is bright and catchy.

Mirror.—The costumes and scenery are gorgeous, and the groupings picturesquely beauiful.

Press.—Seemed to catch the fancy of the critical public. Will enjoy a long and popular run.

Evening Telegram.—Full of color and briskness.

Mail and Express.—Amusing and attractive.

Evening Sun.—The costumes are handsome and picturesque; the scenery artistic. Marie Halton sang with taste and discretion.

Evening Graphic.—Will undoubtedly become popular and have a long run.

News.—The opera is all action and is in for a summer run.

Staats Zeitung.—The score fully equals that of Nadjy and Falka by the same composer. The performance left nothing further to wish for.

Courrier des Etats-Unis.—Marie Halton made a great success in the "Cigarette Song."

Post.—Will prove a great attraction and fill the Casino for many successive nights.

Truth.—Will enjoy a popular run.

Home Journal.—A permanent attraction for the summer months.

PATIENT—Well, doctor, what do you think about the swelling on the back of my neck?

DOCTOR—I don't like the looks of it. as it is in a very dangerous place, so my advice to you is to keep your eye on it.

MODERN.

MRS. FASH—(turning on the steps of the steam-car) My dear, I will write to you—that is, if I find it tiresome at the springs.

MR. FASH—And if you enjoy yourself?

MRS. FASH—Oh, you will learn of it from the newspapers.

EVASIVE.

"Did you mail that letter I gave you this morning, dear?"

"Yes, no; what if I did? I shouldn't wonder, come to think, why, to be sure, certainly, of course. What have you got for dinner?"

HIS PRESENT.

Sweet Girl—Mother, George told me solemnly that that pretty hair-pin holder he gave me cost five dollars; yet to-day I saw exactly the same kind on sale for ten cents.

Mother—You know, my dear, George is very religious. Most likely he bought that at a church fair.

HOW TO BE BEAUTIFUL. All complexion blues are outdone by L. SHAW'S world-renowned "FACE BLEACH" or Coconut Balm, which has stood the test for 30 years so gloriously that it is a household word. It was the talisman of the ex-Empress Eugenie, the secret of the famous Mrs. Langtry, and the goddess of the fair Lillian Russell, and a source of joy to thousands of others.

Improved Auburnine, for coloring any shade of bleached, gray or faded hair to that beautiful Titian red. It is odorless, clean, lasting and perfectly harmless, price, $1.00, $1.50 and $2.00 per bottle.

Extract of Turkish Rose Leaves, indelible tint for lips and face, soft as the blush of the rose, $1.00 and $1.50 per bottle.

LADIES' AND CHILDREN'S HAIR-CUTTING, SHAMPOOING, BLEACHING and DYEING a specialty; 30 expert artists constantly in attendance.

Rahway Old Lady (to grocer)—I guess you may gimme another sheet of fly paper, same as I got yistiddy.

Grocer—Yes'm; I s'pose you found it very effective?

Rahway Old Lady—Not very. I hadn't got it sot more'n five minutes 'fore a skeeter came in, got his feet stuck, an' flew away with it.

A STARTLING ANNOUNCEMENT.

Butler (at a fancy dress ball, who has been told to announce people by the characters they represent, to new arrivals)—What character?

Ladies—Oh, no particular character.

Butler (at the top of his voice)—Two ladies of no character in particular.

Eastern Man (writing home from the Far West)—The rush of business in the glorious West is simply marvelous—things move like lightning. I stepped into a real estate office on my arrival to buy a lot, and they made out the receipt and filled out the deed in exactly three minutes.

Same Man (writing home five years later)—I'll come back as soon as I can sell my lot. I have been trying to sell it for four years now, and I think a few years more will find a customer.

HE WOULD SEE TO USING IT.

Miss Divinely Affiated—Mr. Editor, I have brought you a little poem, entitled "Though Lost to Sight, to Memory Dear."

Editor—Thanks, miss. It is a dear little poem, and shall fulfill its mission.

"Good-day, sir."

"Good-day, miss."

SELF-POSSESSED.

Some men never lose their presence of mind. A Milwaukee man threw his mother-in-law out of a window in the fifth story of a burning building, and carried a feather bed down stairs in his arms.

A bald headed man had a lot of rabbits painted on his pate. It resembled a show-cage, but he said they looked like hares.

A wicked man in Davenport, being on his death-bed, wished to consult some proper person regarding his future state, and his friends sent a fire insurance agent to him.

PERFORMED WITH GREAT SUCCESS BY

THEODORE THOMAS' ORCHESTRA

PRESS CRITICISMS.

N. Y. Herald.—A charming, graceful waltz.

N. Y. World.—The latest musical composition by Rudolph Aronson is called "ALMA." It is a Spanish Waltz, and is full of tuneful, bright parts that will command attention and admiration. Aside from its melody the measure is entrancing, especially to lovers of the waltz.

N. Y. Times.—A melodious, vigorous, and well scored composition.

Morning Journal.—A bright, sparkling waltz.

Cafe open down stairs.

"Alma" is the most charming Waltz ever composed by Rudolph Aronson; can be obtained at all Music Stores.

Mr. Fahr, of Messrs. Schmer & Co., informed our representative that the demand for the "Schmer" Pianos is an extraordinary one, and that many of our best musicians are now purchasing them for their own use.

We take pleasure to call the attention of our friends that Messrs. Bloomingdale Bros. are offering School Supplies at great inducements.

There is no remedy for dyspepsia and indigestion like that of Dr. Jensen's Tablets; it is important to observe the direction not to take them less than one-half hour after meals.

"The World," Nov. 18th, 1892: "In London, Cheiro was the rage, and read the hands of everybody who was anybody, including the Queen. The aggregate of his hand-reading up to date is 10,000.

People often say to us, "Do you really make your own candies, fruit juices for soda, bread, pastry, etc., etc.?" We answer, yes; not only that, but, unlike other places, we preserve all fruits used for the table of pies in glass jars, using absolutely nothing but sugar in preserving fruits, fruit juices, jams and jellies. The practice of using poisonous acids or alcohols in preserving fruits and fruit juices used on the table or for soda is almost universal. We don't believe in it, and all foods and drinks offered to our guests are absolutely pure and healthful. The public take no risk in the large patronage bestowed on the Columbia Dairy Kitchen 48 East 14th Street, Union Square.

TEACHER.—How do you spell Piano, my young friend?

PUPIL.—(sotto voce) That's an easy one. (aloud) S-O-H-M-E-R; Sohmer.

TEACHER.—Correct; go to the head of the class. This little incident teaches us that if we would go to the head of the class—no matter which one—we should be way up in spelling. If you want to buy a Piano, and if you want the best, be sure that the name on it spells S-O-H-M-E-R; that no other instrument are united all the virtues that make a Piano worth having. Remember that "The Best Piano" and "The Sohmer" are synonymous terms.—From Puck's Library.

PIANOS.—From a standpoint of practical business policy Messrs. Decker Brothers have always used the highest grade only of material and workmanship, realizing that the manufacture of instruments that would always give perfect satisfaction was the surest way of gaining and retaining the patronage of the public. The real worth of a piano can be established only by actual test. Every good piano will tell others of the same make; every poor piano will prevent the purchase of many others. Therefore, Messrs. Decker Brothers make only the best. The head of the firm, who is an acknowledged expert, devotes his entire personal attention to the manufacturing department. Messrs. Decker Brothers have no desire to compete in prices with manufacturers of "cheap" pianos—this point should be distinctly understood—but they realize that they must offer their goods at the lowest figures that are compatible with fine workmanship. Those who can appreciate a refined instrument and are willing to pay a fair price for it, find, therefore, upon investigation that the Decker Brothers' Piano is really the cheapest piano in the end. It will be well to remember in purchasing a piano that a so-called "cheap" piano always proves to be a poor and high-priced piano. The only guarantee that the purchaser of a piano has lies in the reputation of the maker for first-class work. It is up in their reputation that Messrs. Decker Brothers base their claim to be considered as the one firm whose product is uniformly of the highest grade.

"Seeing is Believing."

You can light "The New Rochester" without removing the chimney.

To improve upon and add to the best is not an easy thing to do, but in making the New Rochester Lamp, that is what has been done. It is a marvel of perfection, indeed, and to see it will impress this one truth: The best Lamp on Earth. The choicest bric-a-brac in the palace of a Vanderbilt reveals nothing higher.

Ladies often like to go down among the large wholesale houses and tire of feet hunts. They will find at our salesrooms the largest line in the world a rare collection of Art in lamps.—Welcome.

FISCHER PIANOS.
Established 1840. Nearly 100,000 now in use. Received Highest Award World's Fair, Chicago.
JUDGES' REPORT.
1. The TONE is Musical and Powerful, combined with a Sympathetic and Singing quality, especially marked in the GRANDS.
2. The SCALE is thoroughly even and the ACTION of the HIGHEST GRADE.
3. The TOUCH is firm, yet easy and elastic, and repeats promptly.
4. The MATERIALS used are the BEST, and superior workmanship is manifested in every detail.
5. The CASES are artistic in design, and the taste shown in the selection of woods merits special commendation.
This only confirms the opinion of the Musical Public.
THE FISCHER PIANO has kept in advance of all improvements relating to a HIGH GRADE PIANO, and stands to-day unrivaled in all its excellences of TONE, ENDURANCE, ACTION and WORKMANSHIP.

Black fabrics are rendered becoming to every complexion, as they combine handsomely with vests and accessories of any color. The immense assortment manufactured by B. Priestley & Co. renders it possible to have gowns of black fabrics suitable for every clime and season. The only colored goods made by this firm are their Cravenette Serges, all others being of black or gray. Customers will remember that when desiring only Priestly goods.

Do you wear Knox Hats?

Yes, It is an Actual Fact.—Nowhere in New York can you find such charming music, such delicious white or graham bread, tempting pastry or pies, luscious ice cream and cake, excellent tea or coffee, such pure and delicious fruit juice soda, reminding one of the nectar of the gods. In every thing else we are equal to the best. The largest and handsomest restaurant in the world. Furnished at a cost of $100,000. Seating 2,600 persons. Prices so reasonable our patrons wonder how we do it—easy enough—5,000 patrons at 2 cents net profit on each is better than 500 at 10 cents profit on each. The Columbia Dairy Kitchen, 48 East 14th Street, Union Square, is one of the sights of New York.

WINTER TOURS.
How Families go to California.

There are still many who do not know of the regular semi-monthly family excursions to California over the "Sunset Route" of the Southern Pacific Company (via New Orleans). Families, individuals or parties of friends wishing to travel together, who do not care to indulge in the luxury of a Pullman palace car, have no excuse to deny themselves the greatest treat of a lifetime in a visit to California; for, although only the second or the cheapest rate is charged, the trains are regular express trains, the sleeping cars are comfortable, have clean, fresh beddings, roomy lavatories and dressing rooms, and are kept perfectly clean and sweet. Every excursion is attended by a special agent of the Southern Pacific Company, and his sole business is to see to the wants of the passengers without any extra cost to them.

The "Sunset Route" has singular attractions for those acquainted with the charms of the South. New Orleans is one of the most interesting cities in the world. The traveler will find many strange and interesting things, and upon arriving in California, he will see its famous orange groves and beautiful vineyards and orchards all the way to San Francisco.

For further information, freight or ticket rates, free illustrated pamphlets, maps and time tables, address the following representatives of the Southern Pacific Co., who also sell tickets to Texas, Mexico, China, Japan, Australia and Honolulu:
